Mystery of Balance

Why does life put such a premium on balance?

I've been trying for years to fit junk food into a balanced diet. When I succeed in anything someone says the scales were tipped in my favor. When I fail I wasn't equal to the challenge.

This emphasis we place on balance is not an accident. Man has always been aware that God built into his creation order and stability. Without solving the whole mystery, I realize that my spiritual growth has to keep pace with my physical and intellectual development.

Worshipping each week makes for a well-balanced life.

Information in a newsletter prepared by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York indicates that for the proposed fiscal 1984 federal budget, the three biggest items take 98.9 per cent of the money. These include defense, 34.9 per cent; payments to individuals through social security, veterans benefits and retirement, 52.5 per cent; and interest on the national debt, 11.5 per cent.

That leaves 1.1 per cent for everything else — including running the White House, Congress, all farm programs, departments of commerce, interior, state and all other programs.

With the farm bill being a major issue in the congress, one would be led to believe that it would have major impact on the national budget. Not so! Despite the dollars involved, the percentage impact would be almost nothing. When 98.9 per cent of the expenditures are committed to three areas, there's not much left for farmers.

Musings Of A Duck Hunter

While duck hunters may receive a degree of satisfaction from the following essay which was reprinted recently in the Detroit Lakes newspapers, that satisfaction is not likely to be shared by their wives and almost certainly to be rejected by anyone with feminist inclinations:

As I silently stand in the marsh waiting for the gray morning light, I can't help but wonder — why am I here? Wet and cold, buffeted by a driving sleet-filled north wind that stings the face and numbs my body; and I realize that I am here becuase of a primordial urge, a complelling inner force too strong to be denied. It is the inborn command of genes passed along by eons and eons of hunters, and despite a few years of civilization, it still dominates us men. We can no more ignore it than a woman can ignore her newborn child. It is a hard destiny, but it has its rewards when one sits down at the family table during these hard times; and sees the eyes in those pinched little faces surrounding it light up with eager anticipation at the sight of the succulent, golden brown ducks on the platter.

In the age of broken homes and contentious unfulfilled women, I cannot help thinking how wise and loving a woman grandma was, and how much she and the others like her contributed to the stability and happiness of the American homes of days long gone. When grandpa came home from the hunt — cold, wet, hungry and exhausted — he merely dropped his burden of birds in the back hall and proceeded into the warm kitchen where grandma awaited him with a hot, hearty meal. While grandpa went on with the usual business of making a living, grandma picked, cleaned, and prepared the game. Where could one find such a helpmate now?

Grandma realized that while she was resting in the warm comfort of her bed, grandpa was out there suffering with the wet and cold, driven by the old, unfathomable urge to harvest nature's bounty for the family. She, unlike her modern sisters, appreciated it, and her proudest boast was that she always got up and prepared a warm breakfast for grandpa before he went hunting. How like the wisdom of the Book of Proverbs, Chapter 31: "Favor is deceitful, and beauty is vain, but a woman that feareth the Lord she shall be praised. She riseth while it is yet night and giveth meat to her household."

With such devotion and sense of duty in grandma, grandpa, of course, treated her like the precious jewel she was. Nothing was too good for her; he showered her with affection and gifts. He took her south in the winter. He sent her on a tour of Europe back before World War I. But every fall grandma was back with her sleeves rolled up doing her duty like the good soldier she was. What a woman, what a wife, no wonder she was so honored, loved and appreciated.

We hear and read so much of so many women stridently demanding to do the same work that men do; they vociferously demand to be front-line combat, infantrymen, stevedores on the docks, bricklayers, construction workers, miners, and belligerently proclaim that there is nothing a man does that they cannot do, but I personally doubt it — there isn't a woman in the whole billegerent bunch who, when asked to work alongside of her husband cleaning ducks, doesn't get the smug, self-satisfied look and say, "You shoot them, you clean them." The husband never says, "I shoot them, I clean them, I eat them and I don't share them." Hunting husbands are noble this way.

It somehow destroys your faith in the whole equal rights movement. Men and women are different. I have yet to run across two women in a duck boat. As the Bible says in Proverbs, Chapter 21: "It is better to dwell in the wilderness then with a contentious and an angry woman." But it isn't all that. Men are driven by an urge too strong to be denied to get out there in the wilderness and hunt, while women are content to stay at home in luxury and comfort. God just decided to make men and women different.

Father used to speak of the good old days when "men were men and women were washing machines," but those days seem to be gone and the old landmarks of duty and responsibility are lost and I cannot help but be sad and think of the old prophet's admonition: Proverbs, Chapter 22: "Remove not the ancient landmarks with thy fathers have set." Now I realize that father was wiser than I knew.

I guess it all boils down to when driven men suffer to get meat for the table, and women want so much to be equal, why can't they help dress and clean the ducks?

Memo From A Child

These suggestions regarding ways to deal with child behavior were published recently in a publication of the Minnesota Sunday School association:

Don't be afraid to be firm with me. I prefer it. It lets me know where I stand.

Don't use force with me. It teaches me that power is all that counts. I will respond more readily by being led.

Don't be inconsistent. That confuses me and makes me try harder to get away with everything that I can.

Don't make promises; you may not be able to keep them. That will discourage my trust in you.

Don't make me feel smaller than I am. I will make up for it by behaving like a big shot.

Don't do things for me that I can do for myself. It makes me feel like a baby, and I may continue to put you in my service.

Don't correct me in front of people. I'll take much more notice if you talk quietly with me in private.

Don't try to discuss my behavior in the heat of a conflict. For some reason my hearing is not very good at this time and my cooperation is even worse. It is all right to take the action required, but let's not talk about it until later.

Don't try to preach to me. You'd be surprised how well I know what's right and wrong.

Don't make me feel that my mistakes are sins. I have to learn to make mistakes without feeling that I am no good.

Don't nag. If you do, I shall have to protect myself by appearing deaf.

Don't demand explanations for my wrong behavior. I really don't know why I did it.

Don't tax my honesty too much. I am easily frightened into telling lies.

Don't forget that I love and use experimenting. I learn from it, so please put up with it.

Don't protect me from consequences. I need to learn from experiences.

Don't put me off when I ask honest questions. If you do, you will find that I stop asking and seek my information elsewhere.

Don't neglect to answer "silly" or seemingly meaningless questions. They may be very important to me.

Don't ever think that it is beneath your dignity to apologize to me. An honest apology makes me feel surprisingly warm toward you.

Don't worry about the little amount of time we spend together. It is how we spend it that counts.

Don't forget that I can't thrive without lots of understanding and encouragement, but I don't need to tell you that, do I?

Remember, I learn more from a model than a critic and from praise for appropriate behavior than criticism for misbehavior.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Tom and Joe were baseball nuts. When Joe died and discovered that there was baseball played in the hereafter, he arranged with St. Peter to go back and tell his friend.

"I've got good news and bad news, Tom," he said upon his return.

"Give me the good news first," Tom replied.

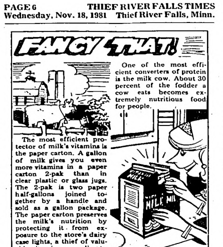
"There's baseball in heaven," Joe said.

"What's the bad news?" Tom asked.

"You're pitching tomorrow," Joe sighed.

Postman: "I'm looking for the people who live here."

Housewife: "Well, you came to the right place."



One of the most efficient converters of protein is the milk cow. About 30 percent of the fodder a cow eats becomes extremely nutritious food for people.

The most efficient protector of milk's vitamins is the paper carton. A gallon of milk gives you even more vitamins in a paper carton 2-pak than in clear plastic or glass jugs. The 2-pak is two paper half-gallons joined together by a handle and sold as a gallon package. The paper carton preserves the milk's nutrition by protecting it from exposure to the store's dairy case lights, a thief of valuable vitamins, according to scientific studies.

Gov. Quie's Column

The Components of Minnesota's Fiscal Problems

With the revised revenue forecast announcement behind us, and the task of solving our problems under way in St. Paul, one question on the minds of most Minnesotans is why a shortfall is projected for the biennium.

For the answer, we must consider several factors which collectively contributed to the $768 million deficit projected for the current biennium: unreasonably high interest rates; a depressed agriculture industry; slumping timber and taconite industries; and a national recession.

Some of these factors have impacted as many as 30 other states, causing financial troubles of varying magnitude; others are factors unique to Minnesota's economy, but important to our general economic health.

By and large, these factors are beyond our control at the state level. They are not the result of bad management, poor legislative planning for fiscal errors made by state or local units of government. They are components of an intangible economy.

While we cannot easily control the direction the economy is taking, we can understand how it works. Through this understanding, we can more readily comprehend how Minnesota has come to face this recession with the rest of the nation.

Sky-High Interest Rates Have Crippled The Nation

High interest rates are the most serious economic detriment facing the United States today. Every other economic factor pulling the nation and individual states downward hinges upon the exhorbitant interest rates.

Last week, U.S. Treasury Secretary Donald Regan was quoted as saying the final three months of this year would be a "real downer" with regard to economic activity and that the situation will continue to deteriorate into 1982. By all indications, there is no question in Regan's mind that the nation has reached a recession.

In response to the announcement, corporate demand for credit slackened and interest rates dropped to 17 per cent. This is a significant drop from 20.5 per cent in September, but still an unacceptable rate.

Why is it unacceptable? Because it discourages businesses from expanding and investing, discourages individuals from building homes and buying automobiles and cripples each individual's purchasing power. The impact of the slowdown in construction and new car purchases has been witnessed across the nation, including Minnesota.

Inventories of unsold cars have hit a record, and October's sales rate was the lowest for that month since 1958. The steel that made those cars was manufactured from taconite, and the glut on the market will mean demand for taconite will be low.

Minnesota Industry Is Hit Hard

Less taconite means less jobs. Almost 4,000 workers have been laid off by mining companies on the Range as of last week. This means fully 25 per cent of the mining industry workforce is currently unemployed.

Less construction means less demand for Minnesota timber. In spite of our natural abundance of timber, the state Department of Natural Resources estimates timber sales are down by as much as 40 per cent. The brunt of this hardship is being borne by the small, family-owned logging businesses which comprise between 90 and 95 per cent of the industry.

For these two groups of Minnesota workers, the experience of the recession is real. For the state, this means these people will not be paying income taxes and will not have the purchasing power to generate sales taxes. In both these areas, the state has suffered serious shortfalls from projections made early this year.

Agriculture Hit Hardest of All

In years past, Minnesota seemed immune from recessions affecting other states. While other industries suffered, the agriculture industry continues to prosper. This is not the case this time.

Let me list some statistics which will give you a good idea of the problems facing agriculture in Minnesota.:

— Cash received from marketing farm products in 1980 brought in just under $6.3 billion, but the costs of production totaled $7.05 billion, resulting in a $750 million loss.

— Since the 1981 crop has been planted, Minnesota farmers have lost an estimated $1 billion because almost every commodity except milk is selling below the cost of production.

— High interest payments have added to farmers' burdens. Last year, farmers paid $694 million in interest payments. This year, the figure is expected to be over $800 million. 1980 interest payments were 92 per cent higher than in 1977.

Increased costs of production, high interest rates and high yields have brought our once-strong agribusinesses to a near standstill.

According to the Minnesota Department of Revenue, agribusinesses generate as much as 30 per cent of the state's revenue. They provide 660,000 jobs, only 188,000 of which involve work directly on a farm. In other words, this industry is vital to Minnesota's overall economic health. And it's not healthy.

Comparing Minnesota To The Nation

As you can see, high interest rates have a dominant effect upon the economy. Businesses and farmers unable to borrow money to expand and meet their obligations have seen their profits eroded. Their customers, unable to spend money for their products, have left them with record-high inventories and lower prices. Workers have felt the effects of the slowdown by being asked to leave, or have found themselves without work to perform. And because the above mentioned groups do not pay taxes on money not earned or spent, the state collects less revenue and is unable to meet its obligations.

This cycle has produced the fiscal problems we now have in Minnesota, and are now working to solve. Concurrently, the president is working to solve similar problems on a national scale. It is from his efforts that we will be able to see improvement as interest rates continue to fall.

Judicious spending cuts and tax cuts which will stimulate the private sector and provide jobs will in the future bring a healthy flow of revenue into the state and national treasuries.

I am convinced that a federal fiscal program such as this will take hold and turn the national economy back to prosperity.

As we continue to discuss and propose options for balancing our own budget, I also remain optimistic that we will have equally successful results in Minnesota.

ON HIDING PARTIAL CLASPS

The basic design of the removable partial is a framework of metal with metal clasps that grip the supporting teeth and hold the appliance in the mouth. There is generally acrylic over the ridge areas (the area of missing teeth) to support the replacement teeth.

Most of the esthetic problems with a removable partial have to do with the clasps or hooks that hold it in place. Patients feel that the illusion of naturalness is defeated by the hooks that immediately indicate "removable denture".

The simplest way of overcoming this is to alter the design of the partial. Retention and stability may still be obtained with smaller, thinner clasps. Clasps can be further hidden by placing them as far back on the tooth as possible. This is a very delicate procedure, however, because if the clasp is reduced too much, it loses its function. A partial that doesn't stay in the mouth is valueless, no matter how esthetic it is. However, dentistry has come a long way in combining function with pleasing appearance in the area of dentures.

Field Bindweed, Canada Thistle Major Problems

For many local growers, field bindweed and Canada thistle present the greatest threat to good yields in small grains and other crops. Once considered minor problems, these perennial weed menances have overrun many area fields, doing serious damage to the wheat crop. Infestations of bindweed and Canada thistle are said to be on the rise in Minnesota.

According to U.S. department of agriculture statistics, infestations of Canada thistle exceeding 25 shoots per square foot can reduce yields as much as 60 per cent by depriving the crop of moisture, sunlight and nutrients. Field bindweed not only reduces yields by competing with the crop, but can also interfere with harvesting. Nicknamed "creeping jenny," bindweed plants twine around other plant stems, leading to clogged harvesting and cultivating equipment. In severe cases, field bindweed infestations have forced farmers to abandon planted fields.

Although field bindweed and Canada thistle are similar in that they are both broadleaf perennials, farmers generally don't have to cope with both weeds in the same field since each responds best to a different moisture situation according to Dr. Sheldon Blank, weed control specialist for a large chemical company. Canada thistle does best on irrigated land, and in regions which receive between 15 and 30 inches of water a year.

"Field bindweed, on the other hand, flourishes in dry areas," says Dr. Blank. "That's why the most serious bindweed problems are concentrated in a region extending from the Canadian border to the high plans of Texas. Although few wheat farmers can expect both weeds, it's almost inevitable they will have to deal with one of the other."

While Canada thistle and field bindweed are considered moderate weed problems in relation to other Minnesota weeds, Dr. Richard Behrens, professor of agronomy at the University of Minnesota, says that there are still large portions of the state where these weeds continue to thrive. "Field bindweed is a particular problem in the western region where there is a lower level of moisture, and Canada thistle — a graver problem — is found throughout Minnesota."

Field bindweed and Canada thistle are tough control challenges largely due to their dual reproductive systems. Both perennials reproduce through seeds and rootstocks or rhizomes, and it is this underground growth which creates the problem. In one season, a single Canada thistle plant can produce 10 to 12 feet of new root growth. Likewise, field bindweed has a dense root system which can plunge 20 feet below the soil surface and reach subsoil moisture not accessible to other plants. These strong, fast-growing root systems give both weeds an extraordinary ability to survive.

For years, area farmers have relied on tillage to control field bindweed and Canada thistle, only to discover later they were spreading the problem to other uninfested areas. "When a farmer runs a tillage implement through a weed-infested field, he's trying to disrupt or separate the roots and rhizomes from the parent plant in an attempt to remove their source of nutrients and moisture," explains Dr. Blank.

"But unfortunately, field bindweed and Canada thistle have very vigorous roots, capable of storing enormous amounts of food. So the root fragments ot these plants can regrow even when separated from the main plant. After the early bud stage, tillage implements serve to only spread a localized infestation across a much wider area by dragging viable fragments into uninfested fields. Because these roots are storage units, tillage can only be successful if performed very early in the season, before the roots have had the time to accumulate food reserves."

Some farmers have experimented with a combination of light tillage and post-emergence applications of herbicides on field bindweed. On Canada thistle, farmers have tried post-emergence applications of herbicides, but the results of such treatments have not been consistent.

Facing a difficult struggle with weed regrowth from underground rootstocks, an increasing number of Minnesota growers are turning to fall application of a "translocated" herbicide as part of an "integrated" approach to the problem. "Successful control depends on a combination of methods — those geared toward controlling seed distribution and germination, and those intended to check root growth," says Dr. Blank. "A herbicide that gets into the plant's vascular system moves down to the roots and controls both above and below ground growth. And, with weeds like Canada thistle and field bindweed, keeping the roots in check is more than half the battle."

The weed specialist recommends that grain growers examine their fields for Canada Thistle infestations immediately after harvest. If farmers notice an infestation, Dr. Blank suggests they leave it undisturbed for six to eight weeks to allow thistle plants to recover from harvest and resume active growth. In dry years, irrigation or rainfall one or two weeks prior to treatment will ensure that Canada thistle is actively growing. When the farmer notices new leaf growth, Canada thistle is ready for chemical control.

In semi-arid and non-irrigated firlds after wheat harvest or after tillage, bindweed should be allowed to regrow from six to eight weeks in order to produce adequate above-ground vegetation. Sufficient moisture should be available to permit the development of actively-growing green foliage with some blossoms. The bindweed should not be treated if under drought stress and thus not actively growing.

"The availability of control options today makes it easier than ever to check infestations of Canda thistle and field bindweed," maintains Dr. Behrens of the University of Minnesota. "Following up with a second control practice in the fall, such as tillage or a broadcast application of herbicide, is crucial to the success of weed control. As long as the farmer is willing to make the effort, infestations of field bindweed and Canada thistle can be controlled."

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

A Wayward Bureaucracy

Battle-scarred from his many fights with the California bureacracy, Ronald Reagan arrived in Washington fully aware of the resistence he would face from the federal establishment as he attempted to streamline government. Yet, the extent of the bureaucratic sabotage confronting President Reagan has surprised even the most seasoned Washington hands.

A President's policies, no matter how big his electoral victory, should be debated and examined by Congress and when necessary, reviewed by the courts. This is what our system of checks and balances is all about. But employees who work in the executive branch for the top administrator, the President, have a duty to carry out his policy decisions once they have been reached. Deliberate sabotage of the Presidential decision-making process by underlings should be reason enough for immediate dismissal.,

So help me, I'd say the same thing if Ted Kennedy were President and this were happening to him!

The stage was set with a midnight raid on the Treasury and an unprecendented flurry of new regulations in the closing days of the Carter administration. The most notorious case involved the Labor Department, which issued 287 grants at a cost of more than $115 million to Washington area unions, advocacy groups and consultants in the final three months of the Carter presidency. Investigations by Congress and the General Accounting Office have revealed that many of these awards were made outside the normal procedure of review, competitive bidding or evaluation of previous performance. Moreover, this last minute check-writing and rule-making locked the new administration into policies it was elected to reverse.

Once the reins of power exchanged hands, bureaucratic resistence went underground. There have been interminable and unexplainable delays in carrying out orders. Budget reductions have been extracted from services instead of bureaucratic overhead, in order to attract media attention and scare legislators from further cuts. Numerous cases have been documented in which internal memos and proposals have been leaked to the press and liberal politicians.

For example, 78 pages of internal Environmental Protection Agency documents concerning the Clean Air Act were leaked to liberal Congressmen by EPA underlings in a deliberate effort to preempt the policy alternatives under study by the administration. EPA administrator Anne Gorsuch's plans to reduce the agency's administrative costs, as directed by the President, were also leaked by job-conscious bureaucrats.

Interior Secretary James Watt has encountered similar resistance. Staff memos and working papers are frequently shared with the press and special interest lobbies in order to rally support against various proposals under consideration. John W. Grandy, executive vice president of Defenders of Wildlife, told Frank Van Riper of the New York Daily News recently, "Why just today I received three anonymous copies of the same memo from government offices in three separate parts of the country."

President Reagan's goal for many federal programs is clear: Eliminate waste, fraud, abuse, bureaucratic overhead and the non-deserving from the roles so that we can actually provide more assistance to those who truly need it. This is precisely what he accomplished with his welfare reform program in California. The number of welfare cases was reduced while the average monthly grant for the deserving was increased.

Internal debate, discussion and consideration of a broad range of policy options is as healthy in a government agency as it is in business. But once a decision has been reached, it is the responsibility of the administrators to enforce it. If their conscience prohibits them from doing so, they should have the courage to leave government and lobby for their position in full view of the public — instead of doing it behind the backs of the people we elected to office.

Four Debates Economic Conservatives may be Winning

Opinion-makers and politicians who oppose the current conservative direction of national economic policy have issued dire predictions about the misery soon to be inflicted upon millions of hapless Americans. Some even forecast riots in the streets by next summer — all because Ronald Reagan would allow the 1982 budget to increase only by $59 billion instead of the $89 billion that had been planned by the previous administration !

Yet, a look at the track record of these critics on the major public debates of recent years should convince most Americans that "wolf!" has been cried once too often.

For example, remember the calamity that was predicted for California if voters passed Proposition 13, the measure that slashed property taxes in 1978? Amidst other horror stories, the UCLA business school forecast an 80 per cent drop in the state's job growth. What acturally happened? Reader's Digest reports that while 103,000 state and local government jobs were eliminated, largely through attrition, 552,000 new private sector jobs have been created since 1978. A UCLA economist admitted : "I was one who predicted that California would fall into the ocean when voters voted 'yes' on Proposition 13. I waited after the election for the great earthquake, but it didn't happen."

Then, there is the regulatory mess. For years, the business community and others have suggested that many federal health and safety rules have been set not so much by objective, scientific standards, but according to the political leanings of the regulators. Our complaints evoked a wave of accusations that we favor dirty air, maimed workers, segregated workplaces, and the like. Yet, several weeks ago, buried deep in the Washington Post was an article with the headline, "Brookings Study Finds Regulations Based On Politics More Than Science." It appears that the liberal-leaning Brookings Institute think-tank has finally made what it considers a novel discovery.

Another example: A few hardy souls brave enough to call for controlling various open-ended entitlement social programs were vilified during the late 60s and 70s as Scrooges who would take the pabulum out of the mouths of babes. Yet, a recent cover story in Time magazine suggests that a consensus is finally emerging that the exponential growth of these programs must be curbed, and could be done without causing the poor to give up the practive of eating. "There is little question that for the health of society, the growth of entitlements must be slowed," the article concludes.

Finally, never has so much political demagoguery been so clearly discredited than that which the decontrol of energy has spawned. When President Reagan completed the process of decontrolling oil that was begun by President Carter, howls of protest eruptea from Congressional liberals such as Sen. Ted Kennedy, who painted gruesome portraits of elderly ladies eating cat food in order to pay the phenomenonly higher fuel bills that would surely result from the President's action.

Guess what? Not only are gasoline prices lower than they were in January, but the latest figures indicate that home heating oil per gallon will be about five cents lower this winter than last winter, when controls were still in effect. In addition, publications such as the New York Times and Harper's magazine, hardly mouthpieces of conservatism, have recently documented that since the decontrol process began, the share of our oil imported from abroad has plummeted from about 50 per cent to 30 per cent, and over the last six months, drilling for new domestic oil has increased by 50 per cent.

Judging by these examples, opponents and skeptics of fiscal conservatism, supply-side economics and regulatory reform have been proven woefully inaccurate in their past predictions and many are now publicly throwing in the towel on these debates. This track record is worth remembering as we judge the validity of current prophecies of doom.

Pumpkin Pancakes Are A Great Start For Fall Days

The crisp fall air nips the nose. The autumn leaves crunch under foot, signaling the beginning of the harvest season. And roadside stands are once again filled with a colorful annual assembly of gourds and squashes. As our senses tune in to fall, it's time also to cue our taste buds.

And what more appropriate way to greet a fall day than with a hearty breakfast of Pumpkin-Spice Pancakes. This pancake-house variety is easy to make at home from Bisquick® baking mix, canned pumpkin and traditional pumpkin pie spices such as cinnamon, nutmeg and ginger. Serve topped with homemade Maple-Nut Syrup for a delicious brunch or breakfast idea.

PUMPKIN-SPICE PANCAKES

- 2-1/3 cups Bisquick baking mix
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- 1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
- 1 cup milk
- 2 eggs
- 1/3 cup canned pumpkin
- 1/4 cup vegetable oil
- Maple-Nut Syrup (below)

Beat all ingredients except syrup with hand beater until smooth. For each pancake, pour scant 1/4 cup batter onto hot griddle. (Grease griddle if necessary.) Cook until pancakes are dry around edges. Turn; cook other sides until golden brown. Serve with Maple-Nut Syrup. About 13 pancakes.

Maple-Nut Syrup: Heat 1 cup maple-flavored syrup and 1 tablespoon margarine or butter until hot; remove from heat. Stir in 1/4 cup chopped pecans.

3 Local Delegates At Business Meet

Everett Ault, Jerry Sandstrom and Russel Christianson of Thief River Falls, along with 13 other delegates from Crookston and East Grand Forks recently returned from attending the Minnesota commission on small business conference in Minneapolis.

Purpose of the conference was to adopt 10 recommendations to be presented to the Minnesota legislature pertaining to changes believed needed within that state to provide for a 'healthier business climate, competitive with the surrounding states such as North Dakota and Wisconsin.

At a luncheon, Governor Al Quie told delegates that, "The potential of what you're about is enormous" and that "the private sector is where growth comes."

On workers' compensation Governor Quie stated, "Wisconsin's work comp rate is one-third the Minnesota rate, and in Wisconsin they call this profit, and business pays taxes on profit."

Governor Quie said Minnesota needs to do what Florida has done with workers' compensation; Florida sunset its entire program and started over. Minnesota must make changes in the areas of workers' compensation and unemployment compensation to be competitive, he said.

The small business conference concept was originated by the Carter administration on the federal level and Minnesota legislature authorized and funded the Minnesota conference with $10,000. In addition, over $255,000 of funding was provided by Minnesota business in the form of personnel, office space and contributions.

Delegates began meetings in early summer in 20 regions throughout the state. Out of these meetings came more than 600 recommendations, and the over 400 delegates attending the conference reduced these recommendations to 10 priority items. The number one issue was workers' compensation, followed closely by unemployment compensation and taxation. Following is a list of the top three items, all of which were endorsed by the Thief River Falls, Crookston and East Grand Forks delegation.

(1) Workers' compensation should be reformed so that:

"Work place" injuries are clearly defined to reflect only accidents "clearly" involving the employee's work in order

Indoor Flea Market Slated December 5

Popularity of the first Christmas flea market held in Thief River Falls last year is attested by the fact that more than 40 dealers have registered to participate at the second annual event this year and 14 others have been turned away for lack of space in the city auditorium.

John Zukatis, who arranged the December event as well as the summer series of flea markets at Floyd B. Olson park, said that the event this year will be held from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday, December 5. Public attendance is encouraged.

Zukatis will be moving out of state after January 1 and Merle Kruschke will continue in charge of the popular monthly markets during the summer.

Rent Or Buy Farmland Is Meeting Topic

How to determine fair farm rental agreement or decide to rent or buy farmland, buildings, livestock and equipment will be topics for discussion at a meeting scheduled by Pennington county extension service 1:30 p.m. in the courthouse meeting room, Thief River Falls.

County extension director Terry Courneya, and Area extension agent Bill Penning, will review farm budget planning procedures that can serve as basis for determining fair farm rental agreements. Examples will also help farmers make sound decisions on the rent or buy issue that is of growing interest. "Increased costs of purchased inputs and high rates of interest on land purchases make it necessary to examine farm business agreements on a regular basis," Courneya said.

This meeting, open to the public, will be of value to both landlord and renter, Courneya added.

History Group Annual Meet December 4

Annual meeting of the Pennington county historical society will be conducted Friday, December 4, at 8 p.m. in the meeting room of the Thief River Falls city auditorium.

Wallace Sparby of Thief River Falls will show slides and discuss his recent trip to Africa. All members of the society are encouraged to attend the annual meeting.

Second In Concert Series Performs . . .

Re'Generation Shares Its Closeness Like A Family

by Bonnie Wentzel
Times Reporter

Just as each member of a family is unique, so are the 10 "family" members (13 with the group's technicians) of the Re'Generation singing group who performed Thursday evening in the Lincoln high school auditorium for members of the Thief River Falls concert association.

To one member of the group, Rick Webb of North Carolina, the group is just like a family, and even closer than a family in some ways. "We're together all the time," he said. To the group, "all the time" means just that — performing in 500 concerts for one million people annually, traveling 100,000 miles in the 49-week period they tour. "We're off three weeks out of the year," Webb said.

Although Webb is a vocal graduate, other performers in the group have various backgrounds. There is a business major, English major, two art majors and even a home economics major, he said, describing some of their backgrounds. It is required that students auditioning for the group (1,000 annually) have at least one year of college behind them. "Then they are more used to being away from home," Webb said. The group's average age now is 24, although members are usually 19 when they audition for the group.

Their hometowns are located in states such as Albama, Indiana, Ohio, Virginia, Colorado, Nebraska, California and North Carolina.

Members in this group have been together for three years, although according to Webb, group members usually stay together for one year before some of them leave.

The singers had performed in Willmar before they arrived in Thief River Falls Thursday afternoon to begin setting up equipment for their 8 p.m. concert. Then it was back "on the road" that same night to prepare for a concert in Crookston Friday evening. They just recently returned from a three-week tour on the West Coast.

Even though the group has a busy schedule, with a different concern scheduled each night, there is plenty of time for sleep. In fact, "we've probably had more sleep the past two weeks than we've ever had," Webb said, mainly because the group has been performing in smaller communities throughout the state of Minnesota.

The fact that there are five men and five women in the group creates a "warm" feeling, according to Webb, as couples are able to share microphohes while on stage.

Hazel Meyers Foster In New Retirement Career

HAZEL MEYERS looked like this when she graduated from Lincoln high school in Thief River Falls in 1937. After a working life which included 20 years as a telegrapher with the Northern Pacific railroad and most recently a billing clerk at St. Paul Ramsey medical center, she has taken up modeling as a retirement job.

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Sixty-five is the age in life when most people look forward to a sedentary life of retirement, not the start of a new career. For the former Hazel Meyers of Thief River Falls, however, the activity ahead promises to be rewarding in a number of ways.

Hazel Meyers Foster has become a professional model and on November 26, 27 and 28 will appear on national television in a Montgomery Ward commercial for Mr. Coffee and LaMachine. She spent five hours in filming the 30-second commercial which will be used in pre-Christmas promotion by the company.

Mrs. Foster doesn't expect that modeling will be a full-time activity but she hopes it will provide enough opportunity for her to supplement her retirement in-

Senior Citizens At Newfolden Conduct Meets

Newfolden senior citizens Inc. recently conducted their October and November business meetings at the Meal Center.

At the October meeting, the secretary's report was read by Ruth Martin, with the treasurer's report read by Lucille Skadsem. Both reports were approved as read.

It was noted that the Green Thumb dinner served October 15 at the civic center was well attended. Seniors also had a craft table at the Country Market which was conducted at the civic center September 12.

It was announced that a dinner invitation has been issued to members of the Newfolden city council and the county commissioners. Both groups are welcome to come at their convenience.

At the meeting, seniors voted to put a "thank you" in the Middle River Record to show their appreciation to the city council, county commissioners and the community for their support in the past.

During the meeting, the following were elected to office: Mrs. Helmer Lind, president; Mrs. Kenneth Moen, vice president; Mrs. Nellie Olson, secretary; and Helmer Lind, treasurer.

At the November meeting, the secretary's report was read by Bertha Tunheim since Nellie Olson was absent. Treasurer's report was read by Helmer Lind, and both were approved as read.

Seniors discussed making a quilt to have on hand to be given away. It was also noted that the senior citizen board of directors should consist of five people. Board presently consists of two members as two members have moved and one died.

Nominations were opened for three directors with the following members elected: Art Sakdsem, Ruth Martin and Jennie Lokken were elected to fill the positions of Ann Hanson, Della Lindquist and Albert Lokken.

It was decided at the meeting that the advisory board not be changed. Board consists of Mayor Vernon Gunderson, Pastor Earl Eveland, attorney Brian Rokke, local councilwoman Murial Mercil and local store manager Harvey Underdahl.

Seniors decided to serve a free lutefisk and meatball supper December 11 to the seniors who attend the meal center and to others who have helped at the center.

Seniors, at their November meeting, also decided to check their accident insurance to learn more about coverage. Meeting was adjourned. Mrs. Helmer Lind, Reporter.

Re'Generation Shares Family Closeness

"Everyone is a soloist in their own right," he said, "with musical tones ranging from low bass to high soprano.

"It really is a different type of life," Webb said, smiling. But the group is dedicated to their work, so their performances are "thrilling."

"You meet new people very day," he said.

Re'Generation was created in San Diego, CA in 1970 by Rev. Derric Johnson, Webb explained, during a time when anti-Vietnam demonstrations were strong. "There was a negative attitude among the young during that time," Webb said. "There were campus riots, and flag burnings. Derric wanted to create a group to show something positive about America. We're primarily A God and country group."

Johnson acts as director of the group as well as organizer of vocal music to be performed. People auditioned have to be screened thoroughly to get the best members possible, Webb said.

Although the Nashville-based singing group performs mainly Patriotic songs, they also perform Christian music selections and popular, traditional and Boradway music.

Group travels to communities, both large and small throughout every state, performing for all types of audiences. "Music is geared toward each particular audience," Webb said. Group has performed conventional and patriotic programs as well as sacred concerts. Their concerts are "variety" shows, according to Webb, with music, bright costumes, and intricate choreography.

Presently, the group is on a 16-day tour performing in the Allied concert series.

Members of the group have been performing for large audiences with standing ovations following each performance, Webb admitted proudly. The best type of audiences are those that are responsive, he said.

This year, Re'Generation is celebrating its 12th year with a concert, which will also mark their final edition as a full-time traveling group, according to Webb.

They have taped their first national television Christmas special with Burl Ives, where they will appear with Lynn Holly Johnson, the star in the movie, "Ice Castles." Date of the special has not yet been determined.

Group will be doing more television work, more recording in their studio, and they will be doing more flying to their concerts instead of driving, which will cut the annual 500 concerts to 75.

Next year, Webb, along with Kevin Miles, Findlay, Ohio, will be touring on their own, performing in 200 operetta style concerts a year on their own as well as meeting the Re'Generation group for additional performances.

Ahead of the group lies a month's stay at Disney World in Orlando, Fl., the highlight of the tour, where the group has performed for 11 years in a row.

"We have friends there and they appreciate who we are and what we stand for," Webb stated.

The group will be taking a few days off for Thanksgiving to be with their families, before they resume their tour in Ohio.

Webb expressed the same feelings for all group members when he stated that one of the most difficult aspects of being a traveling performer is being away from one's family. "We are all very close to our families," he said.

Members of the group are all single, with the exception of Tim and Cheri Denny: he a singer (second tenor) and she the group's business manager.

To Webb, providing entertainment for people is one of the greatest things there is. Group strives to share their message outside the church. "We consider ourselves communicators," he said. "We believe what we are singing about."

"If I could say anything to people, I would tell them to reach out," Webb said, "to maintain a positive attitude and encourage people to dream the impossible dream. That is what we stress to our audiences."

GRANDMOTHER IMAGE is what Hazel Meyers Foster is asked to portray in most of her photo modeling assignments. The former Lincoln high school graduate has taken up modeling in her retirement and has had a number of jobs in the past year.

Hazel Foster Starts Career In Modeling

come. In addition, it will provide her with an interest focal point after an active working schedule up to retirement.

A graduate of Lincoln high school in Thief River Falls with the class of 1937, she later married and became a mother. Several years later she became self-supporting with a young son to rear and educate, so she returned to Thief River Falls and took a night class in typing. She also went to a telegraphy school and became a telegrapher for the Northern Pacific railway. Her work placed her in a number of small communities between Mandan, ND, and Livingston, MT.

She quit the railroad after 20 years and held a number of jobs in the Twin Cities area, including work with the state crime bureau beginning in 1970, serving as a teletypist on the national law enforcement network. She was employed by St. Paul Ramsey medical center in St. Paul in 1974 and continued as a billing clerk with the center until her retirement in October of this year.

In preparation for retirement, Mrs. Foster began taking acting classes at Charter's Academy of Acting in St. Paul in 1979, making the stop there on her bus ride home from work and keeping up the classes for about eight months. One day a modeling agency called the acting school, seeking an older woman to play a role in a film being produced in Minneapolis. Hazel auditioned but didn't get the part, being told that she was "too pretty and to sweet" for the character the film company wanted to portray.

But she signed with the Eleanor Moore agency as available for future work in print advertising and television commercials. Since that time she has been photographed for promotional work of banks, insurance companies, retirement homes, transportation systems and food services, and the pictures have been published in brochures, newspapers and magazines throughout the country.

One of her early assignments was being photographed with Charles Irving, who played the role of judge in the old Perry Mason television series and also was an announcer for the "Our Own Ma Perkins" radio serial. Irving told her that the modeling business is uncertain at best, and that at the conclusion of any job you have the feeling that it might be the last one you get. Irving died only a few days after working with Mrs. Foster on the photo job for an insurance company.

Most of Hazel's photographic modeling jobs have cast her in the "grandma" role with a bit of stereotying involved. Although a for-real grandma herself (her son and wife in Minneapolis have two children;, she considers herself too modern to play that role without making use of her acting abilities. She even had to buy some clothes for a "granny" wardrobe to be ready for those roles.

She had hoped to do more this fall in promoting her availability for modeling but a leg has been giving her trouble lately and sometimes requires the assistance of a walker. This winter is a question mark for her, but she hopes to have additional jobs later in the year. A combination of circumstances have reduced her expectations for both railroad retirement and social security benefits.

"I like the freedom of retirement," she said during a Times interview, "but I have to find some kind of work that isn't too physically demanding to provide some extra income. Acting is enjoyable but it's hard work. I hope that the modeling jobs keep coming and that I'm able to handle them."

Hazel is a sister of Mrs. William (Velma) Holmes and the daughter of the late Harry A. Meyers. Copies of some of the advertising work done by Mrs. Foster is on display at Four Seasons realty office 1221 North Main avenue, where Mrs. Holmes is employed.

New Technique, Styles Used By Re'Generation

by Les Torgerson

Thursday evening concert goers in Thief River Falls were entertained by the sights and sounds of Re'Generation, the second concert in this season's Concert Series.

Re'Generation is illustrative of a relatively recent innovation in choral performance. Beginning with the Modernaires of the 1950's "Hit Parade" and progressing through several popular choral ensembles such as Fred Waring's "Pennsylvanians," "The Young Americans," "Singers Unlimited" and others, we have seen an evolution of new styles of performance and new techniques which are advantageous for television and recording production.

Choral texture of Re'Generation was highlighted by the "trademark" of the group's sound; the high obligato soprano voice of Phyllis Parker and the low bass voice of Kevin Miles. The diction of the group was clear and easy to understand and contributed to a distinctive pop style. The singers accomplished a choreography involved with their production. The choreography was effective and enhanced the total performance even though it was somewhat limited by considerations of microphone placement.

Group spokesman Rick Webb related that Re'Generation was born out of a reaction against the Vietnam Protest Movement of the 1960's. Rev. Derric Johnson, the group's founder, has made a reaffirmation of faith in the American ideals of love of God, country, and personal fulfillment through the medium of music. Highlights of the program were the effective patriotic arrangements of "God Bless America" and "What Price Freedom?" The unaccompanied simplicity of the Christmas music offered as the concert finale was a refreshing change of style for the evening and illustrated the excellent ensemble control of the group.

The performance was made less effective by the use of recorded accompaniments rather than a live orchestra. A simple trio or quartet would have contributed a "live essence" which would have enhanced the sound of the group. The recorded orchestra (impressive as it was with trumpets, tympani, and strings) plus the electronically reinforced vocal sounds of the group combined to produce an overall electronic sound which at times may have led the listener to imagine the whole concert was recorded.

All in all, it was an enjoyable evening and the Thief River Falls concert series board should be commended for the variety of programming in this season's series.

Heart Disease Study Calls Those 29-64

"Can heart attacks be prevented by lowering cholesterol?" That is the question posed by a team of doctors conducting a national study on the relationship between cholesterol and heart disease.

"Heart disease is the leading cause of death and disability in the United States," said Dr. Henry Buchwald, head of the Twin Cities based study. Nearly all heart disease results from atherosclerosis, or hardening of the arteries — the tubes which must continually supply blood containing life-giving oxygen and nourishment to the heart and other organs.

Atherosclerosis gradually thickens and narrows arteries until blood can no longer flow through them; the result of this narrowing is usually acute illness, the most prevalent of which is a heart attack.

According to Dr. Buchwald, cholesterol, a fatty substance, is found in diseased arteries and may represent a clue to the cause of atherosclerosis. Also, the amount of cholesterol found in our blood can predict, somewhat, how likely we are to have heart attacks. Facts such as these have led many doctors to use various means to lower blood cholesterol in their patients; it is still uncertain, however, whether such lowering can actually prevent heart attacks.

University of Minnesota research team is now seeking individuals from 29 through 64 years of age who have had only one heart attack in the past five years with no history of heart surgery, diabetes or stroke. Such individuals may obtain more information about the study by calling the University of Minnesota Hyperlipidemia Study collect at 612-376-4494.

TRF Students In Nebraska Paint Project

Kevin Wangsnes

Kimberly Kiesz

Two Thief River Falls students were among the 500 Union college students and faculty who conducted a one-day paint project in the college's neighborhood in Lincoln, NE. Students included Kevin Wangsnes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Wangsnes; and Kimberly Kiesz, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E.L. Kiesz, all of Thief River Falls.

Project BRUSH (Beautification of Residences Using Student Helpers) was part of a week long celebration of the Seventh-day Adventist college's 90th anniversary. Students and faculty, working in 20-member crews, scraped, primed and painted the homes of 12 elderly and low-income residents in the College View area of southeast Lincoln, all in one day. Clean-up crews also combed the neighborhood, picking up litter from streets and sidewalks.

Materials for the project were made possible by a grant from the Federal Housing and Urban development department and the local Lincoln action program. College President Dean Hubbard said BRUSH was intended as an avenue of service and a way of saying thanks to the city that has hosted Union College for 90 years.

Benefits are based on real wages lost and medical reimbursement plus rehabilitation if necessary. Lump sum benefits and permanent disability, either partial or full based on loss of body functions, would be eliminated. The law should be patterned after Florida's wage loss system as established in 1979, rather than using Wisconsin as a model.

All benefit payments are annuity type payments. That is, all lump sum payments should be eliminated in favor of weekly or monthly payments.

Statutes of limitations on claims are reinstated.

The workers' compensation court of appeals has equal representation of worker and employer groups.

Complete and absolute apportionment of pre-existing conditions are included.

The unemployment fund deficit should be reduced by:

(a) Bringing Minnesota unemployment compensation standards into strict conformance with federal law.

(b) Lengthening the minimum work period from 15 weeks to 20 weeks before an employee would qualify for benefits.

(c) Reducing unemployment benefits for wage earners earning more than $15,000 per year by adopting the following rule: Each employee will receive credit for wages earned up to $15,000. Wages earned over $15,000 would be deducted from the $15,000 limit creating a proportional decrease in the weekly benefit amount.

Example: (1) Earnings $15,000 (maximum weekly benefit); (2) Earnings $20,000 ($15,000 - $5,000 equals $10,000 credited wage resulting in two-thirds maximum weekly benefit).

(d) The legislature should review the enforcement of residency eligibility requirements and tighten reporting requirements. Checks should be mailed only to Minnesota addresses.

(3) Corporate and personal income tax rates must be reduced over a five year period to provide existing and new businesses with the needed funds to compete, maintain and expand their businesses. These reductions would stimulate the state's economy, increase production and improve employment. Legislation is needed to:

(a) Reduce corporate income tax rates to six per cent on the first $50,000 and to 10 per cent on the maximum rate. Timetable: $50,000 income — nine per cent July 1, 1985 and six per cent July 1, 1987; over $50,000 — 11 per cent July 1, 1985 and 10 per cent July 1, 1987.

(b) Reduce the maximum personal income tax of 16 per cent to 12 per cent. Timetable: Maximum tax — 14 per cent July 1, 1985 and 12 per cent July 1, 1987.

(c) Accelerate depreciation schedules similar to the federal 10-5-3 schedule. Timetable: Federal conformance, retroactive to August, 1981.

Halling Held In Shooting Of EGF Man

Patrick Halling, 47, Thief River Falls, is being held in the Roseau county law enforcement center following his arrest in the shooting of Randy Sorenson, 24, East Grand Forks, early Sunday morning in a trailer home on Halling's property about 11 miles north of Williams.

Sorenson was reportedly shot in the stomach with his own .38 caliber pistol and was transferred from the Warroad hospital to the intensive care unit of United hospital in Grand Forks. Halling is alleged to have fired the pistol once at Sorenson after other members of the deer hunting party (which included Halling's two sons and Charles Bergland, 36, East Grand Forks) had gone to sleep.

Investigation is being conducted by the Lake of the Woods county sheriff's department and charges of first degree assault are expected to be filed Tuesday.

The shooting about 2:30 a.m. Sunday is believed to have followed an argument between the two men. One of Halling's sons reportedly drove Sorenson to the Warroad hospital.

Truckers Must Pay For Stamp In Wisconsin

Minnesota motor carriers traveling in Wisconsin will have to pay a $5 service charge for their reciprocal motor vehicle identification stamp from the Badger state effective January 1, the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) announced today.

Previously Wisconsin did not charge for this service, said Donald Berg, Mn-DOT's director, office of rates and regulations. Minnesota interstate carriers and carriers for hire, who require 1982 identification stamps from Wisconsin, should include $5 per application, said Berg.

Under federal law, motor carrier renewals are processed in November, December and January. Any motor carrier applying for stamps from Wisconsin for 1982 must include the $5 fee now, advised Berg.

Dear Readers,

This Thanksgiving, let us be thankful for grandparents. They have been thru the hustle and bustle - the mad pursuit of life's goals. They bring a mature experience and wisdom to the contemporary scene. Their guidance is invaluable to childhood and youth - and to parents as well. Fortunate the family that has grandparents to turn to for wisdom and perspective in this fast-changing society.

Respectfully,

USDA Selects Sites For Food Bank Project

U.S. department of agriculture has selected a total of three sites in three different regions of the food and nutrition service to conduct a demonstration project testing the feasibility of providing USDA-donated foods to food banks for emergency distribution to eligible households. Food banks are locally sponsored charitable services which provide food to needy people in emergencies.

Food banks were considered for participation in the demonstration project if they have provided emergency food distribution since March 1980. Project is scheduled to begin in November 1981 and will continue for one year.

Assistant secretary for food and consumer services, Mary C. Jarratt, said the sites chosen to take part in the demonstration project are: Gleaners food bank of Indianapolis, Inc., Indiana; The Food Bank, Inc. of Santa Clara County, California; and Hunger Action Coalition — Pittsburgh community food bank, Pennsylvania.

Food bank demonstration project is authorized by the agricultural act of 1980. Under the project, USDA will provide instant non-fat dry milk, butter and processed American cheese to participating sites. These items will be used to supplement food stuffs obtained by the food banks from other sources.

USDA is conducting the projects to analyze and evaluate federal participation in food bank emergency food programs; assess the effectiveness of such participation; and make recommendations on the feasibility of continuing such participation.

USDA will also review participation data, food donation and inventory data, and transportation and delivery costs, in order to evaluate the project. Results of the evaluation will be reported to Congress by October 1, 1982.

Agreement To Cut Truckers' Stamp Costs

First formal reciprocal agreement between Minnesota and Illinois permitting motor carriers to pay for one motor vehicle identification stamp for travel in either state becomes effective January 1, Minnesota Department of Transportation (Mn-DOT) announced recently.

Donald Berg, director of Mn-DOT's office of rates and regulations, said Minnesota and Illinois have had informal reciprocity for motor carriers for many years. Written agreement insures that an interstate motor carrier or carriers for hire pay their motor vehicle identification stamp in their home state and receive one from the reciprocal state for a small service fee.

Minnesota has an initial $25 filing fee for motor carriers whether they are regulated by the Interstate Commerce Commission or exempt. However, there is no filing fee on renewal applications, said Berg.

A service charge of 45 cents for each stamp issued to carriers in states with reciprocal agreements is imposed by Minnesota. They include 22 states, the District of Columbia and two Canadian provinces as follows: Alabama, Arkansas, California, Delaware, District of Columbia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Texas, Vermont, Wisconsin, Alberta and Manitoba.

IRS Trying To Find 725 With Tax Refund Due

Internal Revenue Service (IRS) is looking for 725 Minnesotans who have undelivered federal tax refunds available to them, according to C. Dudley Switzer, director of the IRS in Minnesota.

Most common reason for an undelivered refund is that a person has moved and left no forwarding address with the post office. Other reasons include incorrect address on tax return, name change, hard to read handwriting, or poor photocopy of return. Checks are for both individuals and businesses.

When a federal tax refund check is delayed, lost, stolen, or goes undelivered, help is available from IRS. All year around, but especially in early summer months, taxpayers service division helps many people.

Outside of taxpayer service division, a special problem resolution office (PRO) has been set up to help people get their refunds. Switzer said the office helps people after they have tried to get tax problems solved through normal channels. "All we ask is that a person first use the existing office (whether it be in the collection, examination or taxpayer service divisions) and then if the problem still hasn't been taken care of, call on PRO," Switzer said.

When a refund check is returned to IRS, address is double checked against return, and a letter which can be forwarded is then mailed. If there is no response to the letter, the refund is put on the undelivered check list.

725 refunds are all that are left over from more than one million refund checks sent to business and individuals in Minnesota each year, Switzer said. Refunds range from $1.00 to $6,915.54. There are 520 refunds from 1980 and 205 from prior years.

Refund checks are not issued by local IRS offices, so taxpayers need not make a special trip to pick up their refund. Checks will be reissued and mailed four to six weeks after taxpayer contacts IRS.

If someone believes they are due a refund from 1980 or earlier, they should contact IRS toll-free by calling 1-800-652-9062. For all inquiries, a person should have at hand name and address as it appears on the return, social security number, type of tax return, year it was filed, and dollar amount of refund.

Fees Increase For Filing Of Documents

Secretary of State Joan Growe recently announced that fees for filing Uniform Commercial Code documents with her office and county recorder offices would increase January 1, as a result of legislative action.

Uniform Commercial Code laws relate to filing of security interests against consumer and business collateral. Secretary of State generally handles business related security agreements and counties deal with personal property security agreements.

While fee for filing a security agreement has been increased from $2 to $5, Growe pointed out that fees for subsequent amendments and terminations have been eliminated. "The goal", she said, "is to save our clients time and expense associated with issuing so many small checks each time they submitted a filing".

Growe said, "We anticipate that, even though cost of filing the security agreement was increased, the savings in time and money on subsequent filings will result in net gain to our clients".

Anyone wishing a copy of the new fee schedule should send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Secretary of State, UCC Fee Schedule, Room 180 State Office Building, St. Paul, Minnesota 55155.

We Should Be Grateful

If stocking up for the food-filled holiday of Thanksgiving has wreaked havoc with your food budget, consider among your blessings that it could have been worse. Minnesota commissioner of agriculture Mark Seetin points out that Minnesotans enjoy food at one of the lowest costs in the nation.

Latest available consumer price index on national and midwest costs for food in the home showed that Twin Cities consumers were paying 2.4 per cent more than a year ago for food purchased for home consumption. This compares with 5.5 per cent increase nationally.

Compared to a year ago, food costs at home this September were higher by 3.1 per cent in Chicago, 5.1 per cent in Cleveland, 5.4 per cent in Cincinnatti, 6.4 per cent in Milwaukee and 6.8 per cent in Detroit. As might be expected, however, prices farmers are receiving for their raw food products this fall are more than nine per cent lower than the average a year ago.

Commissioner Seetin noted that the farmer thus is not only providing the food, but he is subsidizing a substantial share of the cost by receiving lower prices while processing, packaging, marketing and distribution costs continue to go higher.

While it would be improper to revel in the abundance at the expense of the farmer, we must nevertheless recognize the bounty that has been made available to us as consumers in this nation.

We disagree with Seetin when he says, "Agricultural abundance is what Thanksgiving is all about, the reason why the national holiday is observed." We believe giving thanks to the Ultimate Provider is what Thanksgiving is all about, a proper recognition that no matter what science has been able to discover and man has been able to manipulate, the basics of life are still controlled by a Divine Presence which has seen fit to bless us. For this we should be grateful.

Unique Twist

What a mouthful of tripe! We're talking about MFT executive secretary Edward Bolstad's recent statement that, "we know that it is in our teachers' interest and in the interest of students and parents throughout the state to continue our strong commitment to make bargaining work for us and avoid, whenever possible, the trauma of strike threats of action."

Before the Minnesota Education association followed Don Hill's lead into militancy and unionism, the Minnesota Federation of Teachers was the alternate choice for teachers who favored that type of activity. It took its lead from the labor movement which most certainly made the threat of strikes and strike action part of its bargaining arsenal.

Bolstad was one of the early leaders in formation of the MFT, and one of his major criticisms of the Mea was that it didn't strongly espouse strong collective bargaining efforts. The MFT was being sold as a bargaining organization with its interest in teacher benefits as opposed to student educational benefits. Can things really have come so full circle in such a few years? Hardly.

Bolstad is hoping the MFT can gain some credibility with the public at the expense of the rival MEA which has encouraged strike threats and been involved in support of strike actions as part of contract negotiations this year.

The MFT secretary points out five settlements in districts where teachers are represented by the MFT and where the two-year increases have averaged from $5,400 to $6,100.

"Our teachers are receiving contracts that are as good or better than settlements reached in other districts which have resorted to strike action," Bolstad said. The MFT reportedly represents about a third of the state's teachers.

It seems to us an unique twist indeed to have a teacher organization built on union principles pointing fingers at union activities being applied by another organization. Whatever seems best at the time, it appears.

Being A Smoker . . .

It has been said that one of the things more obnoxious than a smoker to a non-smoker is a smoker who has kicked the habit to a person who is still addicted. There are few more outspoken critics of smoking than those who used to smoke themselves.

T. Casey Brenna, a former smoker, recently made a list of what it is like to be a smoker. It isn't a "preachy" list and most smokers will be able to identify with it — and probably add to it, If they're really honest with themselves. This is what Brenna says it is like to be a smoker:

Being a smoker means always getting up in the morning with a cough.

Being a smoker means always needing a cigarette when you talk on the phone.

Being a smoker means walking for blocks at night, looking for a place to buy a pack of cigarettes.

Being a smoker means losing money in cigarette machines that don't work.

Being a smoker means losing money in cigarette machines that do work.

Being a smoker means getting bawled out for it by people who love you.

Being a smoker means having your body and mind under the influence of nicotine all the time.

Being a smoker means that your food tastes bad.

Being a smoker means that you are a legal drug addict.

Being a smoker means taking years off your life.

Being a smoker means coughing and wheezing when you try to do exercises or engage in a sport more strenous than chess.

Being a smoker means risking cancer and emphysema.

Being a smoker means all of these perils, and more.

Most of all, being a smoker means it's time to stop!

No Room For Habitat?

If one were to characterize the style of west central Minnesota agricultural area in the fall, it would have to be described as basic black. The wake of General Sherman's infamous Civil War march must be revisited on the farm countryside.

It would seem to be a preoccupation of farmers in that area to assure that readiness for winter snow means everything must be black. All grain and corn stubble must be turned under ground and vegetation in every ditch and slough must be burned. The only oases of wildlife habitat in many places are the state wildlife management areas and federal waterfowl production areas. Possessors of the "black is beautiful" ethic must resent those beauty spots of water and vegetation.

But beauty spots they are, the results of forward-thinking and acting conservationists whose foresight and efforts brought control of those areas to the public. They are winter havens, springtime courting grounds and nurseries, summer growth and fall feeding areas to many forms of wildlife.

It is possible for production of crops with saleable value. It is reasonable that clearing and drainage be implemented to raise that productive acreage. But why should it be necessary to torch the ditches and low-lying areas which could give some wildlife half a chance of surviving the winter?

Isn't there room in the farm plan of today's modern farmer for a patch of grass or brush for wildlife? Have farmers become so detached from all but dollar-producing land that they find no value or self-satisfaction in wetland preservation? If so, what can be done to restore that interest and satisfaction?

If the reason is economic, the solution must be economic as well. That means a tax break of other financial incentive to leave some marginal private areas for wildlife. It would have major implications throughout our state.

Sportsmen provided the funds for acquisition of most of the public areas now available to them for hunting or nature observing activities. It has been a great help, but it is not enough. Now it is necessary to assist, in one way or another, the private landowner in sharing some of his land with wildlife.

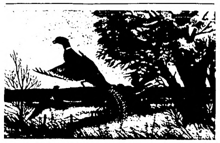
It will not be easy — perhaps even impossible — to sell legislators or local officials on tax breaks for land devoted to wildlife at a time when tax revenues seem to be short at all levels. But it is essential if quality wildlife resources are to be maintained or reestablished. In days when surpluses of production hold down prices of farm crops, is there no room for habitat?

Borrowed Nonsense:

Student: ". . . and the people of London are known for their stupidity."

Teacher: "Where did you get that impression?"

Student: "Right here in the social book it says the population of London is very dense."



WILDLIFE STAMP commemorating the introduction of the ring-necked pheasant to the United States 100 years ago has been issued by the Minnesota association of farmers, landowners and sportsmen. Printed in full color, the print, "Pheasants in Autumn Habitat," was done by world-renowned Minnesota wildlife artist Roger Preuss of Waterville.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

In a recent issue of the American Physical Therapy association's "Progress Report" I noticed the following article which might be of interest to some of year readers:

A toll-free Access Information Number of the National Center for a Barrier Free Environment is available for information on physical facilities accessible to disabled persons. Callers are able to discuss their needs with design and information professionals.

In addition to the toll-free number, the center's services include an information clearinghouse, a nationwide network of barrier free design consultants, and a series of information bulletins and other publications addressing specific accessibility topics. Also available is a reference file on state building codes and standards relating to barrier free design.

The toll-free access information number is 800-424-2809. Information on additional services of the national center is available from the National Center for Barrier Free Environment, Suite 1006, 1140 Connecticut Avenue N.W., Washington, DC 20036.

Thank you for your consideration!

To the Editor:

We have heard so much about former President Nixon and the terrible Watergate. I have never been able to see anything terrible about it.

They broke into the Democrat's headquarters under a law passed in 1968 which was read a number of times during the hearings which said nothing will stand in the way of the President getting information concerning the internal security. I heard nothing saying he had to have a court order as some judge said.

I believe a court order at that time would have been a solid block, as in my opinion both courts and the Democrat controlled congress were completely communist dominated. I believe that is why Nixon said he couldn't take his problem to either the Courts or Congress.

It seemed Eisenhower's appointment of Earl Warren as chief Justice had been a terrible mistake. He said himself it was the worst blunder he ever made in his life.

We were warned about 30 years ago that the communists planned to take this country over in 1973; we were told at that time they were five years ahead of schedule.

I felt that any move by the communists to take over this country would come from within the Democratic party. I had quit them during the Korean War convinced the party was communist dominated, Truman was letting the communist labor leaders run the country and thousands of our best young men were losing their lives because of it. Eisenhower seized the communist dominated labor unions and quickly ended the war. The hundreds of unions seized were listed in the Mpls. Tribune. They obviously didn't want to fight without help from behind our lines.

I don't believe going into Vietnam was a mistake, our mistake was in our choice of leadership. The Air Force said they could have won the war in two days but they were not allowed to.

It was obvious to me the enemy was getting help from both our Democrat presidents and the Democrat controlled congress. It seemed they were only using our boys for political gun fodder.

In 1968 things seemed to be shaping up just right for the communists. The Congress and the Courts, especially the U.S. Supreme Court, were in my opinion completely communist dominated, the farmers were under a goverment control program which I beleive was a communist party program advanced by the Farmers Union. The Farmers Union always seems to run the department of agriculture when the Democrats are in.

I beleive hearings by the U.S. house investigating committee of which I have a copy shows the Farmers Union has been the main communist front in American agriculture since 1933. All they needed was the right man in the white house and I beleive the late Hubert Humphery was that man but he didn't quite make it. And because he didn't they were almost sure to try something before 1973 as they wouldn't want their plan to fail.

It realy looked bad when all those liberal Democrats went running over to Russia one after the other. The FBI had told us the liberal because of his cloak of respectabilty was the most dangerous communist in the U.S. The U.S. senate internal security committee had told us they had found the socialist — liberals — progresive and communist to be one and the same, all getting their orders from Russia.

I understand Nixon had reason to believe there was money coming into the Democrat national headquarters from Cuba, some was financing the McGoveren campaign and some was financing the anti war demonstrations that were going on.

McGoveren did seem to have a lot of money to spend; even Humphery said he didn't know where he got it all but he couldn't compete with him.

I am sure Nixon felt they had to go in there and see if they could find evidence of it. I beleive the real criminal was they guy that tipped off the police. If he knew it was a secret government operation in the interest of national security I feel he would be guilty of treason. Being an associate of J. Edgar Hoover he might have known as they had talked to Hoover about it.

The communist conspiracy in this country is made up of hundreds of front organizations; heading the list in 1958 was the American socialist party the socialist workers party and the socialist youth league.

According to government documents I have, the socialist became a communist when they joined with Russia and organized the communist party in 1919.

To join, support or in anyway aid this atheistic socialist communist conspiracy knowingly and willingly is a complete sin against God. I beleive this is why so many old socialists break down and confess; it is their only chance of salvation. It is also an act of treason against our country that can draw a penalty of $10,000 and 10 years; death if the act is considered high treason as was that of the Rosenbergs.

Mandatory Sentences for Criminals Using Firearms

Last year, over 15,000 Americans were killed by criminals with firearms. Another 157,000 were wounded. Over half a million of us were robbed at gunpoint.

Too many criminals believe that, if they use a gun, they can get away with armed robbery. Even if they get caught, many of them think that they will be placed on probation or receive an early parole. Lenient sentencing practices have given criminals an incentive to pack a gun when they go out to commit a crime.

To reverse that trend, and to slow the bloody tide of crime statistics, I have sponsored legislation that would guarantee a five-year sentence for any criminal convicted of a violent federal offense involving a firearm.

Under H.R. 27, this five-year sentence would be tacked on top of any other punishment given by the court. The judge could not suspend this five-year stretch, and the convict would not be eligible for parole or early release until at least five years had been served.

On a second federal conviction for a violent crime committed with a firearm, the criminal would receive a mandatory ten-years-to-life sentence on top of other punishment. The repeat offender would not be put back on the streets until at least a decade had passed.

At this point, the bill has 240 co-sponsors. Although H.R. 27 is now before the House Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on crime, I expect that it will be brought to the floor by early spring.

In many states which have adopted a mandatory penalty for using a firearm to commit violent crime, crime rates have decreased dramatically. For example, since adopting a mandatory penalty for firearms misuse in 1975, Virginia's murder rate fell by 21 per cent and robbery declined by 19 per cent.

The deterrent effect of a guaranteed prison term has been proven in these states. If Congress passes H.R. 27, and rates of violent Federal offenses involving firearms begin to decline, then most of the other states will adopt similar legislation.

My bill will serve to decrease violent crime in two ways. First, it will make potential criminals hestiate before they commit a crime involving a firearm. Secondly, it will guarantee that convicted criminals, who have a high rate of repeat offenses, will be off the streets for at least five years.

The National Rifle Association has endorsed the concept behind this legislation. In a report, the NRA said, "the proper approach is to impose the mandatory punishment for the use of deadly weapons in the commission of violent crime. Let's take the criminals off the streets."

I am a sportsman and a hunter. And I recognize that millions of law-abiding Americans own and use firearms responsibly, whether for hunting purposes or for the protection of their homes and families.

This bill has nothing to do with gun control, registration, or restrictions. Its sole purpose is to discourage potential criminals and to get convicted criminals off the streets for at least five years.

No single piece of legislation is going to prevent all crimes committed with firearms. But if we can get convicts off the streets for five years, then they won't be committing repeat offenses during that time. And if we can persuade potential criminals that it isn't worth at least five years of their lives to commit a crime with a gun, then we'll be able to cut our firearms-related crime figures down from 15,000 murders and 157,000 wounded.

Answers from the Bible by Pastor Don Peres

Q. Pastor Don, I am a Christian but I can't seem to control my emotions. I know what's right and wrong — I just don't seem to be able to do it. Can you give me some Biblical advice.

A. The apostle Paul no doubt felt the same way when he said, "for to will is present with me; but how to perform that which is good I find not. For the good that I would I do not, but the evil which I would not, that I do. Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it; but sin that dwelleth in me." (Romans 7:18-20)

We have all inherited a basic temperament from our parents that contains both strengths and weaknesses. This temperament is called several things in the Bible, "the natural man", "the flesh", and "the old man" to name a few. Temperament is the combination of inborn traits that subconsciously affects man's behavior.

Temperament can be changed. The apostle Paul put into words the heartfelt cry of every sincere individual who laments over his weakness of temperament: "oh, wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" His answer is electrifying, "I thank God its through Jesus Christ our Lord!" (Romans 7:24-25)

Yes, temperament can be changed! This is clearly seen from II Corinthians 5:17 where Paul wrote: "Therefore if any person be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passing away; behold, all things are becoming new."

Since temperament is our "old nature", what each person needs is a "new nature". That "new nature" is imported to each person when they receive Jesus Christ into their life, and their body becomes a dwelling place for the Holy Spirit. (I Corinthians 6:19-20)

God's Holy Spirit dewells within us to help release us from a life of anger, fear, depression, indecisiveness, instability, restlessness, and can give a new freedom of peace; purpose, self-control, and dignity.

Galatians 5:16-17 teaches "Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the desires of the flesh. For the flesh battles against the Spirit: and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye cannot do the things that ye would."

This is why it is so important for us to keep growing in the fruits of the Spirit so we will be able to overcome the negative emotions in our lives day by day. (Galatians 5:22-23)

If you have any questions that you would like to have answered from the Bible, please write Pastor Don Peres, Box 129, Thief River Falls, MN 56701.

Guaranteed Loans Make Education Possible For Some

Being a farmer has its disadvantages. For Bryan Jamison, whose father owns a farm at Borup, it meant not being able to qualify for a college scholarship because landowners are considered to have valuable assets and therefore do not meet the "needs test" for financial aid. However, land does not pay for tuition, books, room and board through four years of undergraduate school and law school.

Susan Esbjornson, a senior at University of Minnesota, Morris, does qualify for scholarships but they provide only a part of the "financial package" she needs.

Guaranteed student loans through the Higher Education Assistance foundation are filling the financial gap for both Jamison and Esbjornson.

A first year law student at William Mitchell college of law, St. Paul, Jamison received his loan in Minneapolis-St. Paul. "It means I can go to school," says Jamison. "Without it I would not have the money to make it. As a conservative, I prefer a loan over a grant, especially for post graduate school. It's a little help to get me through a hard time."

Esbjornson, a studio art major, has supplemented her scholarships and work-study program with small loans to meet the cost of her education.

As the designated student loan guarantee agency in Minnesota, four other states and the District of Columbia, HEAF, a non-profit organization, has guaranteed over $1 billion in loans in the last four years. In Minnesota, alone, the loans guaranteed total $520,085,862.

"Traditionally, students have had to rely on the resources of their families or provide for themselves by simultaneously earning a living and pursuing an education," says Richard C. Hawk, president of HEAF. "When inflation rendered these two sources inadequate, students could apply for government and private grants based on a demonstration of need. But it was only through the introduction of guaranteed loans that students became eligible for assistance based on a demonstration of individual responsibility."

Recent concern over possible student abuse of the loan program surfaced with the leap in money market interest rates. Critics have accused some borrowers of investing loan proceeds or using them for purposes not connected with education.

"Such abuse is illegal and, in our experience, we have found it to be very rare," Hawk says.

Unlike grants, guaranteed loans do not relieve the student of educational expense. Rather, they provide a means for payment of these expenses from earnings after completion of the education.

"By permitting the student to meet costs from future earnings, guaranteed loans provide a realistic opportunity for students to assume independent responsibility for at least a portion of their own educational expenses," Hawk explains.

David Konatz, assistant director of student financial aid at the University of Minnesota, where guaranteed student loan applications have tripled this year, says, "The GSLP is aimed at helping middle income families and, most recently, those families who could afford post-secondary education but now have a cash flow problem.

"A lot (of families) may be eliminated by the new government regulations but most who really need the loans will be able to get them; students who are here on their own and have no other resources."

HEAF has gained more support on the part of private lenders than the former government-operated loan program, according to Konatz. But just as important, he says, is HEAF's leadership role in the GSLP.

"They are a very important link in the communications chain — to have the latest information on changes and an interpretation of those changes. They have also helped us with troubleshooting."

HEAF recently introduced a new type of guaranteed loan called the Parent Loans to Undergraduate Students (PLUS) Program which allows parents to borrow up to $3,000 per year ($15,000 total per student).

Under the guaranteed student loan program (GSLP), students may borrow up to $2,500 per year ($13,500 total) as undergraduates and up to $5,000 per year ($25,000 total) as graduate students. They pay an origination fee of five per cent of the loan value but pay no interest on the loans while in school or during a grace period following graduation. The government pays this interest to the lender.

After the grace period, students have up to 10 years to pay back their loans at an annual interest rate of seven or nine per cent, depending on when the student began borrowing. This interest is then supplemented by the government at 5.5 per cent below the average bond equivalent rate for 91-day Treasury Bills for nine per cent loans and 3.5 per cent below for seven per cent loans.

The student must be enrolled in an eligible post-secondary institution, including technical schools, and is allowed to borrow only an amount not to exceed the cost of education minus other financial aid received.

Families with incomes of $30,000 or less are not required to demonstrate financial need because the student is assuming the financial responsibility for higher education.

"Recent budget cuts, which have resulted in trimming the GSLP, require students in families earning more than $30,000 a year to demonstrate a need before receiving interest benefits in the program," Hawk said. "However, Congress reaffirmed the value of the program by keeping it basically intact."

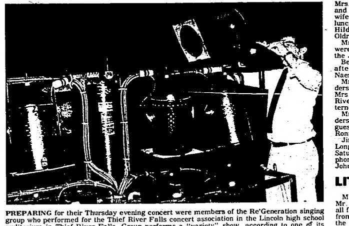
Unlike the GSLP, participants in the PLUS program must demonstrate the ability to repay and begin that repayment, plus 14 per cent interest, no more than 60 days after the loan is granted. Students receiving a guaranteed student loan may also receive a loan through their parents under the PLUS program provided the combined amount does not exceed the cost of attending the institution minus other financial aid received. Students who are no longer dependent upon their families may also borrow from both programs provided the combined amount does not exceed $2,500 or the cost of attending the institution minus other financial aid received.

"Although useful for all income levels, the program is particularly helpful in bringing relief to the badly strapped middle-income family," Hawk says.

Anyone interested in obtaining additional information about student or parent loans should contact their local commercial lenders or the financial aid department at the institution the student plans to attend.

"IF I COULD say anything to people, I would tell them to reach out," Rick Webb, North Carolina, and a member of the singing group, Re'Generation, stated in a recent interview. "I would tell them to maintain a positive attitude and encourage them to dream the impossible dream." Nashville-based group performed in the Lincoln high school auditorium in Thief River Falls last week for members of the Thief River Falls concert association.

STRINGED INSTRUMENTS of various sizes will perform under the direction of James Solsten during orchestra's portion of fall concert to be held 8 p.m. Tuesday in the gymnasium at Ben Franklin Middle School.



PREPARING for their Thursday evening concert were members of the Re'Generation singing group who performed for the Thief River Falls concert association in the Lincoln high school auditorium in Thief River Falls. Group performs a "variety" show, according to one of its members, with familiar music, bright costumes and intricate choreography.

Alumni Group To Provide UND Support

University of North Dakota alumni association's committee of 100 is gearing up to play a large part in UND centennial activities and continued University support, according to Earl Strinden, the association's executive vice president.

The group, Strinden said, has evolved out of the association's former advisory committee, which was formed to improve communication among the University, the alumni association and UND alumni living in communities throughout North Dakota and western Minnesota.

Committee members, he said, will continue to work closely with the alumni office and UND administrators, but they will also take a lead role in planning alumni and UND centennial events in their communities.

"Our goal," Strinden said, "is to have at least one key alumni leader from every community in UND's service area serving as a member of the committee of 100.

Members of the committee of 100 representing Minnesota communities from this area are: Everett Ault, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kenville.

Hockey Information Provided

Frank Fee of KROX radio in Crookston, who along with Don Olson of KTRF radio in Thief River Falls provide a wealth of hocky information every winter, began the 1981-82 season with his second annual preseason poll of Section 8 coaches. Not surprisingly, Roseau, the defending Section 8 champion, heads the list.

The Rams are expected to field the top team and the top player in Section 8 this year in defenseman Jay Ness. Other prospective top senior recruits in Section 8, according to Fee are Tim Mishler, East Grand Forks; Jim Toninato, Bemidji; Jon Brekken, Crookston; Steve Olson, Thief River Falls; Scott Knutson, Warroad; Lerry Fertig, Hallock; Vic Evavold, Fergus Falls; and Mark Rice, Moorhead.

Olson and KTRF conduct the annual All-Section 8 team ballotting at the end of the year, but Fee posted a preseason All-Section 8 squad that included Brekken in goal; Mishler, Toninato and junior John Bjorkman of Warroad as forwards; with Ness and junior Craig Mack of East Grand Forks on defense.

Tracking down last year's Section 8 seniors, Fee pinpointed Pete Ryskamp of Alexandria at Sioux City of the Midwest League and Curt Geris of Alexadria at Hibbing community college. Brainerd graduates include goalie Paul Hennen at the Air Force Academy, Dave Gohl at St. Thomas, Brad Holland at St. Cloud State and Keith Holtan at Gustavus, with Gary Borg, who also played hockey, receiving scholarship funds to play baseball at Illinois. Steve Johnson of Crookston is at RPI; Kreg Korinek and Jay Hass of Moorhead at Northern Arizona, with the Spuds' Kurt Larson at the University of Minnesota; Billy Yon of Roseau is at Minnesota and Scott Norland of Hallock at Bemidji State. Shawn Hallie and Eric Grafstrom of Roseau, along with Scott Brekken of Mount St. Benedict are at the University of Minnesota-Crookston, and Thief River Falls grads Scott Wiebolt, Jeff Mongoven, Greg Harder, Dean Dokkin and Murray Jorde, along with Keith Huerd of Warroad and Trent Peabody of East Grand Forks at Northland community college.

Moving up a notch or two, five Section 8 products are playing in the National Hockey League this winter, reports Fee, including Neal Broten of Roseau with Minnesota; David Christian of Warroad with Winnipeg; Alan Hangsleben of Warroad with Washington; Gary Sargent of Bemidji, who has been on Minnesota's injured list while recovering from back surgery; and Aaron Broten of Roseau, who has been up and down with Colorado.

Along with the five Section 8 players, Fee counts three NHL players from Section 7 and 13 from the Twin Cities area.

Miscellaneous

+ Goodridge high school graduate Rory Haugen, a 5-7, 155-pound freshman runningback, earned a letter this fall as a member of the Mayville State college football team, and earned the praise of fourth-year head coach Al Holmes, who said, "Rory was a hard-working competitor. He was very coachable and showed marked improvement as the season progressed. We feel he has a bright future at Mayville State."

+ Marshall County Central high school graduate Ray Kvalvog, a member of the Moorhead State University cross country team this fall, narrowly missed qualifying for a spot in the 1981 National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) cross country championships. Kvalvog placed 11th in the NAIA District 13 championships at Como Park in St. Paul recently, but only the top ten district finishers advance to the national meet.

+ Bernie Burggraf, writing in the Roseau Times-Region, suggests that changes might have to be made in the Roseau high school football program. Head coach Terry Taylor and assistant Bob Glassmann both resigned their postions at the end of the 1981 season when the Rams found it tough to compete in their new Class B Pine-to-Prairie Conference surroundings. "Maybe we should take a long hard look at the football program here in Roseau," wrote Burggraf. "In order to justify the type of program to compete in the Pine-to-Prairie football conference will mean that all athletic young in junior and senior classes will have to be members of the team. If we cannot get upper classmen to go out for football, then maybe a long look at the possibility of dropping the program here in Roseau and going into a soccer program. Play an "in-house" league for a year or two. An occasional game with Steinbach or a team from Winnipeg. It is something to look into."

Roseau Tops Preseason Section 8 Hockey Poll

Preseason Poll

(All 17 Section 8 hockey coaches were asked to pick the top eight teams. Point totals are listed, with first place votes in parenthesis. Alexandria, Crosby-Ironton, Hallock, Little Falls did not receive votes).

1.	Roseau (5)	116
2.	East Grand Forks (5)	110
3.	Bemidji (4)	105
4.	Thief River Falls (3)	82
5.	Fergus Falls	60
6.	Warroad	47
7.	Crookston	43
8.	Moorhead	23
9.	Brainerd	18
10.	Lake of the Woods	4
11.	Detroit Lakes	3
12.	Indus	2
13.	Red Lake Falls	1

It should be a three-way scramble for first place in Section 8 high school hockey this year, according to a coaches' poll conducted by Frank Fee of KROX radio in Crookston.

Roseau, East Grand Forks and Bemidji were the top choices, pretty much splitting the first place votes as the Rams and Green Wave each drew five first place votes while the Lumberjacks picked up four. The other three first place votes went to Thief River Falls, fourth in the ballotting behind the bunched leaders.

All 17 Section 8 coaches participated in the poll, which asked them to pick the top eight teams. Thirteen teams received votes, with only Alexandria, Crosby-Ironton, Hallock and Little Falls left of the ballots.

Hockey fans will have an opportunity to see all 17 teams Saturday when the preseason Section 8 jamboree is held in the Thief River Falls sports arena.

Each match will feature two 11-minute periods, with Detroit Lakes vs. Hallock at 12:10 p.m.; Fergus Falls vs. Lake of the Woods at 1:20; Little Falls vs. Thief River Falls junior varsity 2:30 Red Lake Falls vs. Crosby-Ironton 3:40; Alexandria vs. Indus 4:50; Crookston vs. Moorhead 6 o'clock; Roseau vs. Brainerd 7:10; Warroad vs. Bemidji 8:20; and East Grand Forks vs. Thief River Falls 9:30.

A preview of each Section 8 hockey team from the KROX poll is as follows:

Roseau — Gary Hokanson is in his fifth year and he greeted seven lettermen back from another Section 8 championship team. Roseau will be young, with a wealth of sophomores out. The experience lies on defense and everybody's All-Section senior Jay Ness will be back and highly recruited. Junior Chad Johnson, who had over 15 goals last year, is also back and the addition of senior Greg Biskup, a transfer from Warroad, won't hurt either after he scored over 30 points for the Warriors. Larry Goos and Steve Huglen join Ness to make the Rams strong defensively, but they're looking for a goalie to step in.

East Grand Forks — Green Wave lost their state tournament bid two years in a row when Roseau beat them in the Section 8 semifinals 6-1, spoiling a 17-5 season 1980-81 season. Lost top scorer Jeff Strandell to graduation, but still have eight of their nine top scorers back, including All-Section center Tim Misher, a senior he had 22 goals and 39 points last winter, and Mike Williams, a senior who had 11 goals and 31 points. Lost three of their top four defensemen, but everybody would like to have junior Graig Mack on their blueline. Will have to replace goalie Mark Pagnac.

Bemidji — Lumberjacks are loaded after losing just four players off last year's team. Heading the list of returnees is Jim Toninato, an All-Section choice last year when he ranked second in the Section 8 scoring charts with 18 goals and 24 assists. Also back is junior Ron Smith, who had 13 goals and 15 assists. As usual coach Bryan Grand and the 'Jacks face a tough schedule.

Thief River Falls — Coach Wendell Grand saw six seniors graduate off last year's Section 8 tournament runner-up squad, including both goalies and two defensemen. But six of top nine scorers return, headed by senior Tom Ose, who had 12 goals and 20 points last year when the Prowlers had problems scoring. Senior Steve Olson returns to lead the blueliners.

Fergus Falls — Billy Colpitts' head received a bolt of gray last year, his first as Fergus Falls coach as the young Otters opened Section 8 play with a pair of overtime wins before losing a 3-2 semifinal contest to Thief River Falls. Those games could set the tone for 1981-82 when the Otters will be led by last year's leading scorer, senior Vic Evavold, who had 10 goals and 15 assists, along with top defensemen Dan Snustad and Tom Lundeen. Fergus Falls also featured one of the top Bantam teams in the state last year.

Warroad — Thin on numbers, Warroad still has some very good quality players, like junior John Bjorkman who had 22 goals and 18 assists as a sophomore, and senior Scott Knutson, who led Section 8 in scoring last year with 19 goals and 34 assists. However, they need defensemen and a goalie.

Crookston — Featuring the first year of cooperative sponsorship with Mount St. Benedict, the Pirates are directed by Mike Lundby, the dean of Section 8 coaches who is beginning his eighth year at the helm. He faces a major rebuilding job with only four veterans back, but will get help from three letterwinners from two years ago at MSB. Time will tell if the year without Section 8 competition hurt them. Top returner is senior Dan Hoff, who had 10 goals and 21 assists last winter and goalie Gary Vaudrin, who will be complemented by former MSB standout Jon Brekken, a senior who was an All-Section second team pick as a sophomore.

Moorhead — Spuds will have a late start for at least four players: seniors Mark Rice and Phil Ostlie, along with juniors Steve Sarbacker and Steve Hartog who were members of Moorhead's Class AA playoff finalist football team. They all figure in coach Terry Schercliffe's plans since the Spuds lost five of their top six scorers, and must replace Kurt Larson on defense and All-Section goalie Kreg Korinek.

Brainerd — Coach Tom Younghans lost 10 players off last year's fine 17-3-1 team that won the regular season Section 8 pennant, including five of the top six scorers who had 68 of the Warriors' 117 goals. Top returner is senior Rick Boileau, with Mark Smorong, who looked sharp in limited playing time, expected to step in for Paul Hennen in the nets.

Lake of the Woods — Bears could be a sleeper this winter. Fourth year head coach Jerry Drewes lost top scorer Trace Brown, but has next seven scorers back, including senior Mark Sindelir, a 17-goal scorer last year. Lots of good, young hockey players coming up for the Bears, along with junior Doug Ebeltoft, an outstanding goalie.

Detroit Lakes — Third year coach Duane Earnest looks to improve upon the Lakers' 6-15-1 record with 10 returning lettermen. However, the losses include top six scorers. Junior Jon Ahles ans senior Jon Grabow expected to pick up some of the scoring punch. Both goalies return.

Indus — Trojans enjoyed their best year ever, 12-10, last winter and could possibly be even better this time around. Only graduation losses were top two scorers. Returners are headed by seniors Roger Hasbargen, Darrell Ulrich and Mark Pennington, all of whom scored 12 goals a year ago.

Red Lake Falls — Jeff Lindquist starts his second year as Red Lake Falls coach hoping to improve upon a 5-15 record. Scott Cameron, Brian Swenson, Dan LaChance and Larry Schmitz are all double-figure scorers. Goalie Tim Kalbakdalen also returns.

Alexandria — Cardinals return eight lettermen, including both goalies — senior Mark Brock and sophomore Jeff Bast, but lost three of top four scorers. Defenseman Randy Thoennis is the top scorer back. Mike Donahue moves from an assistant to head coach.

Crosby-Ironton — Third year as varsity sport for the Rangers, with 17 of last year's 18 players back, including senior Mike Engen, the leading scorer.

Hallock — Senior goalie Larry Fertig will have to hold Bears together in early going. He averaged almost 40 saves per game last year and still had a 5.5 goals-against average. Senior Kevin Beito leads the returning skaters.

Little Falls — A respectable 7-6 in their first year of varsity hockey last year, the Flyers lost just one player to graduation. Top nine scorers are back, headed by senior Scott Buck who had 11 goals and six assists.

Swimmers Enter Section 3 Meet

Fifteen members of the Lincoln high school girls swimming team, after missing the final five weeks of the regular season schedule because of the teachers strike in Thief River Falls, will be back in the pool Tuesday when the Prowlers compete in the 1981 Section 3 swimming and diving championships at Bemidji State University.

Thief River Falls Section 3 entries will include:

Seniors — Lisa Desrocher, diving; Lori Swanson, diving; Robyn Dallmann, 100 breaststroke, medley relay.

Juniors — Shari McGann, 50 freestyle, 100 freestyle, freestyle relay; Karen Dillon, 100 backstroke, medley relay; Mary Geatz, 200 freestyle, 500 freestyle; Sarah Green, 200 individual medley, 500 freestyle.

Freshmen — Jill Lusignan, 100 breaststroke; Connie Geatz, 200 individual medley, 100 backstroke; Cindy Russell, 100 backstroke; Teri Klopp, diving.

Eighth grade — Michelle Peutz, 50 freestyle, 100 butterfly.

Seventh grade — Jennifer Hustad, 200 freestyle, 500 freestyle.

In a change from the past when the finals were preceded the day before by the prelims, the 1982 Section 3 meet will be a one-day, timed-final affair. Diving prelims and semifinals will begin at 9 a.m. Diving finals and all swimming finals get underway at 1 p.m.

A wide-open championship battle is expected to center around Brainerd, Alexandria, Moorhead and Bemidji.

Realistically, Thief River Falls competitors can't be expected to perform as well as if they had completed a full schedule, but coach John Hustad figures the Prowlers are capable of putting on a good show.

"Our kids feel like they have nothing to lose, and they're loose," explained Hustad. "They're excited; really hyped up. Nobody down there expects them to do a thing, but they want to surprise a few people. They're looking forward to the opportunity to compete."

Last meet for the Prowlers was the Minot invitational back on Oct. 9. They resumed practice in the Franklin pool Monday. But during that strike period, a number of team members participated in some seven-to-eight practice sessions in Grand Forks, working under the University of North Dakota swimming coach. They were in excellent shape when the strike began and they returned ready to swim 8,000 yards per day in regular practice sessions.

"They will swim as fast as their condition allows them," noted Hustad, while divers like Desrocher and Swanson will rely on years of experience to help them along.

Top two finishers in each event will advance to the 1981 Minnesota state swimming and diving championships December 4-5 at the Cooke Hall pool in Minneapolis.

Prowlers Try To Pick Up Where They Left Off

A surge at the end of the 1980-81 season has Lincoln high school girls basketball coach Tom Schafer hoping the Prowlers can pick up where they left off last year as they prepare for the upcoming 1981-82 campaign, which gets underway Tuesday, December 1, against Fisher.

"We came on pretty strong last year, and the girls want to continue that," said Schfer, remembering a season-ending performance that enabled the Prowlers to erase part of the memories of a disappointing 6-14 season. After losing eight of nine starts through mid-season, Thief River Falls upset defending North Half Region 8AA champion Detroit Lakes 58-54 and came close to beating highly regarded Fergus Falls 40-38 to end the regular season schedule. They continued their new-found success by stunning Bemidji, one of the pre-tournament favorites, 44-31 in the North Half Region 8AA quarterfinals and then watched one poor quarter vs. Moorhead in the semifinals cost them a 50-40 decision.

Two starters return from that team and they are expected to provide much of the Prowlers' scoring and rebounding this winter. Tara Nicholson, who averaged 10.8 points and 11.8 rebounds per game, along with LeAnn Paetznick, who averaged 9.2 points and 13.5 rebounds per game, should provide the Prowlers with a potent one-two punch in the front line. They're both seniors.

"Tara and LeAnn should be two of the best post-center people around here," acknowledged Schafer. "We should be real strong underneath the basket with them in there."

However, that leaves three positions to be filled — two wings and a point guard.

"The big question mark is if we can find somebody to dribble the ball for us," explained Schafer, referring to the quarterbacking role played by the point guard, a position handled in fine fashion the past three years by now-graduated Ann Goodrich.

Nicholson, Paetznick and Goodrich were Northwest Athletic Conference (NWAC) all-conference picks last year.

While looking for players to complement the skills of Nicholson and Paetznick, Schafer is also hoping to field a better shooting team this year. The Prowlers shot just 29 per cent from the field a year ago — and for the most part they were taking good-percentage shots.

"We need to improve our shooting," he confirmed. "We would have won a lot more ball games last year if we could have just shot a little better."

Paetznick and Mary Beth Dondelinger, also a senior, are co-captains this winter.

Rest of the team includes senior Gwen Nylen; juniors Lynette Hout, Vicki Fellman, Lynne Culkins, Christy Stromlund, Kristy Peterson, Lisa Glass, Connie Hume, and Paula Myers; sophomores Colleen Cullen, Kristy Thompson, Paula Wilkens, Peggy Mehrkens and Shari Larson; and freshmen Michelle Olson, Tami Jorde, Penni Johnston, Rhonda Sheehan, Angie Brazier, Stacie Kruta, Debbie Kazmierczak, Tricia Armstrong, Chrystal Larson, Lisa Arnold, Paula Bergan, Patty Grabowska, Kelli Olson, Janelle Helms and Sheila Latourneau.

"We're looking forward to the season," noted Schafer. "This group of kids has a real good attitude. They're pretty fired up."

Lincoln Basketball Team Is Greeted By New Coach

A new coaching staff is working hard on building the confidence of the Lincoln high school basketball team following a rough 4-15 season in 1980-81.

Tom Hunt, who coached the Lincoln sophomores last winter, succeeded Glen Peters as head coach of the Prowlers, and Al Buhl moved up to the assistant spot in charge of the junior varsity after having coached the freshmen. Glen Peters and Vern Treat resigned as Lincoln head coach and assistant coach, respectively at the end of the 1980-81 season.

"I'm looking forward to the opportunity," said Hunt of his new duties. "It's definitely a challenge to motivate the players — not just on the varsity, but throughout the entire program."

Seniors Kevin Sanders, Eric Bondy and Kent Kainz will serve as Lincoln captains this winter. Sanders is the top player back from a year ago when he earned Northwest Athletic Conference (NWAC) all-conference honors with a 13.3 scoring average.

Nobody else coming back came close to double-figure scoring, although Bondy and junior Mark Gere both played extensively. Along with junior Randy Naeseth, they provide the Prowlers with what height they have: all three are 6-2.

"We're going to have to play tough man-to-man defense," pointed out Hunt, "and we're going to have to discipline ourselves to block out and become good rebounders. Those are the two areas we're really stressing at this point."

Better shooting percentage, better shot selection and reduction in the turnover department also rank high on the list, but defense and rebounding "are the keys right now," according to Hunt.

Offensively Hunt figures the Prowlers will be in decent shape. "I'm confident we'll be able to put some points on the board, but the offense will take a little more time then the defense," he noted. "I think we can bring our defense along faster than our offense. That will come with time."

Dave Peterson will coach the Lincoln sohpmore team this winter and Jay Forney is handling the freshman squad. Robert Vanyo is the student manager.

The Prowlers will kick off their 1981-82 season Saturday by participating in a preseason jamboree at the University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC). Regular season starts with road games Friday, December 4, at Roseau, and Tuesday, December 8, at Grafton before the Prowlers open their home schedule Thursday, December 17, against Moorhead.

Duck Stamp Contest Won By David Maass

David A. Maass, a prominent Minnesota waterfowl artist, won the 1982-83 federal duck stamp competition in Washington, D.C. with his oil painting of three canvasback ducks flying over water.

This becomes the second win in the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's annual contest for Maass. In 1973, he took first place for his oil painting of wood ducks in flight, and his design was reproduced on the following year's migratory bird hunting and conservation stamp, popularly known as the duck stamp.

This year, Maass' design topped a record 2,099 entries in judging ceremonies at the Department of the Interior. Duck stamp contest is the federal government's only regularly sponsored art competition.

Winning entry will appear on next year's stamp, which must be purchased by all waterfowl hunters 16 years of age and older in the United States. Revenue from the sale of the duck stamp is used to buy wetlands and other types of waterfowl habitat under a program administered by the Fish and Wildlife Service. Many stamps are also brought by non-hunters with a similar interest in preservation of waterfowl habitat, as well as by a growing number of stamp collectors.

Interior Secretary James Watt, who attended this year's judging, called the duck stamp program ". . . very successful. I take a great deal of pride in supporting the acquisition of wetlands and other vital waterfowl habitat because of their value to the country's migratory birds. And the duck stamp funds that insure their preservation are provided by the very conservationists who use and enjoy this resource."

Maass, 51, is a professional wildlife aritst who has devoted himself to painting full-time for the past 20 years. His efforts have earned him numerous second-place finishes in earlier federal competitions, in addition to his one previous win. Maass is a largely self-taught artist, however, with only three lessons from a correspondence course while in high school that qualify as formal art training.

"I had a good high school art teacher, however, and I worked with some other wildlife painters until I gradually developed my own style," Maass says, adding, "I started into wildlife art in my spare time during the Korean War, when I served two years in the photographic division of the Marines." Maass produced the final designs for the 1977 and 1979 Minnesota state duck stamps. He was honored as artist-of-the-year by Ducks Unlimited, Inc., in 1974, and was selected by the Minnesota Wildlife Heritage Foundation for its first such award in 1980.

"You bet it's a thrill, as big as it was the first time around," Maass said when reached by telephone at his home in Waterville, Minnesota and told of his first-place win. Maass lives and hunts in a section of the state dotted with shallow lakes that is well-known both for its waterfowl and its waterfowl artists.

His design, an oil painting on illustration board, depicts a pair of canvasbacks in flight followed by a second drake. They are set against a stormy sky over rough water. "It's a typical duck hunter's atmosphere — a windy, gray day. Not the typical blue skies that are my usual designs," Maass said. "That's my idea of a perfect duck scene — canvasbacks over the water with a stormy background."

Canvasback is a large species of duck, averaging 22 inches in length and up to three pounds in weight. The drake has a distincitve riddish-brown head and a growl-like call; the hen lacks much of the male's color and has a mallard-like quack. The canvasback has a rapid and noisy wingbeat and is the fastest-flying of the larger duck species.

Minnesota artists were prominent in this year's final judging. Terry Redlin of Hastings was the second highest finisher with a painting of snow geese and Phil Scholer of Kasson finished third with a depiction of redhead ducks.

Before 1949, wildlife artists were commissioned to produce a design for the annual stamp. Since then, the design has been chosen through a contest open to all artists who are residents or citizens of the U.S. Contestants are limited to one entry apiece.

This year's record 2,099 entries are an increase of more than 500 over last year's contest. The growing popularity of the duck stamp contest has prompted designs from a wide range of artists, although entries from many of the nation's top professional waterfowl artists make the final judging extremely competitive. Judges adhere to five major criteria in picking the winner, all of which are assigned equal weight (immediate visual impact, composition and design, style, lasting first impression and distinctiveness). The Bureau of Engraving and Pringing also advises judges on the suitability of entries for reproduction as stamp designs.

Federal government offers no prize to the winner other than a sheet of the following year's duck stamps, but commercial wildlife art dealers in the past have been eager to market limited edition reprints of the design under private agreements with the winners. Through this contest, the reputations of previously unknown wildlife artists have been established, and those of professionals have been enhanced.

The colorful stamps are the longest running, annually issued series of stamps in U.S. revenue stamp history. Since 1934, when duck stamps first went on sale, over 2.5 million acres of prime waterfowl habitat have been acquired with over $370 million in revenue ($266 million from duck stamp receipts and $144 million from accelerated wetlands acquisition loan funds). By buying the stamps, more than 2.2 million conservationists, most of them hunters and other sportsmen, provide over $16.5 million in support for this program each year.

Interior Department encourages non-hunters who also enjoy wildlife through photography, birdwatching, and other activities to contribute to the nation's conservation effort by buying a duck stamp.

Wildlife Stamp Commemorates Pheasants

A wildlife stamp commemorating the introduction of the ring-necked pheasant to the United States 100 years ago has been issued by the Minnesota association of farmers, landowners and sportsmen (MAFLAS).

Printed in full color, the centennial stamp features a newly completed painting, "Pheasants in Autumn Habitat", by world-renowned Minnesota wildlife artist Roger Preuss, a native of Waterville. The scene focuses on a pair of roosters springing out of the sheltering foliage of a farm woodlot.

While it ranks as the preeminent American game bird, the pheasant was not originally among the native wildlife species found in this country. The importation of 28 Chinese ring-necked pheasants to the Willamette Valley of Oregon in 1881, under the auspices of a U.S. Consul-General to Shanghai named Owen N. Denny, is considered the first successful transplant of these birds to the United States.

MAFLAS stamp will be offered to sportsmen, farmers, other conservationists and the general public.

Proceeds from the $5 stamp and limited edition prints will fund new and ongoing programs in an effort to improve depleted wildlife habitat.

According to Don Ledin, executive secretary of MAFLAS, typical projects that will be funded by stamp proceeds include the creation of additional safe nesting sites and more protective winter cover for the state pheasant population and other wildlife.

In most areas of the upper Midwest, the lack of a safe place for the pheasant to successfully hatch a brood of young is the factor that holds down pheasant population and other ground nesting birds. The economics of modern farming dictates the use of large machinery and large fields. Many of the fencerows, odd corners and marsh edges that dotted the landscape during the forties and fifties are gone. The MAFLAS program is designed to help the landowner replace some of this cover in areas where it will fit in with the farming operation.

Ledin emphasized the urgency of lauching a successful habitat restoration project which he said would be well under way by next spring. He pointed out that even up to 1958 pheasants were plentiful in Minnesota. But with the disappearance of habitat, the harvest of pheasants dropped to 466,000 in 1980 from a high of 1,500,000 in 1958.

MAFLAS, with its 32,000 members, will be cooperating with the Future Farmers of America, the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Natural Resources to make this a successful operation.

Ledin noted that the Roger Preuss painting selected for the stamp design is especially apt because it faithfully depicts natural habitat of the type that MAFLAS is dedicated to preserving and expanding. He said that Preuss was a natural choice because of his long-standing renown as a wildlife artist with a special talent for designing wildlife stamps. He pointed out that Preuss was the first Minnesota-born artist to win the federal duck stamp competition (1949) and the only one who has in addition designed national wildlife conservation stamps.

Full-scale reproductions of the Preuss painting used to illustrate the stamp will be issued in a limited edition print brought out by the Wildlife Publishing Company, Lake Elmo, MN. Both stamps and limited eiditon prints, $125, will be available throught Wildlife Publishing Company, Lake Elmo, MN. MAFLAS and leading Minnesota wildlife art galleries.

"The centennial of the pheasant's arrival in America is a welcome opportunity to honor our most important game bird and at the same time to gain further support and recognition for our habitat programs," Ledin said.

He added that MAFLAS is especially please that it is paying tribute to the pheasant because the centennial of its introduction to the United States seems generally to have been overlooked.

Pheasants were first introduced to Minnesota in 1905 when the Game and Fish Department (which antedated the Department of Natural Resources) received 70 birds from Wisconsin and Illinois. The first hunting season in which pheasants were harvested was in 1924 when Hennepin and Carver counties were opened for shooting. Only and estimated 300 roosters were bagged. But seven years later, 49 counties were opened to hunting and over one million roosters were harvested. The best year for a cock-only season was 1958 when more than one-and-a-half million roosters were harvested.

DNR NEWS

National Wildlife Federation (NWF) called on the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to ban any use or export of the toxic pesticide endrin. The call from the nation's largest conservation group came after the Montana wildlife agency announced that it had found high levels of the pesticide in ducks and geese.

Last spring endrin was legally sprayed on at least 120,000 acres of wheat in Montana to combat an outbreak of Army cutworms. Thousands of acres were also sprayed in Colorado, South Dakota and Wyoming.

Montana officials began testing migratory waterfowl after the Montana Wildlife Federation, an NWF affiliate, reported fish and other wildlife kills in that state.

Against the advice of the state health department, the Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks Commission voted in September to allow a duck and goose season this fall. However, the commission cautioned hunters to strip birds of skin and body fat, to eat no more than one bird a week, and no more than six per year. The commission also recommended that pregnant women avoid eating any waterfowl.

NWF statement follows:

"The recent discovery of endrin contamination of waterfowl in Montana is more than just a wildlife problem. It is also a human, economic and agricultural concern. And, it affects states other than Montana. Because the contaminated waterfowl are migratory, every state in the Central and Pacific Flyway must be on the alert. Although only ducks and geese have been tested for endrin contamination, it is clear that other wildlife species will also be affected, including such endangered species as the whooping crane, bald eagle and peregrine falcon.

"Obviously, there is a need for pesticides. However, the use of endrin, which is more toxic than the outlawed pesticide DDT, is simply unnecessary. The availability of less toxic but effective pesticides and new integrated pest management techniques make endrin an archaic choice.

"It is clear that a change in the regulations is called for. EPA must act swiftly to ban all use of endrin in the country, and since we do not want to export our environmental problems, the ban should cover export of this deadly pesticide as well as its domestic use."

Montana Wildlife Federation joined NWF in calling for the ban.

767 Completes Initial Flight

The first of a new generation of fuel-efficient jetliners, the Boeing 767, made its maiden flight recently reaching an altitude of more than 17,000 feet and 260 miles an hour as the flight crew put it through its paces.

The flight took place three days before the first-flight date established in 1978 in the 767 program plan.

Landing at the end of the two hour flight, Tom Edmonds, project test pilot, praised the full-time orientation presented by the digital cockpit instruments. "I classify it as a perfect flight," Edmonds said. "The airplane flew exactly as it was designed to do."

Powered by two Pratt & Whitney JT9D-7R4 engines rated at 48,000 pounds thrust each, the jetliner took only 3000 feet (914 m) of remarkably quiet takeoff run before its advanced-technology wing lifted it off the ground. Gross weight for takeoff was 240,000 pounds, well under the airplane's maximum weight of 300,000 pounds.

The new airplane has completed nearly 20 hours of flight as it moves ahead on the 1100-hour flight test program which will involve the first four 767s completed. The tests will lead to U.S. Federal Aviation Administration certification of the airliner for commercial use in July 1982.

The first delivery will be to United Airlines in August 1982. United kicked off the 767 program in July 1978 with an order for 30, since increased to 39. Total orders now stand at 173, from 17 customers.

Camera buying tip number six: The trend in 35mm photography is to the automatic camera type. This carries over to the flash also. Don't let your dealer sell you a 'package' that contains a flash unit not dedicated specifically to your camera. It's a very costly way to cut corners with substantially reduced indoor picture quality.

AUTO WINDER G
Catch the action at almost 2 frames per second. Attaches to any Minolta XG series camera.
A GREAT VALUE AT $103.95

Camera buying tip number seven: A good dealer can tell within a few minutes what camera is best suited for you. You could spend virtually hundreds of dollars too much on a camera that is unsuitable for your photographic purposes. Rely on the advice of a knowledgeable dealer.

Camera buying tip number eight: Purchase a camera by a manufacturer that has it's models consistently rated at the top of consumer's guide. Consumer's guide accepts no advertising so their opinions are not adversely influenced by manufacturers of the products they rate.

Camera buying tip number nine: Bargain cameras and lenses have a price difference - distortion and compromised performance. Satisfy yourself that the dealer can tell you precisely who manufactures the lenses he sells, then buy only if that lens has consistently high consumer's guide ratings.

Inga Geving, BPW Woman Of Year, Tells Her Story

by Bonnie Wentzel
Times Reporter

"This is my life," Inga Geving announced, as she scanned the inside of her comfortable home two days after she had been named woman of the year by the local chapter of the Thief River Falls Business and Professional women's (BPW) club.

That day brought a revelation of Inga's life as the woman of the year sat tearfully before family and friends — tears filling gaps where words of appreciation could not be spoken but which were truly felt.

The certificate presented her that evening by the BPW club read: "To Inga Geving, for her exceptional qualities of leadership and integrity and her distinguished achievements for the betterment of her community."

Inga was not home alone the day we paid her a visit to discover what her exceptional accomplishments were. Beside us sat the twins, dressed in their bright red velvet costumes; a piano player; Elizabeth and Kate; Little Orphan Annie; Shirley Temple; and visitors from Vietnam, China and Norway, among others.

The guests, all dolls, were only half of the 180 Mrs. Geving has named after her friends. "I see a different person in each doll," she said.

Inga began the collection two years ago. "I didn't have dolls when I was little," she smiled, "and I always wanted them."

Even though Inga says she's "not really a collector," we somehow believe differently. "You get things from friends and they're special and you want to keep them," she said.

Her "not really collections" of plates, cups and pitchers received as birthday gifts and from friends, were carefully displayed in their selected niches in her home. And her "not really collection" of postcards which we learned of but did not see, seemed extensive.

"I tell anyone who goes on a trip to send me one," she stated. "I can't go places because of my work at the (Pioneer) Village."

One could also say that Inga is a collector of children. After all, she was the "mother" of 37 Vietnamese sons from 1969 to 1976; she is the "mother" of three Chinese girls; she has three daughters of her own, Dorothy Bennett, Thompson, ND; and twins, Muriel Dagoberg, Minneapolis and Marian Adolphson, St. Paul; two sons-in-law (one of the three died); and nine grandchildren.

She is never forgotten at Christmas or Mother's Day, she said. One letter she once received from a Vietnamese son was addressed, "To my Mom," since he didn't know Inga's name.

DOLLS OF many nations tucked away in their own display case are among the 180 dolls Inga Geving has collected over the past two years. "I didn't have dolls when I was little," she said during a recent interview. "And I always wanted them." Inga was recently named woman of the year by the local chapter of the Business and Professional women's club. Dolls are only one group of the many things she has collected over the years. She is active in the Pennington county historical society, Sow and How Garden club, Homemakers club, Moccasin club and Trinity Lutheran church.

At School Board Meeting

Contract Okayed; Meet-Confer Set

Formal approval was given by the Thief River Falls board of education to the master contract for 1981-82 and 1982-83 with the Thief River Falls Education association (TRFEA) at the regular meeting of the board Monday evening in the Lincoln high school library. The vote was unanimous with all members present except Larry McDowell who was out of town.

The board also set the date of Tuesday, December 1, at 7:30 p.m. in the school district service center board room for a meet and confer session with the TRFEA. At that meeting it is expected that a schedule of make-up days for the eight days agreed to be made up following the TRFEA strike will be arranged.

Since the board has been appraised of a reluctance by the community for extension of the school year, a heavy school schedule may be expected to be adopted for the remainder of the year. In accordance with the agreement reached between the board and TRFEA for the 1981-83 contract, 14 strike days will not be made up and teachers will not receive regular pay for them.

The board has also informed the TRFEA that at least one session of meet and confer each year will be devoted to discussion of class size and elementary preparation time. Other matters as desired may also be placed on the meet and confer agenda.

Make-up days for the area vocational-technical institute were discussed and the board agreed by consensus to allow the AVTI to preceed with the recommended make-up days as presented until formal action could be taken by the board on the total make-up schedule.

Board approval was also given to the Teamster contracts with the custodians, secretaries and mechanics as negotiated for 1981-1984.

Marshall Co. Fair Annual Meeting Held

Marshall county fair stockholders received information on a successful operation of the 1981 county fair at the annual meeting held recently in the Warren fire hall.

Total receipts from operations of the fair were $25,407 including $16,128 in grandstand receipts, $2,375 in space rentals, $5,235 in carnival income, $7,150 in entry, stall and pen fees, $848 in sales tax and $747 in other receipts including $600 in donations.

Other income of $43,290 boosted the total receipts for the year to $68,697. Included in the other receipts were $2,423 in state aid, $15,000 in county and municipal aid, $3,140 in rents other than during the fair, $6,000 in loans, $744 in interest and $15,982 in money market investment and advance sales.

Expenditures for fair operations were well over receipts at $36,777 and included $4,914 in premiums paid, $1,435 in awards other than premiums, $3,321 in advertising and promotion, $10,097 for entertainment other than carnival, $5,982 carnival expense, $1,168 for judging of exhibits, $670 for superintendents, assistants, police, ticket sellers and crowd control, $2,620 for administrative expense, $4,432 for insurance and $2,134 in other expense including feed, sales tax paid, veterinarian fee, license, electricity, supervision and meals, rent, audit and filing fees and garbage collection.

Other expense included $19,055 for additions and major improvements to buildings, equipment and grounds, $2,828 for maintenance and labor, $4,000 in debt retirement, $113 in interest, and $10,000 for money market purchase. Total of all expenditures was $72,774.

Republic To File Suspension Notice

Termination of service to Thief River Falls by Republic Airlines — a situation which was expected to happen sooner or later — may come sooner than expected as result of the airline's recently-announced intentions.

City officials were informed Tuesday that Republic intends to file a notice of suspension of service with the federal civil aeronautics board (CAB) early next week. Gil Neumann, manager of community affairs for Republic, said city officials were informed so that they were aware of the situation before the filing actually takes place.

"What this filing does," Neumann explained, "is start the process for finding a replacement carrier. It does not mean that we are gone. We must, by law, continue to operate until a replacement carrier is there. That means we will be continuing air service for an indefinite period and there will not be a gap in air service, not even a day."

The community affairs manager added that a 90-day notice period is required, and the filing of notice next week will signal the start of that 90-day period. If a replacement carrier has not been found within that time frame, the CAB will extend Republic's requirement to provide service in 30-day increments until a replacement carrier is ready to provide service.

Republic's action follows action by the U.S. Senate and House conference committee's determination to continue 406 subsidies to the airlines through September of 1982. Continuation of the program through September of 1982 will be the final appropriation for the 406 law; after that date the 419 program for commuter airlines will go into effect.

"This has forced us into this situation sooner than we have expected," Neumann said. "We are not making wholesale cuts across the sytem, although I realize that is no consolation to Thief River Falls since it is one of the four cities being cut." None of the other cities are in Minnesota.

Termination of the service here is purely an economic consideration, Neumann confirmed. He added that he believes a commuter airline will be able to do for the community what Republic is unable to do — provide more

Airline Traffic 50% Off Peak

Traffic volume of slightly more than half of the peak established in 1979 is expected for Republic Airlines in Thief River Falls this year, according to unofficial figures kept by local personnel at the airline office at the Thief River Falls regional airport.

Irvin Schmitke, who has been stationed here since January of 1959 and has been interim station manager since Lowell Vraa went on medical leave in July, projected 1981 boardings at 7,000 to 7,200. This would compare to 10,159 last year and a peak of 13,492 in 1979.

Republic has indicated to Thief River Falls city officials that it will file a notice of intent to suspend service early next week with the civil aeronautics board in Washington, D.C. The airline cites economics as the reason it intends to discontinue service here as soon as a replacement carrier can be obtained.

Boardings through October this year totaled 5,944 unofficially at the airport as compared with 8,757 for the same 10-month period a year ago. November boardings at 420 through Tuesday are expected to ease over the 500 mark by the end of the month. Last time that the airline had fewer than 500 boardings per month was in September of 1969 when 475 passengers boarded planes here.

In the record year of 1979 when monthly boardings averaged over 1,100 per month, the record monthly total of 1,194 was recorded in June. Second high month in the 28-year history of the commercial airline service here was December of 1978 with 1,188 passengers boarded and one flight with 13 passengers scheduled was canceled due to fog. That flight would have pushed the total over the 2,000 mark. Lowest total for any month this year was 516 in April.

North Central Airlines began commercial service here Jan. 1, 1953. It became Republic Airlines on July 1, 1978, after merger with Southern Airlines. Other Republic employees here in addition to Schmitke are Vern Kappes, who has served about 18 years in the local station; Gary Novotny, who has been here about two years; and Don Houser, who became part of Republic's staff following merger with Hughes Air West and has been here only a few months.

Thanksgiving Dinner And 420 Lbs. Of Turkey

by Bonnie Wentzel
Times Reporter

The majority of us are probably familiar with a statement that became popular on television not long ago, that went something like this: "Hey, Grandpa! What's for supper?"

With that, Grandpa would proceed to utter the ingredients to a secret concoction that one would scarcely care to come into contact with.

Well, suppose Grandpa changed his recipe slightly and uttered the following menu to be prepared for a Thanksgiving dinner:

420 pounds of turkey, 18 No. 10 tins (12-13 cups) of instant potatoes, four No. 10 cans of pumpkin, 45 dozen eggs, 15 gallons of milk, eight quarts of whipped topping, 85 loaves of bread, and 14 No. 10 cans of cranberries.

That's the menu Kay Fleegel, food supervisor, estimated for us when we asked her how much food was served to students in school district 563 during their Thanksgiving "feast" last week. School district includes Knox, Northrop, Washington and Mark Twain elementary schools, Franklin Middle school, Lincoln high school and the St. Hilaire school.

Number of meals served that day was 1,480, up 10 per cent from the number of meals served on an 'ordinary' school day. That figure compares with an average of 1,385 meals served per day in October (although there were only eight days of school that month due to the strike), and the 1,321 meals per day served in September, when students attended school for 21 days.

Thanksgiving dinner at the schools is served a week before the actual Thanksgiving holiday, according to Fleegel, to give students a week break between the two meals of turkey most of them will have.

Hazardous Waste Site Reviewed At Goodridge

Allen Eide, Member
Waste Management Board

Goodridge area residents asked a number of unanswerable questions and received a number of "I don't know" answers at a meeting on hazardous waste disposal sites held Tuesday evening in the Goodridge school gymnasium.

Residents of eastern Marshall and western Beltrami counties are concerned about the location of four out of 20 candidate sites for hazardous waste disposal in the area. Three of the sites are in eastern Marshall county and one in Beltrami county.

Minnesota's waste management board is charged with siting a hazardous waste disposal area in the state and has initiated an involved selection process. A large number of potential sites have been considered based on criteria suggested by the public and accepted by the board. The list has been narrowed to 20 and will be further reduced to six by the spring of 1982. No county will have more than one of the final six sites selected.

Special guest at the Tuesday meeting in Goodridge was Allen Eide, who represents the Seventh Congressional district as a member of the waste management board. It was Eide's intention to answer as many questions as possible about the board and the site selection process, but frequently questions asked were of the "what if?" variety for which answers are not available

Eide explained that preference is being given by the board to have the generators of hazardous waste reduce the amounts of waste produced as much as possible. He projected that up to 90 per cent of the volume of hazardous waste produced now can be eliminated through actions by the companies which generate the waste products and by further processing.

Processing of the remaining amount after industry reduction is the next goal of the board, insuring that as much of the waste as possible is incinerated, stabilized, neutralized or encapsulated to reduce further hazard. Disposal of the remaining waste is the final concern of the board.

Studies are now being conducted to determine the amount of hazardous waste being produced in the state and to project how this can be reduced through generator activity and processing, Eide said. An unknown is how much hazardous waste Minnesota can expect to receive from other states, since it is obligated to accept such wastes when prepared to handle them. Some industries in the state now ship their hazardous waste to disposal or processing sites in Illinois and Wisconsin.

People at the Goodridge meeting voiced primary concern about consideration of the area sites and the apparent unwillingness of the waste management staff to consider information presented about the sites. Testimony about such things as high water table, frequent flooding, porous soil types in the area and other considerations seem to be ignored, according to opinions presented at the session Tuesday.

Eide said that the board has established several rules in site selection, among which are: (1) The board will compile its own information and (2) the board will not take the path of least resistance in establishing a site. This does not mean that staff should ignore information called to its attention, he said, but it does mean that contentions made about a site will be double checked.

Soil borings are now being taken of the 20 sites considered as candidate sites, he said. The Beltrami county site

Tami E. Skibicki And Bradley S. Kosel Wed

Tami Elizabeth Skibicki and Bradley Steven Kosel exchanged marriage vows recently at St. Bernard's Catholic church in this city.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Skibicki of this city. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kosel of St. Cloud and formerly of Thief River Falls.

Rev. David Super officiated at the double ring ceremony with the bride's brother-in-law Harry Larson as reader. Christie LaCoursiere was the organist and Michele Kaspari sang "Annie's Song," "Wedding Song," and "God, A Woman and A Man."

The bride, escorted to the altar by her father, was attired in a floor-length gown of white satin fashioned in Mediterranean styling with numerous ruffles gracing the hemline and train. Lace with seed pearl accents outlined the Queen Anne neckline and formed the sheer bishop sleeves gathered into lace cuffs. A headpiece of matching lace and seed pearls held her hand-rolled, scalloped-edged, chapel-length veil. She carried a lace trimmed handkerchief together with a cascading bouquet featuring five white orchids, lilies of the valley and white miniature carnations, accented with sea-mist green babies' breath. Her drop pearl necklace was a gift from the groom.

Linda Larson of St. Cloud attended here sister as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Deb Wedger and Sue Brekke of this city. Their identical gowns of sea-mist green satin were styled with spaghetti strapped fitted bodices layered with matching chiffon tunics with side slits. They carried bouquets of white miniature carnations, lilies of the valley, sand beige babies' breath and ivory and white satin ribbon streamers.

Flower girl was Robin Marie Larson, a niece of the bride. She wore a white satin and chiffon gown in 1918 style featuring a midcalf-length skirt. Sea-mist green satin bows accented the off-the shoulder ruffle and shirred ruffled hemline. Her bouquet, identical to the bridesmaids', was in miniature.

Attending the groom as best man was Mark Thorstad. Groomsmen were Mike and Jeff Kosel, brothers of the groom. Serving as ushers were Kyle Anderson and Scott Bergland. All wore After-six tuxedos with the groom in white and his attendants in sand beige. Their boutonnieres were lilies of the valley and babies' breath.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Skibicki selected a sea-mist qiana floor-length gown with a V neckline and full bodice gathered by a cummerbund. Complementing her gown was a white orchid corsage. An identical corsage graced the floor-length gown of pale pink crepe worn by the groom's mother. Her gown, styled with a blouson bodice, was topped by a sheer lace jacket.

Barbara Dubisar was the bride's personal attendant.

Honor guests were Mr. and Mrs. Richard Battleson, Cheektowaga, N.Y., uncle and aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Effieley of St. Cloud, grandmother of the groom.

Sue Stigen presided at the guest book and Mrs. Sylvia Battleson served as flower attendant. Serving as gift attendants were Gary Laidley and Val Grafstrom, friends of the couple, and Nancy Battleson, cousin of the bride.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception and dance was held at the Thief River Falls Country club. Mrs. Lillian Rux catered the reception and the "Back Behind the Barn Boys" provided music for dancing. Punch was served by Jenny and Amy Dubisar, nieces of the bride.

The four-tiered, white wedding cake was decorated with yellow roses with sea-mist green accents. Topping the cake were two satin and pearl wedding bells featuring seed pearl garlands that flowed down on either side to white doves that topped the two-tiered, heart-shaped, chocolate cakes. The cake, baked and decorated by Mrs. Margaret Rupprecht, was cut and served by Mrs. Marie Erickson. Mrs. Pearl Battleson, an aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Pearl Wold poured the coffee.

Following a wedding trip to Madora, N.D., and to the Black Hills of South Dakota, the couple is now at home in this city at the Country Acre apartments. The bride is employed at Oakland Park Nursing home, and the groom at T.G. Sporting Goods. Photo, Lund Photography, Roseau

Thomas G. Ziemans Make Home In Bemidji

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gene Ziemann are at home in Bemidji following an exchange of marriage vows at St. Bernard's Catholic church in Thief River Falls and a wedding trip to the Brainerd area.

The bride, the former Mary Dorene Enge is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leland Enge of this city. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Ziemann of International Falls.

Rev. James Bernauer officiated at the double ring ceremony attended by approximately 250 relatives and friends. As the bride was escorted to the altar by her father, Mrs. Carl Nordvall played "Theme from Ice Castles." During the ceremony, Jane Olson, a friend of the bride, sang "Walk Hand in Hand," "The Lord's Prayer," and "Wedding Song."

Forming the background for the wedding party were candelabra, two matching baskets filled with gladioli, daisies and pastel carnations. An arrangement of greenery graced the altar. Multi-colored ribbons marked the front pews reserved for the immediate families.

The bride was attired in an empire styled gown designed with a pleated floor-length skirt and train. The fitted bodice, enhanced with lace and seed pearls, featured a Queen Anne neckline and long bishop sleeves. A lace headpiece, embroidered with pearls, held her veil of bridal illusion. She carried a bouquet of cascading spider plants, accented with stephanotis, daisies and babies' breath.

Eileen Weinhold served her cousin as personal attendant.

Maid of honor was Karen Imgrund of Engelwood, Colo., a friend of the bride. She wore a floor-length gown of yellow pastel crepe with a matching chiffon overlay. In her hair was a cluster of daisies. She carried a colonial bouquet of fresh daisies, carnations, babies breath and greenery.

Similar attire in various pastel colors was worn by the other attendants, Linnae Enge, sister-in-law of the bride; Tammy Erickson of Ada, and Kristi Gerardy, friends of the bride.

Serving as flower girl was Amy Enge, a niece of the bride. She wore a floor length gown of white dotted Swiss with eyelet trim. She carried a basket filled with daisies, carnations and babies' breath. The rings were carried by Christopher Howe, Bemidji, a nephew of the groom. Like the groom, he wore a white tuxedo with a stephanotis boutonniere.

Best man was Mike Ziemann of Little Falls, a brother of the groom. Groomsmen were Bruce Raboin and Gary Sampson of International Falls, and Paul Phelps, friends of the groom. Ushers were Bob Enge of Wyoming, Mark and Jim Enge, brothers of the bride, and Gary Sommers, Walker, a friend of the groom. Serving as junior ushers and acolytes were Aaron Enge, nephew of the bride, and Mike Mackai, nephew of the groom. All wore silver gray tuxedos with white carnation boutonnieres tipped in pastel colors, matching the gowns worn by the bridesmaids.

The mother of the bride wore an aqua floor-length gown topped by a matching long-sleeved jacket. The groom's mother was attired in a floor-length gown of pink crepe featuring long sleeves in a matching lace. Their corsages were of daisies, carnations and babies' breath.

Honor guests were Mrs. Selma Enge, grandmother of the bride, and Mrs. Esther Ziemann, grandmother of the groom.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents hosted a reception in the church parlors with Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Enge, uncle and aunt of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Mackai, brother-in-law and sister of the groom, as hosts and hostesses. Cindy Howe, a sister of the groom, presided at the guest book and Patty Aberle and Karen Hunt, cousins of the bride, ladled the punch. The traditional Norwegian groom's cake, made by Marge Hanson, a friend of the bride, was served with the punch.

Centering the serving table was a triple tiered wedding cake featuring a flowing water fountain surrounded by greenery. The cake was decorated with roses in various pastel shades, and topped by a christogram. It was cut by Mrs. Vic Amiot, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Mike Ziemann, sister-in-law of the groom. Pouring coffee were the bride's godmothers: Mrs. Mel Imsdahl, an aunt, and Mrs. Helen Bushaw, a friend of the family.

Waitresses were Lisa, Jennifer and Stacy Glass and Kim and Jenny Olds, friends of the bride. Melissa Mackai, a niece of the groom, arranged the gifts. The flowers were arranged and made by Diane Forsberg, assisted by Marge Hanson and the bride's mother.

A dance at the Elks club followed the reception.

The bride is a graduate of Lincoln high school and the dental assisting program at Bemidji AVTI. She is currently employed as receptionist by Dr. Lee Scotland and Dr. Gary Erickson in Bemidji. The groom is a graduate of the International Falls high school and is attending Bemidji State university, majoring in business. Their home address is 1903 Delton avenue, Bemidji. Oscar Mostroms 40th Anniversary Noted In Kansas

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Mostrom of Lake Stevens, Wash., and formerly of this area, were honored on their 40th wedding anniversary at Hugoton, Kans., at the home of their son, Gary.

The Mostroms were married in Thief River Falls on Oct. 11, 1941 by Rev. J.O. Jacobson of the Evangelical Free church. Mrs. Mostrom is the former Eunice Hamm of Highlanding. Mostrom is also of the area.

The anniversary celebration began with a program with granddaughter Gina singing, "Forever and Ever." Her sister, Casy was pianist. "My Blue Heaven," a song with special meaning for the couple, was sung by Vicky and Don Allen with Mary Allen as accompanist. Highlighting the program was a mock wedding with the couple's son escorting his parents to judge Don Allen with a toy shot gun as Casy, at the piano, played the "Funeral March". The couple's granddaughter, Lisa, served as flower girl.

At the reception that followed, Barbara Shelton served the two-tiered anniversary cake made and decorated by the couple's daughter-in-law, Ginger Mostrom. The cake was decorated with red roses and topped with a minature bride and groom. Janice Porter served the punch.

For the occasion, the couple wore yellow silk roses, gifts from their son and daughter-in-law. They also received a money tree and gifts from relatives and friends.

Present, in addition to Ginger and Gary Mostrom, Casy, Susan, Gina and Lisa, were Jim and Jackie Moss, Eldon and Judy Nichols, Don and Vicky Allen, Barbara, Earl and Mike Shelton, George and Mary Allen, Shirley Hazen, Janice and Gary Porter, Janet and Bill Sutton, Wayne and Eva Reynolds, Harry and Bessie Leonard, Greg and Sherry Morris of Hugoton and Gloria and Ron White of Ulysses.

Unable to attend were the couple's three sons who live in Washington. They are Errol and his wife Linda and daughter Brandie of Bremerton; Dwight and his children, Ranae, Tammie and Dwight, Jr., of Port Orchard; and Dean and his wife Janice and children, Annette, Dean, Jr., and Dale of Ferndale.

SOCIAL NEWS

WCTU Stresses Using Golden Opportunities

"Golden Opportunities" was the theme of the meeting of the Alice Mae Stuart Thief River Falls Women's Christian Temperance Union held Friday afternoon at the community room at the Riverside Terrace apartments.

Mrs. Ruth Haugan was in charge of the devotional meditation, based on Gal. 6:7-10 "Let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." She stated that the Apostle Paul challenged Christians to claim this promise and to use the golden opportunities that God has given. To illustrate her point, she said that even though the Pilgrims' harvest was meager and their needs were great, they were thankful to God for their blessings and shared their harvest with the Indians at the Country's first Thanksgiving. In the Nation's growth to becoming the richest in the world thankfulness to God has been forgotten. America's deepest trouble can be traced to unthankfulness and the error of thinking that wisdom and goodness can be obtained without God's help. She concluded by saying, "We must turn back and use the golden opportunities that God has given America. There is no better time than this Thanksgiving to make use of that opportunity."

Several readings were given. Valborg Hanson read "Social Drinking, a Debit or Credit;" Hildur Lian read "You are a Lobyist," Mrs. Ruth Haugan read "Take the Positive Approach, be a Total Abstainer," and Geneva Overum read the radio releases and the correspondance.

Adding interest to the meeting were the pictures of the Frances Willard school near Janesville, Wis., the national WCTU convention, and the state convention held in Thief River Falls. It was noted that pictures of the local convention were provided by State President Mrs. Ray Saari.

The meeting began with the singing of the hymn, "Give to the Winds" and the signing of cards for Agnes Longren, who was hospitalized, and Geneva Overum whose birthday is Thanksgiving day.

The next meeting of the union will be held December 11 at Valley Home with Rev. Lloyd Heroff and singers presenting the program.

Board Okays Contract; Sets Meet & Confer

board and the bus drivers will begin next week with Harry Sjulson as the board representative involved with these negotiations.

Sjulson and AVTI director Dr. Orley Gunderson reported on the hearing they had attended at the East Grand Forks AVTI regarding a merger bill supported by the Minnesota higher education coordinating board (MHECB). The board is proposing merger of post high school vocational facilities and community colleges. Sjulson and Gunderson reported that consensus at the hearing was that governance of the AVTI system should remain as it is presently, but that changes should be made in AVTI bargaining units.

Resignations were accepted from John Nagle, school psychologist; Daniel Vrudny, drafting and electronics instructor at the Northwest vocational center school; Kirk Oseid, bus driver; and Clara Olson, management aide.

Officially reinstated after lay-off during the teacher strike were the district's bus drivers, aides, pool employees, food service personnel and the school crossing guard. Leaves of absence were approved for Beverly Olson, Mary Ann Almquist, Jean Turtle and Don Hejlik.

School district attorney John Novacek is to begin negotiating with the regional inter-district council (RIC) office at Newfolden to recover some of the local district's capital assets in the regional organization. School District 564, along with several other districts, have dropped out of the RIC organization. The local district is seeking to recover its proportionate share of the unappropriated fund balance at the end of the year in which the district terminated its contract and a similar share of fixed assets of the council.

Board member Greg Pribula proposed the need for the board to become involved in three, five, 10 and 20-year plan. Supt. Robert Block was instructed to discuss the proposal with members of the administrative cabinet and make recommendations to the board at a future meeting.

The board set mileage rates for supervisors, confidential employees and other non-teacher, non-administrative employees at the same rate as that negotiated with the TRFEA for the 1981-1983 school years.

Republic To File Notice Of Suspension

frequent service with smaller aircraft. The larger aircraft which Republic operates are not suitable for frequent service in communities with law passenger volume.

"We would work very closely with any commuter airline which would serve Thief River Falls at our Twin Cities hub," Neumann added. "We have the commuter gate which is right down in our concourse. The carriers are very welcome there. We value the business out of the Thief River Falls community, but since we are unable to generate it, we will work with the commuter airline for joint fares and long haul fares on our airline across the country."

Procedure to be followed after filing of the notice of suspension of service will be for the CAB to respond by making the notice public and giving other carriers until a specified date to indicate their interest in providing service in Thief River Falls. The CAB would also schedule hearings in the community at which time prospective carriers would present their service intentions. Community input and questions would be encouraged but the CAB makes the final determination of which carrier would provide the replacement service.

To assure a smooth transition of service, Neumann said, the CAB would extend Republic's requirement until such time as the selection on, Republic would work with the selected replacement carrier in preparation for the change-over.

In the event that a replacement carrier is not selected by the time the 406 law expires at the end of September, 1982, Republic would continue to provide service under a "hold-in" subsidy provided for under the law. It is Republic's policy to keep the service schedules as convenient as possible during the interim period, Neumann added.

Republic currently has four full-time personnel handling its operations at the Thief River Falls regional airport. In addition to station manager Irvin Schmitke, the staff includes agents Vern Kappes, Gary Novotny and Don Houser.

Provision is made for employees of the airline to transfer within the system. If employees elect to transfer before the suspension of service takes place, the airline provides temporary personnel to handle services until the change-over.

Mayor Bob Carlson of Thief River Falls said he was disappointed that the Republic service appears to be coming to a close much more rapidly than had been anticipated, and added that the city would continue to "fight the suspension of service every step of the way".

Cattle Prices May Gain; Hog Production Cut

Cattle feeders have kept current on marketings this summer. Lower June-August placements should also help the price picture, according to the Minnesota agricultural statistics service.

U.S. cattle slaughter in September was three per cent higher than last year — the 1.9 billion pounds came from a kill of three million head. Following a 12 per cent boost in the tally of cattle slaughtered and a 35-pound boost in average liveweight, Minnesota's beef output gained 16 per cent to 93.9 million pounds.

Although gains in the beef supply should slow down a little, the economy is sluggish and competing meat supplies are large — both will hold down price gains for cattle.

Earlier this year, it looked as though major cutbacks in hog prodcution were ahead. But the September 1 hog and pig report showed that cutbacks in farrowings would be smaller than what was indicated earlier this year.

Hog producers in the corn belt expect lower corn prices, so they aren't cutting back as much as they planned to earlier.

U.S. September hog production fell four per cent from last year as the 7.6 million head slaughtered fell by the same amount. Minnesota's hog liveweight matched last year. A two-pound loss in average weights held down a one per cent gain in hogs slaughtered.

October-December U.S. hog slaughter comes mostly from market hogs that weighed 60-179 pounds in the September 1 hog report. Because this group was down eight per cent, 4th quarter hog slaughter should be down about seven to nine per cent.

For the fourth quarter this year and going into the first quarter next year, U.S. hog prices should average about $47 to $51 per hundred-weight — but price gains will be held in check by increased broiler and turkey supplies.

thief river falls chamber of commerce

REPORT

The Chamber of Commerce was concerned about the appearance of Thief River Falls during the Christmas holidays. Decorations which were purchased by the city some 14 years ago were in poor condition. Each year fewer were put up due to age and weather damage. For this reason, the RBA met with Mayor Carlson and representatives of the city to discuss the purchase of new Christmas decorations for Thief River Falls.

The Chamber of Commerce made a presentation before the full city council, which in turn agreed to purchase $9,800 worth of Christmas decorations, with an additional contribution of $3,000 by the RBA. All the new decorations and pole wraps will be in the downtown area. The existing Christmas decorations, that are in good condition, will be used on highway 59 south. The decorations are now up and will be lit for Thanksgiving.

The Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce was represented on the Minnesota commission on small business. Official delegates at the conference, held in Minneapolis on November 12, 13 and 14, were Everett Ault, Russ Christianson and Jerry Sandstrom.

The purpose of the conference was to discuss recommendations by priority, that were derived from the regional meetings held across the state of Minnesota. These recommendations will be presented to state level legislative and executive action committees. From over 600 recommendations, small business representative delegates gave priority to the top ten. The top three were listed in an article in Monday's Times. The remaining seven are as follows:

(4) Product liability system should be reformed:

(a) Define and lessen liability for products that were altered or misused.

(b) Payments on product liability claims should be spread over the time period that the loss covers, i.e.; rest of the person's life or other time period used in the court case of settlement.

(c) Establish limits of liability and philosophy of "real loss" rather than the current use of "pain and suffering" as a basis of claims.

(d) Set statute of limitations on filing claims.

(e) Require plaintiffs to provide a bond to pay defendent's reasonable legal costs if the plaintiff withdraws or loses the case.

(5) Security laws should be modified to encourage the development of a new security known as a "Small Business Participation Debentures (SBPD'S). An SBPD can provide access to capital for small businesses by allowing terms, rates and payments to vary with the profitability of the company, and can provide that dividends paid to investors are treated as capital gains.

(6) The estate tax should be eliminated to the extent that it exceeds the credit for state taxes on the Federal Estate Tax Return.

(7) Minnesota should establish a public policy that all persons have and shall be protected in, the exercise of the right, freely and without fear of penalty or reprisal, to form, join or assist labor organizations or to refrain from any such activities, i.e.; a right to work law.

(8) All state spending legislation should be tied to a specific revenue source, by combining existing state appropriation and tax committees similar to federal government. All state programs, agencies and departments should be evaluated as to benefit versus cost, i.e., bidding out data processing during peak periods rather than hiring additional personnel.

(9) The set-aside program should be modified to:

(a) Expand set asides to cover virtually all state government purchases.

(b) Reconsider the percentages used in computing the set aside allotment.

(c) Allow flexibility in bids to prevent "specing out" the small or minority businesses.

(d) Form a citizens' advisory group to screen companies applying as small or minority businesses, and to review the types of contracts let under set-aside programs.

(10) Tourism funding should be increased and the program should be expanded to better advertise all four seasons.

Drive Safely Thanksgiving, Says Council

More Minnesotans are killed and injured during the Thanksgiving holiday period than during any other major holiday, according to the Minnesota safety council. There were 10 people killed during the 102-hour holiday period last year, the highest number of fatalities since 1976.

Total traffic accidents, and injuries resulting from those accidents, also escalated last year, with 486 injuries resulting from 2,121 crashes. Hazards of driving in early winter snow, heavy travel, early darkness hours and the effects of drinking and driving are some possible reasons for the increases.

Traffic safety picture to date in 1981, however, is encouraging. Through November 10, there were 636 deaths from traffic accidents in Minnesota compared with 739 a year ago, nearly a 14 per cent decrease. Minnesota safety council hopes that improvement will carry over to the Thanksgiving weekend and estimates that between seven and nine Minnesotans will lose their lives during that holiday period.

Safety council offers some common-sense precautions to help make Thanksgiving safe. Make sure cars are ready for winter driving. A winter checkup, including snow tires, battery check, windshield wipers fully operative, headlights and taillights in working order, an engine tune-up to ensure the car runs safely and efficiently should be as much a part of the holiday plans as baking that pumpkin pie.

It's not a good idea to drink and drive. Those who do should allow one hour to pass for each ounce of alcohol consumed before getting behind the wheel. It's best to ask one person to refrain from drinking to do the driving home after a celebration.

Other defensive driving tactics to avoid auto crashes include turning on headlights at dusk or whenever visibility is limited, driving according to road and weather conditions, starting a trip early to arrive safely, fastening safety belts, and making sure passengers do, too.

Remember to observe posted speed limits. Save yourself for someone special . . . drive 55 mph.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

During this Thanksgiving season those of us who are associated with agriculture are well aware of the difficulties facing this nation's farm families. Rising input costs, lower prices, high interest rates and that old adversary — the weather — have all taken their toll in the past two years.

But as everyone sits down to their Thanksgiving dinners we have much for which to be thankful. While turkey is the traditional meal of the day, beef can be used as an example of how American families fare in purchasing food for the table. On average, an American worker has to work 16 minutes to purchase a pound of beef. In England it takes 57 minutes of work; Russia, 60 minutes; Japan, 174 minutes; China, 455 minutes. That's quite a spread, and we can thank the Reliable American Farmer for keeping us on the low end.

The same kind of comparison applies to the percentage of disposable income spent on food. Here in America it averages 14 per cent these days. In Brazil it's 41 per cent; in China 60 per cent; 34 per cent in Russia and 23 per cent in Japan. Again, thanks to the productivity of the Reliable American Farmer we can purchase the world's best food for the least amount of money.

So, as we sit down to our Thanksgiving meals this year, let's add one more line to our prayers of thanks. Let's say thank you to the Reliable American Farmer who worked so hard to help put that food on the table at a reasonable cost.

Sincerely,
-s-Cecil B. Anderson

Public Hearing On Area Aging Plan Dec. 9

Northwest Regional Development commission will hold a public hearing at the commission office, at 425 Woodland Avenue, Crookston, on Wednesday, December 9, at 1 p.m. to solicit comments on the 1982 amendments on the 1981-83 area plan for programs on aging.

Plan provides the basis for the expenditure of approximately $550,000. Funds will be used to provide social services, educational programs and to support the commission's upcoming program.

Copies of the amended area plan will be available at the commission office. For further information contact Michael Moore 281-1396.

Grant For Professorship At 'U' Received

Minnesota Medical foundation has received a $250,000 grant from the Northwest area foundation to endow a health services research and teaching professorship at the University of Minnesota.

Professorship in the Center for health services research and the graduate program in hospital and health care administration honors the late William N. Wallace. Wallace, a nationally acclaimed leader in health administration, was president of United Hospitals, St. Paul, until his death in 1980.

Dr. Lyle French, vice president of health sciences at the university, said Wallace contributed greatly in restructuring the health system to enhance equity in the distribution of services. "The William N. Wallace professorship will honor the memory of this pioneer in the health services field and will continue his work through research and teaching at the university's school of public health," French said.

Minnesota Medical foundation raises and disburses private funds for medicine at the University of Minnesota.

'82 Heart Fund Leadership Meet Dec. 3

American heart association, Minnesota Affiliate, Inc. will conduct its 1982 state heart fund leadership conference December 3, at McGuires Inn, Minneapolis, announced Loren Bergo, 1982 state heart fund chairman.

State heart fund volunteers from throughout the state will attend the day-long conference designed to assist volunteers in coordinating the local heart fund campaign in their areas. Theme, "You Make The Difference — Living Proof" will emphasize the role research plays in the prevention, diagnosis, treatment and rehabilitation of heart disease.

Featured speakers will include: Dr. Robert Anderson, professor of surgery, University of Minnesota and chairman of the Minnesota Affiliate's research committee; Dr. Harold Katkov, clinical assistant professor, University of Minnesota; Jim Feeham, Glencoe, a recent heart transplant recipient; and William Unger, chairman of the board of the Minnesota Affiliate.

Other program highlights will include coronation of the 1982 heart fund princess; Dr. John McBride, president of the Minnesota Affiliate; Loren Bergo, 1982 state heart fund chairman; tour of the facilities of Medtronic, Inc.; mini cardiopulmonary resuscitation (C.P.R.) course, blood pressure screening and a planned giving seminar.

"The conference provides mini-workshops and an opportunity for the volunteers to exchange ideas and information," said Bergo. "Sometimes the best information is a 'do's and dont's list' from other volunteers. Success of the state heart fund campaign determines the amount of support that is available for research, community programs and professional and public education programs in Minnesota," Bergo said.

Conducted year-round, the state heart fund campaign is highlighted in February, heart month, with its house-to-house campaign. In February, 60,000 Minnesotan volunteers call on their neighbors to receive contributions and distribute lifesaving information on heart disease.

American heart association, Minnesota Affiliate, is the only state wide health agency dedicated to the reduction of premature death and disability caused by heart and blood vessel disease.

Although efforts by the American heart association have resulted in a 20 per cent decline in heart disease deaths over the last 10 years, heart disease still claimed the lives of 975,550 Americans, including 17,000 Minnesotans last year. Only through continued efforts of research, community programs and professional and public education, will America's number one health problem be controlled.

Cook Holiday Feast Safely, Says Council

It's hard to separate Thanksgiving from the savory aroma of turkey, sweet potatoes and pumkin pie. While cooking this year's holiday feast, the Minnesota safety council urges the following tips:

(1.) Don't wear loose sleeves around a kitchen range. Sleeves ignite easily by both gas and electric range burners.

(2.) Use potholders, not towels, to move pans on the range. Towels may come close to the burner and catch fire.

(3.) Use the proper sized burner for each pan. Small pans on large burners leave exposed sources of heat which may ignite clothing.

(4.) Learn how to light a gas stove properly. If gas is smelled, turn off all controls and open a window or door — then call the gas company.

(5.) If a grease fire begins in a pan, turn off the burner, cover the pan with a lid — don't try to carry the grease to the sink. If using a fire extinguisher for a grease fire, be sure that it's a dry chemical model.

An innovatine training course designed to offer both classroom and hands-on training in handling hazardous materials will be conducted December 1 in the Twin Cities.

Course, sponsored by the Minnesota safety council, will meet industry's need to train employees who are responsible for safety and fire protection, and other employees, in handling hazardous materials, hazardous material spills and fires.

Course participants will learn to fight flammable liquid spills and fires using hand-held and wheel fire extinguishers. They will use almost every type of extinguishing agent during their training ground experience.

For details on course registration, write or call the Minnesota Safety Council, 555 Wabasha Street, Suite 102, St. Paul, MN 55102, 612-291-9150. Course participation is limited to 20 people.

KAY FLEEGEL, food supervisor for school district 564 in Thief River Falls estimates that 420 pounds of turkey were served to students within the district last week during the schools' Thanksgiving dinner. Thanksgiving dinner is served at the schools one week early so students aren't as likely to have turkey two days in a row, she said.

Radioactive Waste Plan Is Due By 1986

Low-level radioactive waste policy act gives Minnesota three choices for dealing with low-level waste the state produces: establish a waste disposal site in the state; join an interstate compact to provide a regional waste side inside or outside Minnesota; or face a possible end to all medical, industrial and utility activities that produce low-level radioactive waste.

Rich Paton, a staff person from the governor's task force on low-level radioactive waste, told the House environment committee on November 17 that Minnesota has been shipping waste to a site in Washington state. But that site, and the two other sites in the country, may not take Minnesota waste after 1986.

After 1986, the federal policy act allows states that have formed compacts to deal with their waste to refuse wastes from states that haven't done that.

Paton told the committee that Minnesota health commissioner George Petterson is exploring two groups of states that want to form compacts in the Midwest, to see if Minnesota could agree to compact provisions of either one of them.

Low-level radioactive waste comes from hospitals that use radioactive materials for tracers and in cancer treatment, industries that produce things like smoke detectors and calibrating instruments, and utilities–which discard tools, paper waste and protective clothing that have low levels of radioactivity in them. It doesn't include spent fuel rods from nuclear power plants.

Subcommittee Gives OK To Racing Bill

A special Minnesota House subcommittee met on November 18 in St. Paul and unanimously passed on to the full committee on general legislation and veteran's affairs a bill calling for a constitutional amendment to allow pari-mutuel racing in Minnesota. Originally, the bill called for allowing only horse racing, but the subcommittee amended that to eliminate the work, "horse", mainly to also allow for dog racing.

The subcommittee held meetings around the state to get the feelings of Minnesotans from smaller communities. At the November 18 hearing, people from horse breeding and horse racing associations spoke in favor of the measure. They argued that they spend too much time and money out of the state to work their hobbies and businesses. They said it would be a great boon to Minnesota's economy if a horse racing industry would develop in the state.

Jacques Budahn of the Minnesota Harness Racing association, said, "If Wisconsin puts in a track near Hudson, we would have everyone spending all their money over there."

Other people opposed the bill on moral grounds, fearing crime and corruption would follow. Verna Hamilton, Minnesota Farm Bureau, argued that her organization opposes legalized gambiling because it would increase the cost of police protection and put more people on the welfare roles, offsetting any money it would raise for the state.

Author of the bill, Rep. Leo Reding answered opposition by saying both South Dakota and Nebraska have pari-mutuel racing with no evidence of an increase in crime.

ONLY HALF of the 180 dolls included in Inga Geving's collection are pictured above. Mrs. Geving, who was named woman of the year recently by the local chapter of the Business and Professional Women's club, has named each doll after a friend. "I see a different person in each doll," she said during a recent interview at her home.

Inga Geving Named Woman Of The Year

And, yes, Inga has saved each card and photograph received from her sons and daughters. "I need another book," she smiled, as she held the bulging packet of memories.

Many of her children continue to join her for the holidays. This year for Thanksgiving she will have nine Vietnamese sons with her. "When they have a vacation they come and stay here," she said. "It's home."

As Inga has stated, she has her work at the village, and without being able to spend time at her "second" home, her life would be incomplete. "I have to do something," she said. "If I had to sit home I think I'd be climbing the walls!"

Inga has been president of the Pennington county historical society for the past 11 years. During her years as president, the Pennington county Pioneer Village has witnessed the arrival of a schoolhouse, church, store, barber and beauty shop, blacksmith shop, four log houses, museum, telephone house, Soo Line and Burlington Northern depots, and two cabooses.

Once a deed to the grounds at the former sewage disposal plant was obtained, following Thief River Falls city council approval, and monies obtained through the Pennington county commissioners, improvements began. "There was a shortage of funds then, and the commissioners realized we must preserve our history," Inga said.

She is grateful to both city and county groups, as well as to others, including L.B. Hartz, who donated $11,600 for the construction of a fence around the village to protect it. (She worked hard on a county history book and reminds area residents to continue sending stories to the society so that a second history book can be compiled).

Inga's thoughts about preserving our history developed when she witnessed, with concern, a church in Thief River Falls ready to be bulldozed — the same time when artifacts, nearly forgotten, were housed in a small basement room at the Pennington county courthouse.

Inga has been a member of the Sow and Hoe garden club since it was organized, acting as the club's president for the past 10 years. She helped organize the 13th district of the Minnesota Horticultural society and was elected its first president. She has received the state award of merit, the distinguished service award, and an honorary life membership in that society. She is a member of the Rocksbury Homemakers club, Moccasin garden club and is very active as a member of Trinity Lutheran church, as Sunday school teacher, member of the choir, church women and circle.

"I think one of the things I enjoy most is the church choir," she said, "and the historical society. Whether I'm happy or sad I can work at the village pulling weeds and not hurt anyone. The more good I do the better I feel." She compares her flowers to the dolls who always smile when she talks to them and who never say "anything mean."

Inga often arises at 7 a.m. to make her way to the village to weed and pray. "If I have a problem I always have a better day if I do that," she said.

Inga's caring attitude began when she was young, she reminisced, when she always wanted to be elf. "I thought if I'd do good things something would touch me and I'd have pointed shoes and a hat, and I could fly around and do things without anyone knowing."

She also wanted to be a missionary. But since then she has realized that one can be an elf and a missionary right here. "When I'm out at the village, no one knows I'm there. The flowers just nod and smile," she said. "I've realized I don't need pointed shoes to do good things."

Our woman of the year has held other positions in her lifetime as well as those we have discussed here. For 13 years she drove a delivery and pick-up truck for Narverud Cleaners, traveling as far north as Roseau and as far south as Shevlin.

Inga left that job 14 years ago to become a clerk at Piggly Wiggly. From there she went to the Ben Franklin store, and then to Ace Hardware.

Inga doesn't feel she is one to be "fussed" about. "I'd much rather be at the village by myself," she professed, although she said she "couldn't believe" the award she received recently.

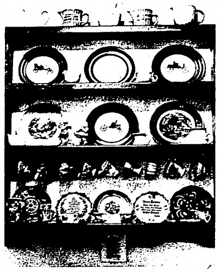
"What I do I do because I like it," she added. "God expects us to do things for our church and family."

Inga believes history must be preserved. "It doesn't mean much to some people now but it will 50 years from now," she said.

She lives by a philosophy she has learned: "Whatever you do, whatever you say, do some kindness along the way, and pass it on."

"If we all did that it would be a beautiful world," she said.

AT WORK in her "second" home is Inga Geving, who was recently named woman of the year by the local chapter of the Business and Professional Women's club. Inga's second home is the Pennington county pioneer village, where she spends a great deal of time "preserving" history. "It doesn't mean much to some people now but it will 50 years from now," she said during a recent interview. Inga has been president of the Pennington county historical society for the past 11 years.



COLLECTIONS are many in the home of Inga Geving, although the woman of the year says she's not really a "collector." "You get things from friends and they're special and you want to keep them," she said during a recent visit to her home. Mrs. Geving was named woman of the year recently by the local chapter of the Business and Professional Women's club. Her collections of plates, cups and pitchers received as birthday gifts and from friends, are carefully displayed in their selected niches in her home.

Sunflower Oil Shows Energy Efficiency

Sunflower oil has proven its energy efficiency by placing first in a national challenge of the fuels.

With the help of a converted diesel truck engine in a jeep body, sunflower oil was declared the most energy-efficient fuel in the recent future fuels challenge rally.

In the Los Angeles to New York City drive, sunflower oil outperformed such fuels as ethanol alcohol, vegetable oil, wood, electricity and solar hydrogen.

"We chose sunflower oil as our fuel based on its strong potential as a crop in the future," said winning driver Bob Harmon.

Harmon, of Placerville, Ca. is owner of a company which produces custom vehicles powered with French-made diesel truck engines. He became aware of sunflower a year and a half ago.

"My friends in agriculture told me sunflower is a good hardy crop with a better oil yield than any other oil crop except peanuts," Harmon said. "This kept with the rally theme of testing fuels that would be available in the future."

Harmon was also influenced by the potential of people growing sunflower oil for their own fuel use. He intends to produce his own crop next year with the help of a hybrid sunflower company.

Engine used in the future fuels rally used sunflower oil which had been degummed but was not highly refined. Using oil in this near-crude stage was possible because Harmon's conversion features were aimed at utilizing oil in its most inexpensive state.

"We couldn't see the reality of using oil that would cost $5 a gallon to produce," he said.

Harmon's conversion features included enlarged filters, a radiator heat-exchanger to keep the fuel warmed and thin and an indirect injection chamber to atomize the fuel to mix with heated air produced by the turbo-charged engine.

Harmon estimated the conversion cost at $400 but stressed the importance of beginning with a well-designed turbo engine.

Farmers Union Head Speaks At Convention

A "new day" for agriculture is emerging in the 1980's, but it is a period that poses the stiffest challenge farmers have faced in decades, Cy Carpenter, president of the Minnesota Farmers Union (MFU) said in Minneapolis Sunday.

Speaking to the delegates at the 40th annual MFU convention, Carpenter charged that farmers today are being threatened by manipulative forces from outside of agriculture and by policies that deny them the tools and farm programs needed to meet today's economics challenges.

"In the 1980s agriculture is faced by a greater dependence on scarce and costly capital and by greater control of the food industry by outside conglomerate interests," Carpenter said. "Instead of 'food for peace' today it's food for international politics."

Those changing conditions are being added to the problem conditions left over from the 1970s, he said, bigger and expensive farm machinery, inflated land prices, and scarce energy supplies at "stranglehold prices."

The new agricultural policies of the present administration and congress are not simply inadequate for today's challenges, Carpenter said, "They are unacceptable. They will allow, if not cause the destruction of family farm agriculture."

"We cannot accept prices below cost of production.

"We cannot accept increasing soil erosion with a reduction in public support.

"We cannot accept food being used as an international political ploy — with farmers standing all the risk and all the cost.

"We cannot accept the agriculture department being relegated to a second rate position in the cabinet, beneath the State Department, the Defense Department and the OMB, and neither can this nation.

"We cannot allow any weakening or interference with farmer cooperatives and their ability to provide needed services to farm families and rural communities."

Changes in these policies will not come quickly nor easily, the Farmers Union leader said, but that should not deter farmers and rural Americans from demanding those changes.

"We must be honest and recognize that many, if not most, farmers voted for the present administration and congress, whose stated 'policy' was to 'eliminate farm programs' and 'get the government out of agriculture,'" he continued.

"That 'policy' is now being forcefully implemented. How do farmers like this policy now?" he asked. "Are you really better off than you were two years ago? The answer is a resounding 'No'."

The farm leader predicted that change will come, growing out of the severity of the economic situation now facing agriculture and working people, and by the recognition that government can be properly utilized to improve those economic conditions.

"I believe we have a one-term President and a one-term governor. . . because of the 'policies' they are advocating," he said, adding that policy changes will only come through personal involvement.

"Farmers must not sit on their tractors and watch the rest of the world direct American agricultural policy. Farmers cannot ignore their political parties. We cannot take our farm cooperatives and farm organizations for granted. It's time for farmers to sharpen and use these tools — to join and participate in them, to demand action and to provide direction."

300 POUNDS of potatoes can be cooked in a pressurized steam kettle like the one pictured above used in cafeterias in Thief River Falls schools. Kettles were especially useful last Thursday when 1,480 meals were served in schools in district 564 during the annual Thanksgiving dinner. At Lincoln high school and at Knox elementary school (where food is delivered) the cooks prepared 147 pounds of turkey, according to Jeannette Stoltman, head cook at Lincoln.

A HEAD COOK's job means "working a lot ahead," according to Mae Breiland, head cook at Franklin middle school in Thief River Falls. When Thanksgiving dinner was served students in School District 564 last week, turkeys (all nine of them) for that school, Mark Twain elementary school and the St. Hilaire school, had to be taken out of the freezer Tuesday, roasted over night, and deboned Wednesday so the meat could be cut into cubes for the dinner Thursday.

Winona Judge Appointed To Supreme Court

Gov. Al Quie has announced he will appoint Judge Glenn E. Kelley of Winona, a 12-year veteran of the district court bench, as associate justice of the Minnesota Supreme Court.

Kelley, 60, will replace Justice Douglas Amdahl, who was named in August as successor to Robert Sheran, who will resign as chief justice on December 18.

"Glenn Kelley is a very thoughtful, highly respected, capable judge," Quie said at a Capitol news conference. "He is recognized by all who know him for these qualities. He brings with him years of experience as a fair judge and competent lawyer. I expect him to be an outstanding asset to the court."

Kelly was appointed as a district court judge for the Third Judicial District in 1969. Previously, he worked 21 years for the Austin law firm of Alderson, Catherwood, Kelley and Ondov, where he was a partner.

Born in St. Edward, Neb., Kelley was graduated from high school in Aberdeen, S.D. He received a bachelor's degree from Northern state college in Aberdeen. In 1948, he received his law degree from the University of Michigan law school, Ann Arbor, and continued post-graduate work at the law-science institute in Chicago and New York.

Kelley received the purple heart and other awards for his service in the U.S. army air corps from 1943-45.

Kelley will be sworn in December 18. His annual salary will be $56,000. He is the third supreme court justice Quie has appointed in his term as governor. Justices Amdahl and John Simonett were appointed in July 1980.

However, Kelley is the first justice to be appointed after review by a merit selection committee. Quie established an eight-member committee to search for an associate justice last summer.

Earlier this month, the committee, composed of four representatives of the legal and judicial professions and four public members appointed by the governor, recommended five nominees to the governor. Kelley was one of those nominees.

In 1979, Quie implemented the merit selection process for county and district court appointments.

MAP Relocates Central Office To New Prague

Midwest Assistance Program, Inc. (MAP), a non-profit technical assistance organization, has relocated its central office to New Prague, from Pierre, SD.

MAP staff provide technical assistance, without charge, to very small, rural communities in development of water and wastewater systems. Most of MAP's client communities are under 500 population. Services consist of helping through the process of assessing needs, planning, financing of facilities and engineering design. MAP, however, does not replace need for private engineering service.

Because small communities usually cannot afford paid staff, it is difficult for them to be aware of everything that needs to be done in developing water and sewer facilities. MAP's technical assistance makes this process easier.

MAP also works closely with Community Action Agencies and seeks to involve these agencies in helping elderly and poor find ways to afford costs of connecting to community water and wastewater facilities.

MAP is one of six regional technical assistance centers located throughout the United States. Its services are available to communities included in a six-state area including Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana and North Dakota. South Dakota, Nebraska and Wyoming were recently dropped from the agency's service area due to federal budget cuts.

Additional information on MAP and services they provide may be obtained by writing to: Midwest Assistance Program, Inc., P.O. Box 81, New Prague, MN 56071 or calling (612) 758-4334.

Senators Meet With Reagan About Budget

Senator Rudy Boschwitz led a delegation of freshman Republican Senators to the White House to discuss the budget with President Reagan, David Stockman, and James Baker recently.

"We expressed our feeling that we should continue the progress that we made on the budget earlier this year," Sen. Boschwitz said. "The President, however, wants to wait on the budget until his budget message of January 15.

"We have some reservations about that because it means that the Senate will not act on the work of the budget committee until June or July," he added. "That's too long to wait. We have a second budget resolution currently before us. We could act on that, but unfortunately it doesn't look like we are going to."

Troop 59 Has Honors Given At Meeting

Members of Boy Scout Troop 59 served as color guard for the opening of the fall court of awards recently at Zion Lutheran church. Billy Nygaard and Greg Hall were the flag bearers. Chris Belmont led the flag pledge.

Scoutmaster Jim Hoks welcomed all and shared thoughts on "He's Not Finished With Me Yet." He also had Mike Melby, last summer's senior patrol leader, tie the Honor Unit Ribbon of 1981 to the troop flag. Mike then presented honor unit patches to all the scouts.

Melby, master of ceremonies, also presented "Big Hand" awards to all the scouting parents who helped make the recent spaghetti dinner a successful fund raiser.

Senior patrol leader Jim Van Schaick, led the boys in the scout law with Tony Quevedo reading the meanings and John Giles lighting the candles. Jim also presented hiking skill awards to Andy Melby, John Giles, Tony Quevedo, Greg Hall, Chris Belmont, Mark Borsheim and Eric Groslie. This was the last requirement for the boys to earn before Scoutmaster Hoks advanced them in rank to Second Class. David Novak also received his rank advancement to First Class.

Printing merit badge was presented to Mark Borsheim by assistant scoutmaster Jim Giles. Mark had given each of the boys a copy of his word search game listing several of the merit badges.

John Giles and Mark Borsheim acted out the skit of "The Pigeon and the Hawk."

Traveling trophy was given to Jim Van Schaick by Billy Nygaard. This is a special award passed on to the scout who has added Scout Spirit to Troop 59.

Council Okays Rate Increase

City Council approved a raise in utility rates at their regular meeting held Tuesday in council chambers at City Auditorium.

Superintendent of Utilities John T. Anderson presented the proposed approximately 10 per cent increase in electric rates stating that it was "consistent with the purchase cost to us and overall cost of operating." On questioning by Alderman Dr. Don Goodrich, he stated that the costs were divided "about half and half" between purchasing and operating.

Goodrich questioned whether it was wise to raise rates to commercial users at a time when they were trying to attract industry to the city. Other aldermen noted that "someone" (the private consumer) would have to pick up the costs if industry were given a break. Anderson explained that the increase had been made "pretty much across the board", to all consumers, noting that trying to do it any other way would be like "opening a can of worms."

After some discussion, council voted to approve the rate increase, to be effective on the January billing, with Goodrich voting against, commenting, "I just think the public should have a chance to complain."

Anderson also announced that they were "having problems with the quality of the water again" and suggested they hire a consulting engineer to study the problem and make a proposal on how to correct it. An estimated cost of $13,500, "strictly to analyze the situation . . . not to provide plans and specifications" was felt to be "a lot of money" by Goodrich. Anderson noted that the problems with water meeting quality standards had been going on for a long time and had cost a lot of money without a satisfactory solution, commenting "it's time to regroup and go forward from here." Council voted to hire Black and Veach, consulting engineers, Kansas City, MO. to do the study.

Senior Citizens News

Thursday, Nov. 19th was our last meeting at our center for the month of November. There were 15 who registered and we were happy to have Bertha Fredrickson of Thief River Falls, with us again, also Esther Storeby who was a lunch guest.

Bertha brought us some items she had made at home, which Polly prized and put for sale.

Some ladies were taking off the black covering on Arctic scraps to get at the soft fluffy stuff for pillow stuffing. Others filled some pairs of bed pillows and others sewed up the ends. We have a stack of pillows now so if you need a good pair or perhaps want a useful gift for someone for Christmas you know where to go and buy a pair, also have quilts for sale and many other smaller items which make nice gifts any time of the year. We enjoy having visitors and you can look over our items for sale and buy if you so desire, and if you just want to come and look and don't buy, we will still enjoy having you visit us.

Irene gave two door prizes that Polly and Mabel Stromberg won, Ruth Anderson received Mildred's gift, Anna Rud received Ida's, and Ida received Ruth Anderson's.

These certificates come in gift folders, are non-perishable and may be mailed if desired.

There are currently 28 banks in the state of Minnesota who handle beef gift certificates provided as a service for the beef industry. A traveling trophy will be awarded to the bank selling the largest amount of certificates from November 1 to January 1. Cattlemen are encouraged to participate with the Minnesota CowBelles in this promotion.

Large posters listing participating banks and letters explaining the program are being distributed throughout Minnesota where Minnesota CowBelles are active.

Mass Casualty Drill Conducted

Northwestern hospital services conducted a mass casualty drill on Friday to simulate an area disaster and give hospital personnel experience in handling a large number and variety of injuries.

Simulated in the drill was a gas explosion at the curling club building on the Pennington county fairgrounds in Thief River Falls. Playing the roles of injured people were 21 members of the Silverton 4-H club who were made up with mock injuries prior to sounding of the alert.

Evaluated in the test was the competency of ambulance personnel in diagnosing injuries and determining priorities in transporting injured to the hospital as well as the utilization of medical staff and other hospital personnel in handling patients transported to the hospital.

In addition to those "patients" transported by ambulance, several of the less seriously "injured" were brought to the emergency unit by private car. Their "injuries" and condition were checked by medical personnel on hand the the students were referred to other areas of the hospital to receive or await treatment.

Mrs. Sharon Russell, nursing in-service director at the hospital, said that the hospital is required to conduct one large-scale and one smaller scale drill per year as part of its preparedness training. She also complimented the students participating for their acting to add to the realism of the drill.

"When everyone recognizes that this is an exercise and that no one is really in danger, it is sometimes difficult to treat the drill in a very serious manner," she said. "But the students helped in that regard and the alert does serve as a periodic check for us to determine any major needs, difficulties or deficiencies. In all, this alert seemed to go quite well."

Silverton 4-H club members participating were Loren Haagenson, Daryl Rupprecht, Kristi Rupprecht, Karla Rupprecht, Dawn Lisa Lappegard, Brenda Russell, Lynn Skibicki, Stacie Skibicki, Jim Hahn, Dale Nelson, Sue Peterson, Lana Wagner, Deb Torgerson, Lisa Torgerson, Jerry Bjerke, Patty Bjerke, Dale Rupprecht, David Spengler, Mike Lindholm, Kim Sorter and Kevin Sorter.

Participation was part of the club's community awareness project.

Applications To Be Received For Heat Aid

Outreach personnel from the Inter-County community council office at Oklee will begin taking applications for heating assistance on November 30, although federal appropriations to assist low income households with rising energy costs are still being determined by congress.

Last year more than 2,100 households in Pennington, Polk and Red Lake counties received energy assistance totaling over $1.5 million. This winter, according to the ICCC office, funds for heating assistance may be cut by 25 per cent, yet the program could potentially assist over 150,000 households statewide.

The heating assistance this year will be closely linked to energy conservation and weatherization services available, as well as other human services program, the ICCC office added.

Persons applying for heating assistance must bring information such as energy account numbers as well as proof of income and medical expenses at the time of application. Income guidelines for the assistance range from $7,616 for a single person to $14,645 for a family of four.

In Pennington county, November 30 through December 4 applications for heating assistance will be by appointment for senior citizens and handicapped only.

Signups will be received for other eligible recipients from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. December 7 at the Northwest regional library in Thief River Falls and December 8, 9 and 10 at the Greenwood cemetery office in the basement of the Thief River Falls city auditorium.

At St. Hilaire applications will be taken from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. December 14 and 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. December 15 at the St. Hilaire council room. In Goodridge applications will be received from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. December 16 and 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. December 17 at the Goodridge hall. No signups will be taken December 21-25 during the Christmas week.

Applications will be taken from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. December 28, 29 and 30 at the Northwest regional library in Thief River Falls. For a listing of schedule for other counties, see the advertisement in this issue.

HOSPITAL STAFF at Northwestern hospital became observers as well as participants during the mass casualty drill conducted Friday. "Patients" were brought to the hospital by ambulance following a simulated gas explosion at the curling club building on the Pennington county fairgrounds. The drill serves to familiarize hospital personnel with the procedures necessary in handling a large number of patients requiring immediate attention. As more "patients" were brought in and the drill continued, many of the people waiting in the above photo were pressed into service.

PATIENT TRANSFER from the receiving area at Northwestern hospital services to the emergency room area for treatment was conducted during the mass casualty exercise stated on Friday. Dr. Peter Johnson leads in this transfer of a "patient" during the exercise. Members of the Silverton 4-H club served as simulated patients as part of their community awareness project.

Okays Waiver For Pipeline From Alaska

Senator Rudy Boschwitz voted with the majority Thursday in passing some conditional waivers for placement of the natural gas pipeline from Alaska to the lower 48 states.

When operational, the pipeline will supply four to five per cent of our natural gas per day from Alaska's Prudehoe bay. The vote allowed that certain restrictions imposed when Congress encated the Alaska natural gas transportation act be waived.

"The decision to support or oppose the waiver package rests on one fundamental question: Does the need for natural gas exceed the potential risk for the consumer?" Boschwitz said. "The conclusion I have reached is yes — because we will need the gas.

"This is an issue of significant consequence for my state," Boschwitz said in a statement prepared for the floor of the Senate. "Minnesota has almost no indigenous energy resources. Being at the end of every line that supplies energy causes concern about having adequate supplies in both the short and long term."

New Freeway Section Opens In Twin Cities

Section of Internstate 35E between I-35W and TH 77 in Dakota county was opened November 17 by the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT); commissioner Richard P. Braun announced.

The 4.5-mile section of the freeway was opened to traffic in the afternoon following dedication ceremonies.

Braun said the new section of I-25E will reduce congestion and delay problems on I-35W and provide additional freeway capacity for the rapidly developing Dakota county area. With its connection to TH 77 — also known as the Cedar Avenue freeway — the new section will also provide additional freeway access to Minneapolis and the Minneapolis-St. Paul international airport.

Completion of the new section is also expected to reduce traffic congestion on both the I-35W bridge between Bloomington and Burnsville and on the Mendota bridge.

Proposes Bill On Hazardous Chemical Jobs

"Workers are becoming the canary in today's industry," Frank Lee told a Minnesota House labor subcommittee at a November 18 hearing. The committee is studying a bill which would give employees the right to refuse to work with unsafe substances.

Lee, who directed occupational safety and health training at the University of Minnesota, said that in the early 1900's miners would take a canary into the shafts with them. When the canary died, workers knew the air was bad and they left.

"Many industries don't know what's in the chemicals they use, other industries refuse to give employees information on the toxic materials they use on the job," Lee said.

Rep. Karen Clark, author of the bill, said workers can take precautions if they know what's in the chemicals and what the effects are.

Union representatives said many employee contracts contain "right to refuse" clauses, but not everyone has a bargaining contract. And a university medical school physician said local doctors can't make a diagnosis and treat a patient, if they don't know if the patient has been exposed to toxic chemicals.

Sugar Support In Farm Bill Now 17.5 Cents

Congressman Arlan Stangeland announced that the farm bill conference committee has agreed to reduce the sugar program's support level from 18 cents per pound to 17.5 cents. The reduction was felt necessary by some conference committee members in order to increase the chances of getting the program passed by the full House of Representatives.

"I believe we had a reasonable chance of passing a sugar program on the House floor at 18 cents, but this action should take away any arguments the opposition may have had about our unwillingness to compromise in order to get a worthwhile program passed," Stangeland said.

Urban Representatives in the House had threatened to defeat the entire farm bill just on account of the sugar program. Many sugar opponents had loudly complained when the House confereees voted 15 to 1 to accept the Senate's 18 cent loan level even though the program had previously been knocked out of the farm bill when it was considered by the full House.

Stangeland noted that this was not the first time the sugar loan level had been reduced. "When it first went to the floor, the House farm bill contained by amendment setting the loan level at 19.6 cents per pound. In the interests of getting additional support it was then lowered to 18 cents. This additional action to set the loan level at 17.5 cents makes it awfully hard for urban congressmen to argue that the sugar oppositin in the House was not given fair consideration by the conferees," Stangeland said.

Prior to their consideration of the motion to reduce the loan level to 17.5 cents, the House conferees first voted down a proposal offered by Congressman Peter Peyser of New York that would have cut the support level down to 13.5 cents per pound. Congressman Peyser is recognized as the leading opponent of sugar in the House of Representatives.

Congressman Stangeland emphasized that a sugar program would actually benefit consumers by stabilizing prices and would not result in additional federal outlays. "History clearly shows that when we have had a sugar program, prices have been stable at moderate levels," said Stangeland. "But without a program, consumers have been subject to wildly fluctuating prices which have averaged much higher than when past sugar programs were in effect."

The Seventh District Congressman continued, "It also must be remembered that this program will not cost the taxpayers any money. In fact, it will actually bring several million dollars into the U.S. Treasury as a result of fees that the secretary of agriculture can impose on imported foreign sugar.

"A sugar loan program will help assure the future viability of our domestic sugar industry. I am optimistic that we will be able to muster the support necessary to pass this important program on the House floor," he added.

MSU Offers Consumer Health Course

Cutting health care costs by learning how to prevent illness and choose medical care wisely is the subject of a "Consumer Health Education" course offered evenings this winter at Moorhead state university.

Classes will meet Wednesdays beginning December 2 from 6:30-9 p.m. in Nemzek Hall 153.

Course is aimed at helping consumers save money by learning health care skills and developing a critical eye for health insurance, products, Topics covered will include health insurance, products, fads and devices along with a look at consumer psychology, healing philosophies and weight control schemes.

Mary Montgomery, coordinator of health education at MSU, will teach the course in cooperation with local, state and national consumer health care specialists.

For more information, contact Montgomery at 236-2455. Registrations will be accepted at the first class meeting.

Budget Cuts Discussed By Dep't. Heads

"We've already cut the fat. These next cuts will really hurt," health commissioner George Petterson told a Minnesota House budget committee.

Department heads lined up November 11 and 18 to present testimony to legislative committees preparing for budget cuts of eight, 10 and 12 per cent. How deep the wounds are will depend on continuing information from the state finance and revenue departments and how well other departments bear up to the budget ax.

Corrections commissioner Jack Young told division members his presentation was simply an answer to Governor Quie's call for cuts, not a recommendation. Other commissioners echoed his sentiment.

"The impact will be substantial," welfare commissioner Art Noot said.

In the welfare department, the "least damaging" cuts would affect about 1,500 jobs, mostly nursing home and hospital staff. Day care cuts would affect about 252 families. Social service and services for emotionally disturbed and retarded children, the elderly and the blind, as well as income maintenance programs, may also suffer cuts on top of federal grant reductions, according to Noot.

Cuts in some of these areas, Noot warned, may backfire. Loss of medical assistance now may mean increased acute care costs later. Local taxes may have to pick up a portion of the medical tab the state now pays in grants to counties.

Felton Man Reelected To MAWG Board

Fred Kreps, Felton, was reelected to a second term as president of the Minnesota association of wheat growers (MAWG) at the annual convention in Moorhead recently.

Other officers elected at the convention were Harry Howard, Warren, first vice president and Don Loeslie, Warren, second vice president. Loeslie is currently secretary-treasurer of the National association of wheat growers (NAWG) and slated to move up to the position of vice president of the NAWG at the January convention in Washington, D.C.

Membership also heard and acted on revisions of the Articles of Incorporation and by-laws of the organization. Basic change in the structure was the division of the state into five districts with a board member to be elected at the next annual convention of the growers to represent each district. Four additional board members are to be nominated and elected at the convention to represent the state at-large.

Other business conducted at the convention included the adoption of resolutions for the insuing year which included such issues as farm programs, seaway user fees, U.S. marketing system, tax credits on multi-use storage buildings, and land use preservation. Resolutions will be printed and distributed nationally to all organizations concerned with wheat and agriculture.

Plaques were awarded to all past presidents of the MAWG, as well as builder's fund plaques to individuals supporting the builder's fund. Each builder's fund members contributed $1,000 toward the fund.

NW Sheep Day Draws 125 In Crookston

Approximately 125 sheep producers and those in related sheep enterprises attended Northwest sheep day conducted recently at the Northwest experiment station in Crookston.

Dr. Robert Jordan began the meeting with a presentation of ways to cut feed costs. He advised looking at the use of more corn and less hay. Wastes and losses of feed in various management oversight was also noted. Total savings, as shown by Jordan's presentation, added up to nearly $10 per head.

Dr. Harvey Windels presented conclusions following five years in housing of low cost structures on the Northwest experiment station. Windels related that he could not recommend expanded metal flooring for ewes carrying lambs. Arrangements of economy pole barn construction, and an area with an efficient windbreak without a housing structure, proved adequate for sheep in the study.

Earl Miller, lamb feeder, Thief River Falls, reported on his success in feeding lambs to finish on sprouted grains. He noted that distressed grains can often be used and values as feed increase actual value three or four times.

Truman Tilleraas, University of Minnesota, Crookston, technical college and purebred sheep breeder, spoke on the cost of producing yearling rams.

Sam Bigger, Polk county extension agent, who also raises sheep, spoke on the possibilities of production records for sheep. Bigger noted that the cattle business, especially during times when production genetics can make or break a poor season, have utilized these records profitably. He also showed the group how they might do the same with sheep records.

Afternoon presentation was made by Dr. Roger Haugen, extension livestock specialist, North Dakota State University. Haugen related what has been happening with confinement operations in North Dakota. Several operations which had possibly overdeveloped were no longer in business, according to Haugen. Various buildings and equipment relating to management practices were shown with comments regarding their effectiveness.

Final portion of the day was devoted to inspection of the research facility for sheep at the Northwest station and to various pieces of labor saving equipment assembled by the station and other sheep breeders. A turning cradle, bale feeder, fostering stanchion, and cutting chute were shown.

Sheep day was sponsored by the Northwest experiment station, animal science department, Agricultural extension service, University of Minnesota.

Two Jamborees Set Saturday

Area sports fans have an opportunity to preview the upcoming basketball and hockey seasons Saturday when a pair of preseason jamborees will be offered.

Annual Section 8 hockey jamboree, featuring a full 17-team field for the first time, will be staged in the Thief River Falls sports arena. Playing two 11-minute periods, the nine jamboree sessions will get underway at 12:10 p.m. with Detroit Lakes vs. Hallock and will continue through 9:30 when East Grand Forks is matched against Thief River Falls.

Also scheduled Saturday is the first University of Minnesota-Crookston preseason high school basketball jamboree in the new UMC gymnasium. Eight teams will take part in the event which matches Region 8A opponents against Region 8AA teams similar to the old District 31 jamboree format. Sessions will feature two eight-minute quarters, with Thief River Falls paired against Fisher at 7:20 p.m.

Both the Lincoln high school hockey and basketball teams will open their 1981-82 regular season schedules next week. The basketball team will be at Roseau Friday, December 4, with the hockey team hosting Crookston Saturday, December 5.

Detroit Lakes Will Be Strong

Detroit Lakes, a finalist last year in the North Half Region 8AA high school basketball tournament before losing to eventual Region 8AA champion Moorhead 67-58, could be in the title picture again in 1981-82, with a squad featuring 6-6 center Mike Hutchinson, 6-5 forward Todd Jorgenson and 6-4 guard-forward Dan Douglas.

Those three led the Lakers in scoring and rebounding last year, and Detroit Lakes coach John Erickson said their experience and ability should be a big plus for the Lakers during the 1981-82 season.

Also ready to step into the line-up are 6-3 Jim Matter, a guard-forward; 5-7 John Grones, a part-time starter on the varsity last year; and 6-4 Doug Imholte.

Erickson said he's been impressed with the team in early practice drills, indicating surprise with the quickness of the team. That quickness, he said, should allow the Lakers to run a lot more this season than in the past.

Thief River Falls plays at Detroit Lakes January 26.

Miscellaneous

+Mark Larson of Thief River Falls was the No. 3 runner on the Concordia college cross country team this fall. Larson, a junior, had his season cut short due to monocucleosis, forcing him to miss the NCAA Division III regional meet at Rock Island, Ill. "Big things are expected of Larson in the winter indoor and spring outdoor track seasons where, if he can stay healthy, he is expected to be the top long distance runner," reported Concordia cross country coach Paul Frederickson.

+Changes have been made in the alignment of northeastern Minnesota high school football teams for 1982 when the Class AA Northern Lakes Conference will be reduced to a five-or-six team conference that will include Grand Rapids, Hibbing, Duluth Denfeld, Duluth East and Duluth Central, with Superior, Wis., scheduled to meet all five teams, anyway, a possible sixth conference team. Meanwhile, Cloquet, Duluth Cathedral and Duluth Morgan Park will leave the Northern Lakes Conference to play in a new Class A Seaway Conference where they'll join Hermantown, Proctor and Silver Bay, former members of the Class A Sea-Range Conference. However, Morgan Park may cease to exist if a proposed merger with Denfeld takes place. The Iron Range members of the Sea-Range Conference will form their own league with International Falls, Aurora-Hoyt Lakes, Virginia, Greenway-Coleraine and Eveleth.

Host Prowlers Test Goalies, Defensemen Saturday . . .

Section 8 Hockey Jamboree To Open Season For Area Teams

Search for a goalie and the need for some help on the blueline have been the main areas of conern for Lincoln high school hockey Wendell Grand in early season practice sessions.

The Prowlers' biggest void is in the nets where graduation took 1980-81 starter Jeff Mongoven and his back-up, Greg Harder. Candidates for the job this year are seniors Paul Wennberg and Brent Schmitz, junior Kerry Wollin and sophomore Doug Odegaard. None of them have played varsity hockey.

Who will emerge from that group is uncertain at this point. "It's up for grabs," said Grand. "It's a big question (who's going to be in the nets)," he admitted, but said he was concerned only because of the lack of experience there, not the lack of ability.

On defense the Prowlers have three experienced players to call on in seniors Steve Olson and Mark Harder, along with sophomore Jim Geatz. Olson will be starting for the third year; Harder was expected to have a banner 1980-81 campaign until he suffered a broken wrist early in the season that shelved him for the year; and Geatz stepped into the line-up when Harder was hurt and gained a valuable year of experience as a freshman.

Section 8 Jamboree
12:10—Det. Lakes vs. Hallock
1:20—Fergus Falls vs. LOW
2:30—Little Falls vs. TRF JV
3:40—RLF vs. Crosby-Ironton
4:50—Alexandria vs. Indus
6:00—Crookston vs. Mhd.
7:10—Roseau vs. Brainerd
8:20—Warroad vs. Bemidji
9:30—EGF vs. TRF

Additional personnel is needed on defense, though, with junior Jeff Storhaug and sophomore Brian Johnston currently working with the varsity.

Thief River Fals does have experienced players skating as forwards, and Grand expects that to be one of the team's strengths.

"It's going to take some time to fill some holes," admitted Grand. "But we're looking forward to the season. "our forwards gained a vaulable year of experience last year, and we hope that year of experience wil be a big factor for us."

Although there are a handfull of forwards who played regularly in 1980-81, none of them proved to be big scorers. But Grand isn't concerned about the Prowlers' scoring ability at this point.

"You can win without having somebody in the top ten in the section scoring," he said, "although it sure would be nice to have a player or two up there. I think we have some players who have the ability to score some goals for us."

Thief River Falls will have an opportunity to test things Saturday when the Prowlers participate in the annual preseason Section 8 hockey jamboree in the Thief River Falls sports arena. They'll face East Grand Forks at 9:30 p.m. in the concluding portion of the event that will feature all 17 Section 8 teams, plus the Lincoln high school junior varsity.

Alexandria Girls Win Section 3 Swim Title

Alexandria was the winner Tuesday in the 1981 Section 3 girls high school swimming and diving championships at Bemidji State University.

The Cardinals won the nine-team, timed-finals event with 272 points, followed by Brainerd 220, Bemidji 198, Moorhead 172, Fergus Falls 124, Park Rapids 53, Thief River Falls 53, Melrose 48 and Detroit Lakes 44.

Top two finishers in each swimming event, plus the top six divers earned spots in the 1981 Minnesota state swim meet December 4-5 at the Cooke Hall pool on the University of Minnesota campus in Minneapolis.

Thief River Falls advanced one competitor to the state level when senior Lisa Desrocher placed fourth in Section 3 diving with 294.60 points. Tammy Lewis of Alexandria won the event with 313.05 points, followed by Franie Meyer of Melrose 309.95, Kris Kerick of Bemidji with 307.20 and Desrocher.

Only other Thief River Falls entry to crack a top six finish was the Prowlers' 200-yard medley relay unit of junior Karen Dillon, senior Robyn Dallmann, eighth grader Michelle Puetz and junior Sarah Green. With Puetz and Green swimming their fastest splits ever, that group placed sixth in 2:09.28. Alexandria's winning time was 1:55.34.

It was the first competition for the Prowlers since the Thief River Falls teachers strike wiped out the final seven scheduled regular season outings. The Prowlers' last meet was Oct. 9.

Despite the lay-off, however, several Thief River Falls swimmers turned in some of their top performances yesterday. The group included seventh grader Jennifer Hustad, 12th in the 200-yard freestyle in 2:16.31; sophomore Denise Anderson, 20th in the 200-yard freestyle in 2:21.99. Green, ninth in the 200-yard individual medley in 2:32.23; junior Shari McGann, 16th in the 100-yard freestyle in 1:02.00. Anderson, 21st in the 100-yard freestyle in 1:05.34. Green, eighth in the 500-yard freestyle in 5:58.21; Hustad, ninth in the 500-yard freestyle in 6:02.49; freshman Connie Geatz, 14th in the 100-yard backstroke in 1:14.87; freshman Jill Lusignan, 22nd in the 100-yard breastroke in 1:24.31; and Hustad with an anchor leg in the ninth-place 400-yard freestyle relay.

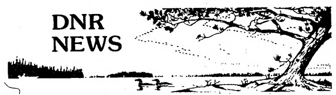
DNR NEWS



A record 54 phone calls were received by the Department of Natural Resources Nov. 9 (the Monday following the opening of the deer season) from persons reporting violations of state game and fish laws.

Calls were received by the DNR enforcement division on two special lines set aside for those reporting violations under the new Turn In Poachers (TIP) program.

Under the program, callers can remain anonymous and are paid rewards if the information they provide the department results in an arrest.

Toll-free number for callers outside of the Twin Cities is 1-800-652-9093.

Funds to finance the reward program are derived from private contributions. Officials said that a judge in southern Minnesota recently ordered a young man to "contribute" $50 to the program as part of a plea bargaining settlement.

A recently retired conservation officer from Brainerd has been named "Outstanding Minnesota Conservation Officer of the Year" by an international club of wildlife conservationists and big game hunters, the Department of Natural Resources announced.

Honored was Joe Jovonovich, 63, a regional enforcement supervisor for the DNR who retired July 14 after more than 33 years of service.

The award was presented by the Shikar- Safari Club International at a ceremony at DNR headquarters in St. Paul Nov. 17.

Jovonovich was cited for his outstanding leadership ability. He was also a deputy U.S. game warden and has served as an instructor in fire and rescue schools.

State fair visitors tossed $1,750 into the fish pond next to the Department of Natural Resources building this year, the DNR reported.

The pool is stocked with catfish and other large species during the fair as part of the department's exhibit of live fish and animals.

For some reason, said officials, people started tossing coins into the pond the first year it was installed. This year's "deposits" exceed any of the previous years.

The funds are used by the DNR bureau of information and education to help pay costs of exhibits and building maintenance.

A new map showing the location of wildlife management areas and public hunting grounds in Minnesota has just been published by the Department of Natural Resources.

To date, more than 938 WMA's have been purchased by the department at a cost of over $24 million. Funds for their acquisition are provided under the "Save Minnesota's Wetlands" program, initiated in 1951 and financed by a surcharge on the small game hunting license. Other funds are derived from federal aid money under the Pittman-Robertson Act, which places a special tax on sporting arms and ammunition, and from state general revenue funds.

A free copy of the map can be obtained at various DNR wildlife field offices and from the DNR division of fish and wildlife, Centennial Building, St. Paul.

Two northeastern Minnesota men, who made off with some wolf traps belonging to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, found themselves trapped by the traps they had stolen.

DNR enforcement officials said the traps were being used to obtain timber wolves for study purposes. The traps are designed to seize the animal's leg without injury. Instead of being anchored to a fixed object, they are attached to a drag, allowing the wolf to pull the trap about.

Eventually the wolf snags the drag in brush, tires and lies down. A small radio transmitter is attached to the trap so that it can be located by wildlife biologists flying over the area in an aircraft, who pick up the signal emitted by the transmitter.

When the trap is located, they land the aircraft and release the wolf after attaching a collar equipped with another transmitter so they can keep track of the wolf's movements during the next 15 to 18 months.

When their traps near Ely were found to be missing, the researchers took to the air and flew around until they picked up the signal from the transmitters, and found the signal coming from the homes of the two men.

Enforcement officers obtained a search warrant and located the traps when they searched the houses. Both men were arrested.

LHS Cross Country Banquet Held Mon.

Bruce Johnson was named the most valuable player award winner for the boys and Sue Hanna earned a similar honor for the girls Monday at the annual post-season Lincoln high school awards banquet, a pot-luck affair held in the Lincoln cafeteria. Johnson and Hanna are both seniors.

Other boys winning special awards were sophomore Kevin Kezar, named the hardest worker; junior Lon Aune and senior Matt Grabanski, co-winners of the most imporved award; and junior Tom Kenville, most improved junior varsity runner.

For the girls, senior Kristy Forsberg was named the hardest worker and freshman Julie Finstad was named the most improved.

Named to serve as captains of the 1982 Thief River Falls cross country teams were Lon Aune, Steve Kruta, Sheri Sabo and Tricia Armstrong.

The banquet, attended by about 130 people — the largest crowd to ever attend a cross country banquet, according to coach Lynn Dyer — included films of the 1981 cross country season.

Due to the risk of spreading Dutch elm disease, the DNR says elm wood should not be stored for use as firewood unless the bark is stripped off or the wood pile is covered tightly with plastic.

Wood Ducks

State and federal wildlife agencies, together with sportsmen's organizations began full protection along with a major construction program providing thousands of wood duck nesting boxes being placed in the breeding areas favored by the ducks.

These artificial nesting sites, readily accepted by the ducks, were necessary because the hardwood trees that provided natural nesting hollows had largely disappeared.

These efforts have paid off the wood duck. Today, these colorful woodland ducks are the most common breeding waterfowl in the eastern United States.

Wood ducks are among the most spectacularly plumaged of all waterfowl. Unlike most other waterfowl species, it makes its nest in the cavities or hollow areas of hardwood trees. Hardwood forest cuttings, drainage and commercial exploitations had a drastic effect upon populations and by the turn of the century the wood duck's future was in doubt. No longer is that true, thanks to the efforts of concerned sportsmen Americans.

Snail Darter Not As Rare As Believed

Like Mark Twain's obituary, reports of the imminent extinction of the snail darter, a tiny, rare fish of the perch family, have turned out to be premature.

According to officials of the Tennessee Valley authority (TVA), the snail darter has been found swimming in a tributary of the Tennessee river in Albama. The discovery is at least the seventh in three different states, and led a TVA scientist to declare the fish did not deserve the status of an endangered species protected by federal law.

The tovernment, it may be recalled, succeeded in the late 1970's in blocking the construction of the TVA's $119-million Tellicao dam in Tennessee in order to spare what then was thought to be the only known habitat of the fish.

Federal regulators were wrong, not the first nor last time. The U.S. chamber of commerce, which argued it was foolhardy to block construction of the dam over the snail darter, recently documented additional cases in which the scientific credibility and reliability of federal agencies have fallen into disrepute. Most notable, perhaps, was the case of the Environmental Protection agency (EPA), whose bungling touched off a public panic in 1980 at Love Canal, New York, over chemical wastes buried in the ground and alleged chromosome risk to nearby residents, only to have its findings thoroughly discredited. The truth has yet to catch up with the story.

Danger: Thin Ice, Safety Council Warns

As Minnesota temperatures begin to fall, hearty folks begin to think of winter outdoor activities. Although Minnesota lakes may begin to freeze, the ice won't be thick enough for travel for some time.

Minnesota safety council offers the following guidelines to help judge whether ice is sufficiently thick:

Two inches of ice are needed to support one person, walking.

Three inches of ice will support a group of people walking single file, if spread out.

Four inches of ice are sufficient for fishing on foot.

Five inches of ice are needed to support the weight of a snowmobile and rider.

Seven and one-half inches of ice will support a two-ton auto.

Safety council says that a snow cover on lakes acts as an insulation for water, slowing down freezing. Test the thickness of ice before venturing onto a lake to be sure it is frozen over the entire surface. Be alert to patches of thin ice and to sections of the lake that have been covered with snow.

Remind children to wait until lakes have developed a thick cover of ice before skating, playing broomball or other ice-surface games.

National Wildlife Federation reports that the last surviving population of Persian fallow deer are living on wildlife preserves in Israel. They were smuggled out of Iran in 1978 prior to the revolution, and it is believed the few remaining in the country were killed in the course of the fighting with Iraq.

Wildlife Group Suggests Book As Gift Idea

It's one of nature's most perfect designs: the egg. All that the next generation needs is stored within, including food, air and genetic blueprints. For most of the egg-born — birds, amphibians, reptiles, insects — life's first problem is how to get out.

Getting out, growing up, fighting for food, mating and dying are some of the stages of life in the wild revealed in a new book of photographic essays, "A Wildlife Family Album," published in time for Christmas giving by the National Wildlife Federation. The book's 190 full-color photographs by professional wildlife photographers are captioned by David Robinson, naturalist and author. The photographs chosen for the book are the best in the NWF's 20-year collection and represent thousands of hours of arduous camera-work.

While the often astounding photographs are the star attractions of "A Wildlife Family Album," Robinson's accompanying text is filled with surprising, little-known facts which help the reader understand what he's seeing. For example, photographer Rajesh Bedi's camera caught a gharial, a long-snouted Indian reptile, just as its head poked through its egg. Robinson explains "The gharial egg, unlike bird eggs, must not be turned over. Scientists studying this endangered member of the crocodile family always mark the top of the egg as they lift it from the sand and keep it upright. This precaution keeps the reptile inside from breaking away from the life-saving spot on the yolk which serves as its umbilical cord."

Other egg facts from "A Wildlife Family Album" — all of which are illustrated with photographs — include:

+ Unlike the gharial egg, ostrich eggs must be turned. The mother ostrich does this so the embryo won't stick to one side of the shell's inside wall and to ensure that all sides receive an equal amount of heat so the chick will develop evenly.

+ An eared grebe may build as many as five nests per season, filling each with eggs and then abandoning all but one. The many deserted eggs help keep predators away from the one nest that counts.

+ Greater flamingo parents take turns sitting on their eggs in order to keep them close to incubating temperature of 93 degrees Fahrenheit. "Yet so skittish are greater flamingos," Robinson writes, "that a pair will abandon their precious annual egg if invaded by larger relatives, the marabou storks."

+ In sharp contrast, the petite rufous hummingbird will dive fearlessly at foes two or three times its size — even a blackbird or chipmunk — when they come too near its tiny eggs.

"A Wildlife Family Album" is available for $14.95 plus $1.15 handling charge per order from the National Wildlife Federation, 19858 DV, 1412 16th Street NW, Washington, D.C. 20036. After January 1, 1982, the price will increase to $16.95.

A Morton Bay fig tree growing in Santa Barbara, California is probably the largest tree in the world, reports the National Wildlife Federation. Planted in 1877 from a seed brought over from Australia, today the tree is almost 70 feet tall with a trunk more than 30 feet around. About 15,000 people could stand in its shade.

Quadna Hosts Snowmobile Race Dec. 5-6

First major snowmobile-sno cross race of the 1981-82 season will be held Saturday and Sunday, December 5-6, at Quadna Mountain, a major ski resort at Hill City, MN. The event is promoted by Quadna Mountain resort in cooperation with Jim Beilke of Racetime, Inc. of Alexandria to assure participants and spectators of a professional, high quality racing event.

Approximately one-half-mile-long course will be laid out along the base of the Quadna Mountain ski slopes and will use natural terrain to bring an entirely new dimension to sno cross racing. The event will be held regardless of weather, utilizing man-made ice and snow.

Promoters emphasize that regular skiing activities will be held the weekend of the race.

Quadna Mountain snocross event will run international cross-country snowmobile federation (ICCSF) rules and use two of the federation's classes, but the race is not an ICCSF sanctioned event. Classes include the 56 h.p. ICCSF stock and the "open" class, which includes "proto stock." There will be a $50 entry fee. Semifinalists will pay an additional $50, with 100 per cent payback in both classes. Qualifications will be held on Saturday, December 5, with the semifinals and finals on Sunday, December 6.

Last December, Racetime, Inc. promoted the first big time snocross event in North America. Racetime president Jim Beilke feels a successful big time snowmobile race such as this one, at a major ski resort could lead to more of these events across the country. Beilke says it could open up a large, untapped resource of potential and additional race sites, exposure to more people and increased recognition of a tremendous winter sport which has been ignored for too long.

Jack Fider of Quadna Mountain, believes Quadna's facilities are ideally suited for an event of this magnatude: 1,400 acres of expanse; lodging for 1,000; complete motor home parking and electrical connection; live entertainment; heated pool; indoor tennis, etc. are available.

He notes that Hill City's location 150 miles north of Minneapolis and 20 miles south of Grand Rapids on highway 169 is centrally located for winter enthusiasts.

For additional information contact Fieder at Quadna Mountain Resort, Hill City, MN 55748, telephone 697-2324.

While there are probably about 200 billion stars in our own galactic star system, only about 6,000 stars are visible from the Earth with the naked eye, reports the National Wildlife Federation.

STAYING IN TOUCH!

Congressman
Arlan Stangeland

In 1961 the Pilgrims suffered through a bitter winter. But the following Autumn they recovered and took in an ample harvest. William Bradford, the Governor of Plymouth Colony, responded by proclaiming a three-day Thanksgiving celebration. The immediate celebration fo course was occasioned by the fine harvest. But it also commemorated more. It marked success in the Pilgrim's struggle to find freedom.

That was the first Thanksgiving.

Today, November 1981, we still set aside a special day for Thanksgiving and continue to be Thankful for the freedom we enjoy.

Thanksgiving is strictly an American holiday.

The reason is simple — Americans have so much more to be Thankful for.

Since that Fall day in 1621 a lot has happened. We have defended our Nation in time of war, survived economic depressions, overcome natural disasters and maintained our continuity as a Nation in the face of Presidential assassinations and political turmoil.

For this we can be Thankful.

We can be particularly Thankful for our Forefathers who designed the Constitution and the form of Government whereby we are able to continue as a free Nation despite all obstacles.

In this Nation we have the opportunity to seek any goals in life we desire and the fate of our future is pretty much left in our own hands. We can worship in the church of our choice and we are free to practice our religion in our own way. For this we are Thankful.

On this Thanksgiving Day we can look back over the past year and count our blessings as Americans.

First, we can still be Thankful for our harvest, just as they were in 1621. We can be Thankful for our family and friends.

We can be Thankful for our young people and view their development with pride with the knowledge that they will be fit for leadership when their time arrives.

We can be Thankful that there are no Americans fighting wars on foreign soil during this Thanksgiving and our prayers go out that this will continue for future generations.

We can be Thankful that our President's life was spared and that he fully recovered from the assassination attempt.

We can be Thankful that our hostages were returned safely from Iran after being held prisoners for more than a year.

We can be Thankful that the Space Shuttle Columbia made two historic and successful flights into the unknown regions of outer space and returned with data which will enable our scientists to find ways to improve our daily lives.

We can be Thankful that our men of medicine continue to develop new techniques which will help them remove the suffering from the World.

We can be Thankful that we have National leaders who are striving for peace but letting the world know that we are prepared to remain a free Nation. We understand that there is no price for freedom.

We can also be Thankful for all the little things we enjoy, all the traditions and the little extra pleasure many of us receive during this season from turkey, TV and football.

420 Pounds Of Turkey Makes Big Dinner

Although more students ate hot meals at the schools that Thanksgiving day compared to other school days, natural high count days are those when hamburgers, hot dogs or pizza burgers are on the menu, Fleegel said.

Fleegel, who has been food supervisor for school district 564 since 1971, is involved with "everything having to do with food service," she said. That includes things such as ordering foods, planning menus, and filling out state and federal reports. "I guess everything but cooking and carrying out the groceries," she laughed.

Particular foods mentioned earlier selected for the Thanksgiving dinner are pretty much a regular menu for that day, Fleegel said. "Once in a while we have sweet potatoes, but students don't seem to like those. We go with what the kids like; if they don't like it we don't put it on the menu," she added.

Fleegel described the offer versus serve menu program available within the Thief River Falls school district, which enables students to choose three of five items in the basic food group, including milk, bread, fruit, vegetables, and protein. Program means less plate waste. "Kids will eat what they take that way," Fleegel said. Program, which has been used for several years in the junior and senior high schools, was begun this year in the elementary schools.

Little plate waste was noted last Thursday at the schools, with seconds numerous, according to Jeannette Stoltman, head cook at Lincoln. "Boys (mainly) like their meat and potatoes," she said, recalling the number of students returning for seconds that Thanksgiving Day.

On that day, 394 students at Lincoln (an average of almost 50 more per day compared to a normal day), and 173 students at Knox (higher than the regular 150-160 served daily) were served 147 pounds of turkey (eight turkeys). Other ingredients on the menu for both schools included seven and one-half No. 10 tins of instant potatoes, six No. 10 cans of cranberries, six No. 10 cans of pumpkin, three large cans of whipped topping, 35 loaves of bread, 75 servings of muffins and apples.

There are three center kitchens within the district, located at Lincoln, Washington, and Franklin with satellite kitchens at Northrop, Knox, and St. Hilaire, where hot meals are delivered by Russell Lane.

Idea of three central kitchens with satellites from them saves labor, according to Fleegel. Part-time cooks are needed at the satellite schools to accept, serve and prepare foods. The cooks, who work for two and one-half to three hours per day, depending upon the student count for a particular day, are assisted by helpers who work for approximately one hour per day. In the entire district, there are 7 full-time and 14 part-time kitchen workers.

Meals presently served, according to Fleegel, are down 15 per cent from a year ago, with more "bag" lunches evident, especially in the elementary schools.

Last Thursday, when Thanksgiving delicacies were served students, Mae Breiland, head cook at Franklin, noted that 578 students from that school, Mark Twain and St. Hilaire enjoyed their holiday feast; a figure slightly higher than a "normal" day, she said.

Manu included nine turkeys (each weighing between 19 and 22 pounds), eight No. 10 tins of instant potatoes, 14 cans of pumpkin, three No. 10 cans of cranberries, and 19 salads.

With experience, cooks are able to determine how much food should be prepared daily. At some of the schools a count is given cooks in the morning. Cooks can also "estimate" by figures from previous years.

Various factors, however, often change the morning "count," including the weather and school activities. As one example, last Thursday, the morning count received at Franklin was 496, while 578 students were acctually served the Thanksgiving meal.

Being a cook at a school means working a lot ahead, according to Breiland. Last week, when turkeys were to be prepared for the Thursday dinner, the meat had to be removed from the freezer Tuesday, roasted over night, deboned Wednesday, and cut into cubes for the gravy Thursday.

Pressurized steam kettles used by cooks at the schools make the job easier, especially since 225 pounds of potatoes can be cooked in one and one-half hours! Kettles are also used for heating buns and making soups and gravies.

The "clean your plate" recital sessions issued by eager parents at dinner table illustrated effective ness at the schools last Thursday. Only one quarter roaster of turkey and gravy remained after seconds at Lincoln high school while three-quarters of the turkey remained at Franklin.

But with every meal, according to Stoltman, there are usually leftovers. As a result, items that can't be frozen are served the following day, with students having a choice between that food and the main course.

Head cooks are responsible for keeping records of the number of students served, amounts of each food needed for preparing a particular meal, and amounts left over after the meal has been served, according to Stoltman and Breiland.

The idea of having a Thanksgiving dinner early, especially when students know it is the first of two Thanksgiving dinners, pleases most. "The cooks and the kids all like it better," Fleegel said.

Inter-County Community Council, Inc.
P.O. Box 187, Oklee, Minnesota 56742
218-796-5144 or 1-800-542-5035

Outreach personnel from Inter-County Community Council will begin taking applications for heating assistance on November 30th, even though federal appropriations to assist low income households with rising energy costs are still being finalized by congress.

Last year over 2,100 households in Pennington, Polk and Red Lake counties received energy aissistance — totaling over one and a half million dollars. This winter — funds for heating assistance may be cut by 25 per cent, yet statewide — the program could potentially assist over 150,000 households.

The Inter-County office said that heating assistance this year will be closely linked to energy conservation and weatherization services available in the county, as well as other human services programs.

Persons applying for heating assistance must bring information such as energy account numbers as well as proof of income and medical expenses at the time of application. Income guidelines for the assistance range from $7,616 for a single person to $14,645 for a family of four.

Hazardous Waste Site Is Reviewed

has been drilled. Drilling is scheduled on a site near Middle River from November 30 to December 4; on a site in Rollis township of Marshall county from December 5 to 9; and on a three-section site in Espelie township from December 14 to 17. Time will then be required to analyze the findings, he said.

Eide noted that this area of the state had not originally been considered because it was believed to be too far from the area where most of the hazardous waste is generated to be feasible from a transportation standpoint. When public land was introduced into the selection criteria and the computer search was narrowed down from 10 square mile areas to one square mile areas, sites in this area came under consideration.

In answer to some of the questions presented to him, Eide said that waste would be transported by truck to a disposal site in steel barrels; that cost of establishing a disposal site is expected to be in the millions of dollars, but cost would be paid by private developers and ultimately paid for by the generators of hazardous waste and eventually the consumers of products made by the generators; and that disposal site operation would be by private indsutry with monitoring by the waste management board and the local communities with state subsidy.

He also said the board plans to have the state responsbile for payment of damages in the event of spillage or leakage, and the state to do the litigation in recovery of damages from private sources. Above gound storage of hazardous waste is also being considered by the board, he said.

The state waste management board will hold its regular meeting in the Thief River Falls city auditorium basement meeting room Friday, December 4, from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Public testimony will be received beginning at 1:15 p.m.

In addition, tour of candidate disposal sites will be conducted beginning at 8 a.m. Thursday, December 3, and at 7 p.m. a public input session will be held in the city auditorium. Further information on the sessions will be presented in future issues of the Times.

Employers Of CETA Workers Like Program

Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) programs receive strong endorsement from employers, a survey shows.

A total of 75 per cent of the respondents are satisfied with the job performance of workers hired through CETA. CETA workers progressed satisfactorily in 72 per cent of the cases. Seven of every 10 employers said CETA job training programs are helpful.

This endorsement was given to the CETA program even though the employers, elsewhere in the survey, indicated a strong dislike of government programs in general.

The survey, conducted by the balance of state private industry council, measured attitudes of employers in 51 rural Minnesota counties. Eighty-nine per cent of the respondents said that CETA staff members are helpful.

The private industry council consists of business and community leaders who work with private employers to develop employment and vocational training programs. The council will consider the results of the survey when developing its programs.

Answers from the Bible by Pastor Don Peres
Q. Pastor Don, "I hear so much about secular humanism today and how it is of the devil, because it is in conflict with Biblical principles, would you explain why?"
A. "Dr. Francis Schaeffer has warned people that the ultimate end of secular humanism is always chaos. He has defined humanism as a man-centered philosophy that attempts to solve the problems of man and the world independently of God."
Whether most people are aware of it or not, secular humanism- the philosophy that declares, "no deity will save us; we must save ourselves" has been quietly woven into the fabric of our daily lives. Yet the danger signs are quite evident.
Legislation on the national level reflects widespread acceptance of easy divorce, abortion-on-demand, gay rights, militant feminism, unisex, facilities, and leniency towards pornography, prostitution and crime.
The public school system has demonstrated hostility toward prayer, moral and religious values, creation as an alternative to evolution, and the teaching of sex education within a moral context rather than spiritual.
There has been a sexually permissive, self-indulgent approach to life that has become the norm for movies, books, and even prime time television.
Most people today do not realize what humanism really is and how it is destroying our culture, families, country — and one day, the entire world. Most of the evils in the world today can be traced to humanism, which has taken over our government, the UN, education, T.V., and most of the other influential things of life.
The church of Jesus Christ is the last obstacle for the humanist to conquer. The 1960's saw the battle for racial rights. In the 1970's it was sexual rights. But the 1980's have been designated for the battle against religious rights.
John F. Kennedy once said, "Do not ask what America can do for you; ask what you can do for America."
The first thing we can do is get right with God, pray, and begin to establish Biblical principles once again in our daily lives and our land.
Proverbs 14:34 teaches, "Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people."
Proverbs 29:2 says, "when the Righteous are in authority, the people rejoice: but when the wicked beareth rule, the people mourn."
Psalm 33:12 mentions "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord."
II Chronicles 7:14 says, "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways, then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land."
If you have any questions that you would like to have answered from the Bible, please write Pastor Don Peres, Box 129, Thief River Falls, MN 56701.

There are more than 70 operational nuclear power plants in the U.S., and they produce as much electricity daily as we would get from a million and a half barrels of oil. Building a large nuclear generating plant today is like finding a 400-million barrel oil field.

To get the electricity we need for the 1990s, estimate the experts from the Atomic Industrial Forum, at least 40 power plants must be started each year through the 1980s, since it takes a decade or more to get a coal or nuclear plant built and operating.

If we fail to order more coal and nuclear power plants, we will have to increase our dangerous dependence on imported oil far beyond the record levels of the 1970s.

Old Idea-
New Setting

When the Pilgrims held their first Thanksgiving celebration it wasn't a new idea. The idea was as old as man's awareness of his dependence on God.

But it was a new setting. A group of people far from home, barely settled on a strange shore, surrounded by dangers real and imagined, facing their first New England winter. A remarkable time and place to say "Thank You, God."

Whenever earnest men and women pause to express gratitude to God it's an old idea. But the setting is always new. For wherever we are, whatever the circumstances surrounding our lives, our faith reaches out to the Almighty — realizing anew his Power, his Love; saying "Thank You, God."

Worship with your neighbors this week.

Government At Cross Purposes In Hiring Law

There is no way the nation's construction industry can comply with federal regulations and still achieve goals imposed by the federal government to increase proportions of women and minority workers in the industry. The skilled craft workers imply are not there, according to the chamber of Commerce of the United States.

For purposes of illustration, the effort to recruit women for the construction industry is perhaps most dramatic. Since the late 1970's the industry has been under a federal order to increase the proportion of women to 6.9 per cent of the total work force. Women in 1980 accounted for only 1.57 per cent of the total force of 4.5 million.

According to a leading industry group, Associated Builders and Contractors, Inc., it would require a massive effort — the recruitment, training and hiring of more than 310,000 women — to meet the 6.9 per cent goal. And it takes approximately three and one-half years to train a skilled journeyman. Industry spokesmen say it cannot be done under existing rules.

Here is the catch. Federal rules and agencies work at cross-purposes and thus limit the number of apprentices who can be trained and hired. Involved are:

—The office of federal contract compliance programs (OFCCP), which sets the affirmative action requirements for federal contractors, including those in the construction industry.

—The Davis-Bacon act, which restricts the number of helpers or low-skilled workers a construction contractor may employ at below journeymen's wages on government projects — sometimes no more than one such worker for every 24 skilled journeymen on the job. The act thus restricts apprentices, since they are paid below journeymen scale and the law restricts the number of workers who may be paid lower wages.

—The bureau of apprenticeship and training (BAT), which has traditional policies that tend to discourage recruitment of apprentices, particularly in the case of non-union workers.

Unions have a special interest in controlling the number of apprentices.

Many non-union contractors, for example, favor a system of speeding up training by teaching new workers only one facet of a trade. Rather than take an apprentice plumber through the entire craft's training, the apprentice would learn to install kitchen sinks. Thus, he could go from one house to the next installing kitchen sinks. Another similarly trained worker would install bathroom fixtures. But unions oppose this idea, and so does BAT.

Thus, from a practical point of view, the goal is not attainable. Although the BAT rules require that a certain proportion of each new apprenticeship class be women, the formula falls woefully short of producing sufficient numbers to meet the national goal.

"In fact, the construction industry could not meet OFCCP goals for women through existing apprenticeships even if all new apprenticeship slots were reserved exclusively for women," ABC says.

The problem is not new, although practically ignored on Capitol Hill until recently when Sen. Orrin G. Hatch (R-Utah) and his labor and human resources committee started inquiry into the performance of OFCCP.

Among those giving the agency low marks was the U.S. chamber of commerce, whose labor relations chairman, Robert T. Thompson, charged the agency set "unrealistic" recruitment and hiring goals.

In recent testimony, Thompson criticized what he termed the agency's "subjectivity" in determining "availability" — a key term in contract compliance. Affirmative action plans require contractors to employ a certain percentage of women and minority workers, based on their "availability" in a community.

The government, according to Thompson, defines availability as the number of minority or women workers with skills required for entry into a job group. Employers naturally are looking for people with necessary skills to fill an opening.

"The two definitions are hopelessly at odds," Thompson declared.

Where do employers turn? What is the price of doing business with the government?

FACTS & FIGURES

Milk is a nearly perfect food. Although milk averages about 87 percent water, it contains nearly all the basic food materials needed for growth and energy. Milk solids (the amount other than water) contain protein, fat, carbohydrates and ash. A large part of the calcium and phosphorous in food eaten by people in the U.S. is in milk.

The price most Americans pay for milk is determined by a price system adopted in the Chicago Federal Milk Order in September, 1961. It's known within the dairy industry as the Minnesota-Wisconsin (M-W) milk series, and reflects prices paid farmers in these two states for manufacturing grade milk. Because these two states are the major producers of manufacturing grade milk, the M-W series mirrors prices set throughout the U.S., explains the United Dairy Industry Association.

About four acres of farm land, including two acres of pasture, are needed to provide the feed for each cow for a year. A cow weighing 1,000 pounds eats in one year the grass from two acres of pasture, 6,300 pounds of silage, 1,700 pounds of grain and 2,730 pounds of alfalfa or clover hay.

Applications For Energy Aid Taken

Northwest Community Action, Inc., Badger, will begin taking energy assistance applications December 1 for residents of Kittson, East Marshall and Lake of the Woods counties.

A household must be income eligible to participate in the program. Eligible households amount of assistance will be based on income and family size in relation to energy cost. A high household income in relation to low energy cost may compute to no assistance.

Homeowners who cut their own wood for fuel and renters may also be eligible for the energy assistance program.

Annual medical expenses in excess of three per cent of a household's annual income and not reimbursed by insurance or other sources may be deducted when determining eligibility.

When applying for the Energy Assistance Program persons must bring:

(1) Proof of income such as copies of pay stubs, wage statements, award letters from Social Security and S.S.I., benefit payment checks, and 1980 income tax return for farmers and self-employed;

(2) Past due utility and energy bills;

(3) Medical expenses for the last 12 months;

(4) Estimated net worth.

Sign-up days for energy assistance include the following:

East Marshall county — Strandquist and east of Highway 59 — Karen Skadsem, Outreach Aide, 222-3309;

Gatzke senior citizen center — 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; December 7, 14;

Holt senior citizen center — 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; December 1, 8 and 15;

Additional sign-up days may be necessary. Watch the Thief River Falls Times for further information.

Price Supports For Dairy Get Boschwitz Push

Senator Rudy Boschwitz today suggested reasonable price supports for dairy when the 1981 farm bill is taken up by a House-Senate conference committee.

In a letter delivered to each conferee, Boschwitz said that, on the whole, the provisions of the bill hammered out by the Senate agriculture committee in May provide a fair middle ground between diverse bills passed by the Senate and the House of Representatives. This, he said, is especially true for wheat and feed grains.

The Senate passed its version of the farm bill in May. The House passed its version last week. The two bills vary substantially in content and cost, and probably will take two weeks to be reconciled.

The top five ranking members of the Senate agriculture committee were selected as conferees; Boschwitz was number six.

"While I still feel that the dairy compromise we hammered out last spring is a fair and responsible way to balance consumption and production, it clearly does not represent middle ground between the two plans now under deliberation," Boschwitz said. "Economics dictates that it cannot be resurrected now."

Both the House and the Senate voted to kill the semiannual adjustment. The Senate plan provides no guarantee of any adjustments above the $13.10 level that currently exists. USDA projections indicate that an adjustment to 70 per cent of parity is likely on Oct. 1, 1983.

"This would mean three years with no price adjustment and an effective parity level of less than 60 per cent," Boschwitz said. "Unfortunately, this may well lead to some bankruptcies in my home state.

"I am uncomfortable with changing the rules so drastically when so many young farmers have plunged heavily into debt with the assumption that the price would be adjusted as before."

Boschwitz thinks highly of a portion of the House bill that guarantees an increase to 72.5 per cent on Oct. 1, 1982. It is similar to an amendment he offered on the Senate floor.

"This will help heavily leveraged farmers meet their cash flow obligations while keeping the price level low enough not to encourage further expansion," he said.

Damp Basement Is Common Problem

At least half of Minnesota homes have wet basements — damp, useless space that may encompass problems raging from musty odors, mildew and peeling paint to actual rotting foundations.

William Angell, extension housing specialist at the University of Minnesota, estimates that half of those with wet basements could correct the problem with do-it-yourself skills and without a major investment. For those with more severe problems, however, professional help may be necessary. This may be risky, costly and time-consuming, he warns.

Angell urges homeowners not to guess at the type or cause of a basement moisture problem. "If you don't feel confident to diagnose your problem, consider hiring an independent soils engineer with experience in analyzing basement water problems," he says. "Otherwise, you leave yourself vulnerable to fraudulent claims and misrepresentation by unscrupulous waterproofing companies."

He adds, "There are many excellent contractors who deal with basement moisture problems, but unfortunately, there are others interested only in your pocketbook. As a homeowner, it's up to you to distinguish between the excellent firms, the fairly good ones and the shoddy or dishonest ones."

There are three types of basement moisture problems, according to Angell. Condensation is the most common and the easiest to correct. It is caused by warm, moist air contacting a cool surface such as basement walls or floors. Moisture from the air condenses on these surfaces in the form of drips or puddles.

Condensation usually can be controlled by eliminating interior moisture-producing activities especially in the basement. Angell notes that these can include showering without using a vent fan, drying clothes on a line or in an unvented dryer, and storage of "green" firewood. Running a dehumidifier and keeping basement windows closed in the summer also will help.

Seepage is the next most common moisture problem, according to Angell. Usually it is caused by run-off following rain or snow melt. Seepage often indicates that water running off the roof isn't being carried away from the foundation. This may be because of leaky or inadequate gutters and downspouts, inadequate grading or slope away from the house, or window well collection of rainwater.

Remedies for this problem include repair or replacement of gutters, lengthening downspout leaders, installing plastic window well covers, and checking for proper drainage away from the house including run-off from nearby driveways, walks or patios.

Angell adds that in some cases of seepage, several coats of waterproofing paint on the basement walls may correct the problem. Occasionally, however, the problem is severe enough to require systems of "weep pipes," troughs or drains to carry water to a drain or sump pump.

Leakage is the least common form of basement moisture problem and the most difficult and costly to correct. Angell says leakage is caused by high ground water levels, often aggravated by dense soil that prevents moisture from draining away from the foundation. He urges homeowners who think that this is their problem to contact their local soil conservation service for help in diagnosis.

Angell adds, "Be wary of claims by sales people that a basement moisture problem is caused by a high water table based only on someone's casual observations. Only a soil boring can determine accurately what the problem is."

Angell adds that some leakage problems can be cured by a combination weep pipe and sump pump system or drain tiles under the floor or around the outside of the foundation. In other cases, a contractor may need to excavate the exterior of the foundation and seal it with a waterproof material at the same time that drain tiles or a sump system is installed.

"Correcting a leakage problem is never simple," Angell warns. "It's usually expensive, messy and time-consuming. If you are certain that your moisture problem involves leakage, be wary of contractors who promise an easy solution in the form of exterior-applied waterproofing compounds or materials."

Further information on basement moisture problems is available in a new publication written by Angell, "Correcting Basement Moisture Problems in Minnesota Homes" (Special Report No. 2), available at a cost of $1 from your local county agricultural extension service office.

HOME BUYER CLINIC

Outstanding Rights

Rights in real estate are protected by strong laws in this country. That's why you need to make sure that outstanding interests are satisfied before completing your purchase of a home.

In one memorable example, the administrator of a deceased home owner's estate had agreed to sell the property, and a local court authorized the sale. But the land title company making a search of public records as protection for the buyer found a need for investigation. The court agreed, vacating the order of sale.

McDonald

What the company found in the public records was that a wife and two adult children survived the late owner and still held interests in the property. This meant the residence was a homestead under laws of the state and the court declared it as such with the survivors as legal heirs.

After it also was discovered that one of the children was mentally incompetent, a guardian was appointed for his interests. Then a settlement was worked out so deeds were obtained from the widow, from one of the children and from the guardian for the other to convey their interests in the property to the buyer.

Through advance warning from the title company, the buyer was able to avoid closing a transaction in which he would not have received good title and might have lost his investment altogether. After the interests of the heirs were satisfied, the buyer completed his purchase without further complications. The title search served as a basis for issuing owner's title insurance protecting the buyer against problems including those a search will not reveal—such as a forged deed or a mistake in the public records.

For free information on owner's title insurance and other home buying precautions, write American Land Title Association, Box 566, Washington, D.C. 20044.

Propose To Add Law Officer To Commission

Gov. Al Quie said he will propose legislation in 1982 session to require a law enforcement representative to be added to the Minnesota sentencing guidelines commission.

"An essential element of the criminal justice system is sadly lacking in the commission's membership," Quie said. "A representative of the law enforcement sector whose first instinct is to think of public protection and safety must be an active participant as the guidelines are reviewed."

The commission, which proposed the state's sentencing guidelines enacted in 1980, is now studying their effectiveness. Commission has the authority to change the guidelines.

"This is a critical testing time for the sentencing guidelines," Quie said. "We must use this review to seek any changes which will better protect the public.

"Crime and the fear of crime have reached epidemic proportions in the United States and are spreading like a cancer across our nation," Quie said. "Violent crime is no longer isolated to the nation's big cities but is increasing significantly in areas once considered safe — such as our suburban and rural areas."

"Many Minnesotans have had to readjust their lives in response to their fear of crime. We must devise ways to address this serious issue. The viewpoint of a sentencing guidelines commission member who is a representative voice of our police and sheriffs will greatly assist the commission in its task. This is one important step which must be taken in our efforts to deal with crime and its consequences," Quie added.

Currently, the nine-member sentencing commission is composed of the chief justice of the supreme court or his designee; two district court judges; a public defender; county attorney; commissioner of the Minnesota department of corrections; chairman of the Minnesota corrections board; and two public members appointed by former Gov. Rudy Perpich.

Hearing On Rail Freight Agency Dec. 1

A public hearing will be conducted December 1 to determine whether a centralized rail freight agency should be established at Crookston. Hearing is a continuation of the one conducted August 13, according to Gordon Boldt, director, railroad administration, Minnesota Department of Transportation (Mn-DOT).

Testimony on the proposed freight agency centralization will be heard by a state hearing examiner at 9:30 a.m. in the Northwest regional correction center, 600 Bruce St., Crookston.

Under the proposal, most communities in Clay, Kittson, Marshall, Norman, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake, and Roseau counties will be affected by the freight agency centralization. Hearing will also consider whether depots should be closed and removed.

Burlington Northern Railroad company has asked Mn-DOT to make a determination in this matter. Determination will consider whether an adequate level of rail freight agency service can be maintained in the area if the proposed changes are made.

Mn-DOT has notified interested parties of the hearing.

After the hearing examiner's report is issued, exceptions may be filed by parties to the proceedings. Mn-DOT issues the final order adopting, amending or rejecting the report.

Crime Against Elderly Target Of Senate Bill

Senator Dave Durenberger has joined in sponsoring a successful ammendment to the older Americans act to provide crime prevention and victim assistance programs for the elderly.

The amendment encourages organizations serving older Americans to provide crime prevention services such as home security inspections, installation of locks, neighborhood watch programs, citizen patrols, citizen escorts and operation identification for valuables.

The victim assistance may include counseling, escort services to courts, help to elderly victims in filling out police reports and making sure victims get fair compensation.

The programs will be funded from appropriations to the older Americans act, and carried out through the national association of state units on aging and the national association of area agencies on aging.

"Many senior citizens live in fear of crime. They are being held prisoners in their own homes. This amendment will allow local aging service agencies to work directly with seniors and police to carry out needed crime prevention programs," said Durenberger.

Salt-Loving Plants May Hold Key to Food Problem

by Madeleine Jacobs
Smithsonian News Service

Just across the California border in the Mexicali valley, farmers are still bitter. For decades their valley has been one of Mexico's most fertile and productive agricultural oases, relying on life-giving irrigation waters of the nearby Colorado river.

But a not-so-funny thing happened to the mighty Colorado on its way to Mexico. Over the years, as it was increasingly manipulated to supply water for a thirsty U.S. population in the West and Southwest, the river picked up salt — lots of it. After a 1,400-mile-trip southward, the brackish waters were simply too salty for some crops.

By the late 1960s, some lush areas had been transformed into barren stretches, virtual seas of salt where nothing would grow. Although Mexico and the United States signed an agreement on salinity control in 1973, only now has that land begun to recover its former productivity.

It is an ancient problem — its solution, an acient dream. As early as 2400 B.C., increasing soil salinity hurried the decline of the thriving, agriculture-oriented Sumerian civilization. Today, some 130 million acres of the world's irrigated lands are plagued with salinity problems.

And yet, scientists have long dreamed of agricultural uses for seawater, which covers four-fifths of the globe but is now worthless of irrigation purposes: Only a fraction of the Earth's thousands of plant species can tolerate even one-tenth the salt concentration of ocean water.

But there are some plants that not only tolerate salt, they thrive on it. And, as a number of scientists now believe, this relative handful may be a botanical blessing, holding the key to feeding the world's growing population.

"For thousands of years, we've been able to move away from salt-affected lands," explains Dr. Jack Gallagher, an ecologist at the University of Delaware college of marine studies in Lewes. "Now we've run out of new land to replace the salinized acres. So while we used to adapt the land to the plants we had, now we have to adapt plants to the land we have."

For Gallagher, this means looking at plants in his own backyard — the Delaware marshes, part of the long green ribbon of soft, salty, wet, low-lying land lining virtually the entire Atlantic coast. Dominating these marshes are two grasses — Spartina alterniflora and Spartina patens; commonly known as cord grass and salt hay grass, respectively.

From Colonial times until early in this century, these marsh plants were prized by farmers for their high yields of hay. So valued were the marshes for livestock fodder that, one story goes, in the 17th century armed men from Massachusetts routinely raided hay from the New Hampshire marshes.

Gallagher and others believe that marsh plants and other salt-loving plants that normally grow well in saline, arid soils could once again assume economic importance, especially in countries where irrigation has created salinity problems. In some irrigated lands in Egypt, for instance, soil salinity has reached critical levels for many traditional crops. There, Gallagher has been looking at a variety of marsh plants, including cord grass and salt grass (Distichlis spicata), as well as an inland desert plant of the genus Atriplex, as potential forage for water buffalo and goats. So far, the results look promising.

Despite their appeal, salt-tolerant plants — or halophytes, from the Greek words for salt, halos, and plant, phyte — remain something of a mystery. Unlike other plants, which try to keep salt from their systems completely, halophytes are able to absorb and deal with salt in a number of ways so that it will not be toxic to their systems.

"It is well known that salinity affects many aspects of plant metabolism, anatomy and structure," Gallagher says, "but the precise details of how halophytes do what they do are not well understood."

There are particularly large gaps in understanding how halophytes have adapted photosynthesis — the process by which plants use sunlight to convert carbon dioxide and water into chemical energy and oxygen.

Dr. Bert Drake has been trying to narrow this gap at the Smithsonian's radiation biology laboratory in Rockville, MD. For nearly a decade, the plant physiologist used a marsh on the Chesapeake bay in Maryland as a living laboratory where he studied photosynthesis and plant adaptation. Throughout the course of the growing season, he found, the salinity of the marsh increased and the overall efficiency of photosyntheses decreased.

"What we see is a paradox," Drake says, "Halophytes have the ability to compartmentalize salt to keep it from affecting key biochemical reactions. How, then, can photosynthesis be affected by a substance that isn't even in contact with the chloroplasts, the green bodies in plant cells which carry out photosynthesis?

"The answer may be that salt produces a stress reaction in plants, a kind of physiological drought, much like the dessication experienced by desert plants. Thus, in the marsh, there is water everywhere, but it's difficult for the plants to get at it."

Now Drake has brought the marsh inside. In his laboratory, he's growing plants carrried back from the Chesapeake bay marshes. Current experiments are aimed at delineating the relationship between water stress and photosynthesis.

"One way to expand food production," Drake says, "is to increase the capacity of species we now use to produce more on saline lands. This means we need a better understanding of photosynthesis in those plants that have already adapted to salinity to find out how they've managed this incredible trick."

Some scientists have suggested that this non-conventional ability could be exploited through genetic engineering, or as Drake puts it, "If we could only teach corn what Spartina alterniflora already knows, we could increase food yields."

"Unfortunately, we really know very little about the genetic basis of salt tolerance," sayd Dr. Edward P. Glenn, a marine agronomist who studies halophytes at the University of Arizona environmental research laboratory in Tucson. "And I seriously doubt whether there will be a single, magic gene for salt tolerance that could be engineered into conventional crops.

"In our work, we've found that salt tolerance is affected by a variety of factors — the photosynthetic strategy of the plant, its life cycle (perennials do better than annuals) and morphological characteristics such as special salt glands that concentrate and eliminate salt."

Whichever approach is eventually successful — direct adaptation of halophytes to arid lands or genetic engineering with conventional crops — most scientists agree that the greatest potential for halophytic plants will be in those regions of the world where seawater could be used to irrigate arid and semi-arid lands, comprising one-third of the Earth's land area.

Already in Pakistan, Gallagher relates, seawater has been used experimentally to grow some potential crops. He is also sanguine about the future use there of such marsh plants as seashore mallow (a relative of cotton and okra), salt grass and Salicornia, also known as glasswort, as well as the desert plant Atriplex.

Atriplex, an exceptionally high-protein plant, also may be a likely candidate to replace some forage crops, particularly energy-intesive alfalfa, in aird regions of the world and the United States, Glenn adds.

For human consumption, Glenn's favorite is Palmer's grass, found only in marshy areas of the northern Gulf of California. "The seeds of Palmer's grass," he notes, "don't accumulate salt, making them an excellent substitute as a grain crop. The seed contains 80 per cent soluble carbohydrate, which can be used to make bread or other grain products."

Not all scientists would ascribe to the sentiments of one researcher who wrote, "The future of plants lies with some group of halophytes." But Jack Gallagher holds out high hopes for the future of a hungry world.

"After all," he says, "Salicornia tastes delicious deep-fried and in casseroles. And Atriplex is a pretty good substitute for spinach."

Paying Rightful Debts

Following editorial is from the Grand Rapids Herald-Review:

A reputation for honesty and for paying debts promptly has always been highly-prized in the United States.

Men and women have made great personal sacrifices over the year to make certain that their obligations were met. There is no shame in borrowing, for many of life's essentials and luxuries require that process.

It is surprising to learn, however, that the federal government today is owed more than 8 billion dollars in delinquent or defaulted loans, made chiefly to college students, veterans, farmers and home owners. The Education department, for example, is starting to go after the delinquent loan debtors who owe the agency some 2.4 billion dollars in outstanding direct and guaranteed student loans.

General Accounting Office studies place much of the blame for the weak record in debt collection with the schools which make the loans and are initially responsible for collecting some of them. Schools often fail to counsel borrowers adequately, lose track of them, and do not refer accounts quickly enough to collection agencies. They also appear reluctant to sue borrowers to collect defaulted loans.

The administration is seeking legislation which would give agencies broader debt collection authority and remove obstacles to collection. It would also allow the government to use private collection agencies to obtain delinquent payments. The Education department recently hired two private agencies to collect on 100,000 delinquent loans, a move which brought repayments of $6,000,000.

In Minnesota, the Veterans Administration says that it has several thousand GI Bill overpayment cases under review in which legal action could be filed unless the debts are paid. New cases of uncollected overpayments are being referred to the VA's district counsel at the rate of 250 a month. The VA insists that it is "more serious than ever" in seeking to recover money veterans owe the VA.

Americans have altered their views about debt, it seems. A law passed in 1978 eased the nation's bankruptcy rules. In the old days, bankruptcy was a degrading experience, limited to somewhat "shady" characters. Brimmer and Co., a Washington D.C., economic and financial consulting firm, says that today the typical composite of the bankrupt is "an individual 34 years old or less who is well educated, holds a stable job, has lived in the same residence five years or more, and has a good payment record with creditors."

"Many of today's bankrupt individuals earn $100,000 or more a year," the firm has discovered.

About 228,000 filed bankruptcy in 1979. The number climbed to 410,695 in 1980, with losses to creditors totaling nearly three billion dollars. Congress has been petitioned to tighten the bankruptcy law again and to cut down on fraudulent filings.

There are legitimate bankruptcies, and there are honest people who may be unable to repay government loans. But there must be some procedure to make sure that people who can afford to pay their debts do it promptly. Going into bankruptcy should not become just a slick method of evading debts while continuing to live happily ever after.

A reputation for honesty and for paying debts will always to important.

DWI: The Solution Is Us

Following article was written by Nita Beckman in the official publication of Minnesota AAA, "Home and Away":

"It was the judge's fault for not keeping me off the street."

Primary responsibility for the havoc they cause clearly belongs to the offenders themselves, but unless judges, prosecutors, policemen and all of us are equally determined to enforce penalties for drunken driving, no deterrentwill work. DWI offenders will become repeat offenders and continue to cause the death of thousands of people annually and injuries to millions more. The implementation of more certain penalties requires pressure from the general public — us.

Present penalties are in effect in print, but not always in practice. The DWI arrest process is often lengthy and authorities continually see offenders escape with reduced charges such as careless driving.

Most efforts to modify laws aimed at alcohol-impaired drivers have been concerned with the severity rather than the certainty of punishment, according to a survey by H. Laurence Ross, Deterrence of the Drinking Driver: An International Survey. The most promising approach, according to Ross, involves increasing the effectiveness of efforts to apprehend impaired drivers and giving them swift and certain penalties — instead of making them more severe.

"There is also the public perception of the likelihood of being apprehended to be considered," says Ross. If alcohol-impaired drivers do not perceive that they could be apprehended for their offenses, then even the threat of certain punishment if caught will not stop them from driving or stop the tragedy of the human suffering from crashes for which they are responsible."

According to William N. Plymat of the Preferred Risk Mutual Insurance Company, "We must put the motorist in a position where his decision to avoid drinking and driving becomes necessary, and when we do this, we will control his action and orient him in spite of his desire not to be oriented."

For example, Plymat says, "Men value their driver's licenses much more than they value their 'right to drink and drive.' When they have to make a choice, they will choose to protect the driver's license and avoid the drinking and driving."

Facts indicate that 25,000 lives are lost annually and millions of injuries occur in accidents involving alcohol. We must make the effort to change such a tragic situation. The cost to an individual is obvious. The cost to society appears in the latent form of taxes and waste of material resources and in the non-solution of such a human problem.

Minnesota AAA encourages citizens to become informed on the subject of alcohol and driving. AA educational materials are available to schools in an effort to help young people make responsible decisions about drinking. Free films are available to groups wishing to view them.

Here are ways in which you as an individual can make an impact:

—Inform yourself and express your concern about this tragic problem to your elected officials.

—When you entertain, be first a friend, then a host. Offer your guests a choice of non-alcoholic beverages. Try to keep friends from driving home drunk.

—Avoid drinking and driving yourself. Give your car keys to a sober friend or call a taxi.

Off-Season Theories

When confirmed golfers aren't out on the course they are thinking about it, so that makes the following principles and theories about the game as timely now as in the spring:

—Newton's Variation — The distance a golf ball will travel is proportional to the mass of the clubhead and the square of its speed except over water.

—Besselink's Law — all trees are magnetic.

—Breman's Theory — The possibility of anything happening on a golf course is in inverse ratio to its desirability.

—Bolt's Variation — The key shot in any round can only be played with the club you wrapped around a tree three holes back.

—Jacklin's Rule — the more important the putt, the less likely it is to drop.

—Trevino's Truism — It is impossible to interpret a golfer's remarks without knowing his score.

Borrowed Nonsense:

The beauty contest winner was being interviewed. "Do you have a lot of trouble with male admirers forcing their attentions on you?" she was asked.

"Not really," she replied. "If they bug me, I simple say three words to them and they immediately leave me alone."

"What are the words?" the interviewer asked.

"Are you saved?" she replied.

First Coed; "I'm going to stop going out with engineering students; they want to leave blueprints on my neck."

Second Coed: "Well the law students aren't any better; they are always contesting your will.

Asked if he had kissed the bride, the young man at the wedding reception smiled and replied, "Well, not lately."

Hints For Homeowners

Fire Detectors Save Lives

A recent study by an international association of fire chiefs revealed that smoke detectors provided the first warning to a home's occupants in more than 40% of fires. That's a statistic sufficient to start any "foot-dragger" about installation of the security device on the way to the nearest source!

Almost unheard of only ten years ago, smoke detectors are today available in nearly all hardware, department, and discount stores, catalog showrooms and home centers at prices less than a fourth of when first introduced. . .as low as $10 for a quality unit. And they're easy to install—the do-it-yourself experts at Cooper Tools say that all you need is one of their Crescent screwdrivers and hole-starting awls.

The most popular early-warning alarm is self-contained, battery-operated of the ionization type, meaning that the horn or buzzer is activated when smoke particles drift into the chamber. Others use a small photoelectric cell to detect smoke or a sensor to sense heat and cause the alarm to sound off.

Where should they be installed? Well, we know smoke rises, so the ideal is on a ceiling, or on a wall 6 to 12 inches from the ceiling. Every level of a house should be protected, with particular attention to halls of bedroom areas and near basement steps.

Once installed, the alarms should be fully tested at least monthly, and batteries replaced yearly. Many models have a test button to check batteries and activate the alarm. Others have a pilot light to indicate whether the electrical power is on. With or without either system, testing with a candle is the absolute safe method, and unit instructions advise how.

Don't put purchase of a detector on your "to do" list—buy and install now!

Making Family Life More Fun

You Beautiful Doll

Sugar and spice and everything nice, that's what little girls are made of. Blend that with today's fashions and you have what little girls of the eighties expect from their dolls.

Glamour Gals on the go. . .

Doll makers are actually looking at the world through the eyes of a little girl and designing in miniature for her fantasies. The successful fashion doll must feature an awareness of today's and tomorrow's trends, plus an understanding of what little girls and their parents like.

One charming new group of fashion dolls are the Glamour Gals, fifteen pretty playthings, only four inches high, that come in a variety of elegant outfits. There are also three handsome boy dolls, complete with accessories for an exciting date: a candlelit dinner for two, a day at the beach or a marvelous motorcycle ride.

The dolls, which cost about as much as a larger doll's single outfit, and their accoutrements, come from Kenner and can be kept in their own collector's showplace—or have a party in their special party place.

and "at home."

These little dolls can make life a lot more fun for your little dolls.

AN OLD FASHIONED DESSERT IS A HEARTY WINTER FAVORITE

Winter seems like just the right season for hearty, old fashioned desserts. They're warm and wonderful and often very nostalgic.

Raisin Bread Pudding is just such a dessert. Usually every family will remember the one that grandmother made was their very favorite, especially when she served it after a spectacular dinner.

This old-fashioned dessert now boasts a new-fashioned method of preparation using Pepperidge Farm Raisin with Cinnamon Bread. The bread is diced, placed in a large casserole and topped with beaten eggs, milk, sugar and vanilla. When baked the pudding comes out puffed and brown. Lovely to look at and delicious to eat.

RAISIN BREAD PUDDING

1 (1 pound) loaf Pepperidge Farm Raisin Bread, diced
4 eggs
1/2 cup sugar
1 quart milk
2 teaspoons vanilla
1/4 cup butter or margarine

Place bread cubes into a greased 3 quart casserole. Beat eggs in bowl. Beat in sugar, milk and vanilla. Pour mixture over bread cubes. Dot top of casserole with butter. Bake in 350° oven for 40 to 45 minutes or until puffed, brown and firm to the touch in the center. Serve hot or cold. Delicious served with sliced peaches, whipped cream or scoops of vanilla ice cream. Serves 6 to 8.

Federal Reserve Says Ag Credit Continues Weak

Rural bankers report that agricultural credit conditions in Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana, and northwestern Wisconsin were fairly weak in the third quarter, and they don't expect much strengthening the rest of the year. Bankers expressed their views in response to the agricultural credit conditions survey conducted by the Federal Reserve bank of Minneapolis in late September and published in early November.

Many of the 125 rural bankers responding to the survey reported signs that farmers in their areas had some trouble repaying loans in the third quarter. About half the bankers said the rate of repayment of farm loans was slower than normal for that time of year. And almost as many — 42 per cent — said the number of farmers trying to refinance or "roll over" old farm loans (instead of paying them off) was greater than normal at their banks.

Bankers linked these repayment problems to farmers' third quarter earnings problems. Although the output of most district farm commodities was greater than a year ago in the third quarter, the prices farmers were getting for most products were much lower and operating costs were up. As a result, almost 60 per cent of the bankers said the net earnings of farmers in their areas were lower than a year earlier in the third quarter.

While these low earnings stimulated the demand for loan refinancing at district rural banks, they did not stimulate the demand for new loans. In fact, as many as 35 per cent of the rural bankers said the demand for new short-term farm loans in their areas was abnormally weak in the third quarter, and 64 per cent said that about the demand for new intermediate-term loans. One banker in Minnesota reported "almost no demand for loans to purchase capital items such as machinery, equipment, and buildings."

Farmers were reluctant to make such investments last quarter, bankers said, because their low earnings couldn't cover the high cost of borrowing. At the end of September, the reported interest rate on short-term farm loans averaged 18.85 per cent, a record high for the Fed's survey. This rate is almost one percentage point higher than the rate bankers reported in the previous survey and nearly five points higher than the rate they reported a year ago.

Most of the surveyed rural bankers didn't expect farmers' financial conditions to improve much in the fourth quarter of 1981. Farm debt repayment is actually expected to deteriorate. About 60 per cent of the bankers expected an "adverse change" in farmers' ability to repay loans in the next three months. Demand for refinancing of old farm loans is expected to be greater than normal at 53 per cent of the banks, an increase of more than 10 percentage points over the share reporting such demand in the third quarter.

Depressed farm earnings will once again be behind the weakness in farm debt repayment, bankers said. Over 60 per cent of the bankers expected net farm earnings in their areas to be less than a year ago in the last quarter of the year, a slightly larger proportion of bankers than reported low earnings in the third quarter. Bankers didn't think farm earnings will improve because they didn't think farm commodity prices will increase.

With farm earnings still low, most of the rural bankers thought many farmers will hold back their applications for new bank loans for another three months. Large percentages of the bankers expected the demand for both short- and intermediate-term loans to be below normal levels during the fourth quarter. A main reason for this weakness will again be the high cost of borrowing, bankers thought. Almost 70 per cent of the bankers expected interest rates to stay at their third quarter highs the rest of the year.

Despite high interest rates, however, some grain farmers will be boosting their demand for both refinancing and new loans in the fourth quarter, bankers said. These farmers will be holding grain off the market in hopes of higher prices ahead, and they will be looking to banks for financial help in the meantime.

Energy Agency Has Meeting Dec. 7 At NCC

Minnesota energy agency extends an invitation to Minnesotans to attend an energy meeting December 7 at 7 p.m. in the theatre classroom A16, Northland community college in Thief River Falls. Meeting is co-sponsored by NCC.

Minnesota energy agency would like Minnesota to celebrate a little less energy dependence each day. The state, according to a recent release from the agency, is totally dependent upon others for oil, natural gas and coal to meet energy demands. However, there are special crops such as cattails, as well as peat, which are expected to meet 15 to 40 per cent of Minnesota's energy needs some day.

State legislature has asked the agency to develop a proposal for special energy crop research for Minnesota.

Hazardous Waste Board Meets Here

Minnesota waste management board will conduct a two-day visit to northwest Minnesota Thursday and Friday touring areas under consideration for hazardous waste disposal sites and conducting a special open meeting to hear from area residents at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Thief River Falls city auditorium.

The board meeting will resume at 9 a.m. Friday at the Thief River Falls city auditorium meeting room, when the board will take up its regular meeting agenda. The public is welcome and encouraged to attend the Thursday and Friday sessions; the Thursday evening meeting will be devoted entirely to comment and testimony from the public.

During Thursday morning and afternoon the board, accompanied by local officials and residents, will tour the various "proposed candidate areas" in Kittson, Mrshall and Beltrami counties for possible hazardous waste disposal sites.

On October 8 the board designated one proposed candidate area, totalling four square miles, in Beltrami County; another area of three square miles in Kittson county; and three candidate areas totalling nine square miles in eastern Marshall county.

"With this visit to northwest Minnesota the board is continuing its tours of areas currently under consideration as possible hazardous waste disposal sites," board chairman Robert Dunn commented. "The siting process will culminate with the selection of one state disposal site in 1984. We intend to take this opportunity to view the areas first hand and meet with residents and community leaders.

"By meeting in the central location at Thief River Falls we will take time to listen to the questions, views and recommendations of area citizens," Dunn added. "The two-day meeting will also give residents a chance to attend a board meeting as we deliberate several issues related to Minnesota's hazardous waste management."

Northwest regional development commission has also joined in encouraging concerned citizens from throughout the area to attend the meeting and make known their views to the board.

Sites designated on October 8 as candidate areas are located in Caribou township of Kittson county, in western Beltrami county, and in Espelie, East Park, Whiteford and Rollis townships in eastern Marshall county.

Northwest regional development commission, Marshall and Kittson county commissioners, City of Thief River Falls and a number of townships and other groups have taken stands in opposition to siting of the waste disposal facility on the sites proposed for this area.

Objections are based on (1) distance from major hazardous waste generators in the Twin Cities area, which would make use of these sites very clstly and would pose high risks associated with the transportation of hazardous materials; (2) poor road access to the sites and limitations posed by the highway system throughout the area; (3) susceptibility of these areas to high water table conditions and occasional flooding during the chronic floods that affect the area; and (4) the potential for contamination of area water supplies in the Red Lake river watershed and the Roseau river watershed.

Public testimony period set for Thursday evening will be one of few opportunities for the public to express views directly to the waste management board members who are charged with the responsibility for selecting a final site, according to the regional commission office.

Board Chairman Gives Views . . .

Dunn Comments On Waste Site

Robert Dunn, chairman of the Minnesota waste management board, will preside when the board holds a regular meeting Friday at 9 a.m. in the Thief River Falls city auditorium. Following is a letter to the editor written by Dunn in advance of that meeting:

"Burying hazardous wastes in the ground is not finding a solution to Minnesota's hazardous waste problem — instead, it's like sweeping it under the rug."

Seldom in the Minnesota debate over siting hazardous waste facilities have there been truer statements. In fact, the last thing other members of the waste management board and I want to do with hazardous waste is put it in the ground. Instead, the state must first examine all alternatives to hazardous waste disposal, and development ways to reprocess, recycle and reduce hazardous wastes to the greatest possible extent.

But, wait a minute, you ask: Isn't this the waste management board that's going to find some place for big business to dump untreated hazardous wastes and endanger the environment? No, not at all. The waste management board is not only going to site some much-needed new hazardous waste facilities, it's going to design a comprehensive, long-term plan for hazardous waste management in Minnesota that will emphasize the reduction of waste recycling, reprocessing and the reduction of hazardous wastes at their source. And we're going to do that with the participation of concerned and involved citizens.

Before citizens can participate, however, they should become informed on the issue and have the facts on our siting process:

— Our siting process emphasizes alternatives to the land disposal of hazardous wastes. The waste management act, in fact, stresses the recovery of energy and resources from wastes and a reduction in Minnesota's dependence on landfills.

— We are searching for a disposal site because the Legislature — along with representatives of citizens' groups, environmental organizations and business — envisioned a process in which all alternatives would be explored while the state looked for a site for the disposal of basic residues which remain after processing and which must be securely contained if we are to protect the environment.

— The board is looking at the above-ground storage of hazardous wastes. That's one alternative to land disposal, and we're looking at all alternatives. In fact, the board is examining more technological alternatives than are some others, who are promoting only a few limited — and often untried — hazardous waste processes.

GLEN FOLLET used a die grinder to enlarge and reshape intake and exhaust ports on a customer's engine. Modifications offered by Hi-Performance Engineering are claimed to raise horsepower of the Arctic El Tigre to over 100.

New Business Rises From Arctic's Ashes

by Dave Berg
Times Reporter

Why build parts and accessories for Arctic Cat, a snowmobile that is supposedly dead or at least on the way to obsolescence?" I asked Larry Coltom, Glen Follet and Wayne Schantzen, co-owners of Hi-Performance Engineering Inc., a new business started August 1.

"There's a lot of loyalty there," says Follet, "and we're doing what we best know how to do. Schantzen allows that the Arctic sled is "where my knowledge and my heart is."

"I guess you can tell, our hearts are still pretty black" adds Coltom, referring to the color of the Arctic machines.

All three men lost their jobs when Arctic Enterprises was forced to close down due to financial difficulties caused by a combination of high interest rates, inflation and poor snow conditions two years in a row. Glen and Larry were both involved in the racing program — Follet in engine design and Coltom as a driver, field tester and trouble shooter. Wayne was an engineer involved in clutch design. All had been with Arctic practically since high school, with a total of about 40 years among them.

Why and how did they get started in the snowmobile business? All said they preferred to live in northern Minnesota, and as Larry put it, "Arctic was the only thing going in the community at the time."

They expressed mixed feelings about its closing. "It took a long time to accept it," said Glen. "I was still naive enough to think someone would bail us out." They expressed agreement with comments made by Edgar Hetteen in an interview last week about the community seeming to lack the kind of scrappers who wouldn't allow a home-grown industry to go down the drain.

"If the economy had been different. . . If we had gotten snow it might have been different. . . but, reality is reality," said Coltom. All indicated that Arctic still had potential for profit to a manufacturer of the right caliber. "Done right, it can be a profitiable business again," said Glen.

"When Arctic closed, none of us wanted to leave town," says Glen, "so we just put our heads together to do what had to be done." What they did was put together a package of parts and modifications for the Arctic 6000 El Tigre, (advertised as the world's fastest production snowmobile) to make it go even faster. Then, using contacts made during their years at Arctic, and a list of El Tigre owners, they sent out a

IWA Local Struggles To Maintain Its Operations

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

While labor and management often seem to be completely in adversary roles, such was not the case with Arctic Enterprises and Local 4-348 of the International Woodworkers of America. At least not in the opinion of Wayne Bjornrud, business agent for the IWA local since 1974, assistant business agent from 1969 to 1974 and an Arctic Plant employee from November of 1961 to 1969.

"Of course we had our battles with management over the years," Bjornrud said. "But in the past three or four years in particular I would say we have had a very good working relationship. And in the past year especially I think we have showed our support and backing of the company in every way that we possibly could."

Bjornrud said that the union testified in support of the company in bankruptcy proceedings over the objections of a number of attorneys representing creditors, especially the major banks. And an attorney representing the union was appointed to the creditors' committee, providing an opportunity to be of further assistance to the company.

Management of the company did not consider the union to have been a problem which contributed to the firm's eventual collapse, Bjornrud said, and he believes the local was always willing to communicate with management and to be supportive.

The business agent expressed the opinion that officers of the local were "perturbed and disgusted" with the group of bankers which not only refused to extend operating capital to Arctic Enterprises but called in loans and made operation impossible. "It seems they wanted to shut down the company no matter what," Bjornrud said. Along with many in Arctic management, Bjornrud believes the company could have pulled out of its difficulties with another go-round of financing.

Naturally, the IWA local's support of the company in the past year or two was not without a selfish motive. Without the company and employment it provided, the union local could - and is find itself in dire straits. The local draws its strength from its membership, and that dues paying membership has dwindled to a fraction of what it once was.

At the peak of Arctic Enterprises manufacturing several years ago, Local 4-348 had more than 2,000 members, including about 1,700 at the Thief River Falls Arctic plant, 150 at the Arctic garment

BUSINESS AGENT for Local 4-348 of the International Woodworkers of America in Thief River Falls, Wayne Bjornrud, is serving as his own secretary these days. He has conducted a one-person operation since July as the union gears down due to Arctic Enterprises lay-offs. With dues paying membership only a fraction of what it was at the Arctic employment peak, the local is operating on reserves and considering possible necessity of future reorganization. But Bjornrud emphasizes that the local will continue to represent its members regardless of what retrenchments may be necessary.

Browning-Hemmesch Vows Said In Virginia

Gwendolyn Kay Browning and Michael Lawrence Hemmesch, both of Alexandria, Va., exchanged marriage vows on October 10 at 2:30 p.m., at the Fredericksburg Church of Christ in Fredericksburg, Va.

The bride is the daughter of Mr and Mrs. Bobbie Browning of Fredericksburg. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Hemmesch of Thief River Falls.

Rev. Warren Potter officiated at the double ring ceremony. Tammy Cameron played the traditional wedding march, and Michelle Johnson, a friend, and Robin McClain, grandfather of the bride, sang. Selections were "Longer," "The Wedding Song," "Follow Me," "Annie," and "Love the World Away."

Candelabra and an arrangement of yellow mums, apricot roses, daisies and baby elf carnations graced the chancel.

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a white floor-length gown in A-line styling with long sheer sleeves gathered into wide, fitted cuffs. Seed pearls enhanced the bodice and lace outlined the Queen Anne neckline and edged the flowing veil held by a lace profile headpiece. She carried a bouquet of daisies, apricot roses, baby elf carnations and babies' breath.

Vicki Auckland of Herndon, Va., a friend of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were the bride's sisters, Connie Browning and Missy Browning. All wore identical nectar-colored gowns with collared lace yokes. Each carried a basket filled with daisies, apricot roses, baby elf carnationas and babies' breath.

Cory McNutt of Springfield, Va., a friend of the groom, was best man. Groomsmen were the groom's brothers, Mark and Mitch Hemmesch of Thief River Falls. Serving as ushers were Milo Hemmesch, a brother of the groom, and Tom Auckland, Herndon, Fa., a friend. All wore dark brown tuxedos with apricot rose boutonnieres pinned on their lapel. A similar boutonniere complemented the white tuxedo worn by the groom.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Browning selected a burgundy, floor-length gown. The groom's mother was attired in a teal-green floor-length gown. Their corsages were of white gardenias.

Honor guests were Mr. and Mrs. Robin McClain, grandparents of the bride, Rick Wold and Brian Jacobson of Thief River Falls, friends of the groom, and Valerie Mims, the bride's personal attendant.

A reception at the Lee Hill Community center followed with Phil and Phyllis Inscoe as host and hostess. Bess Potter cut the wedding cake, Vonnie Carter served the punch, Ginnie Stitcher registered the guests and Phyllis Inscoe arranged the fits.

Centering the serving table was a four-tiered wedding cake decorated with apricot roses. Between the tall pillars that supported the upper tier, was a floral archway with a minature bride and groom. The upper tier was completely covered with apricot roses.

For traveling on the wedding trip to Niagara Falls, Toronto, Canada, the bride wore a dark blue pin-stripe shirt and blazer, accented with a white blouse.

The couple is at home at 7844 Stork Road, Alexandria, Va. 22306. The bride is a graduate of Spotsylvania high school and the groom is a graduate of Lincoln high school, Thief River Falls. Both are employed by the FBI in Washington, D.C. Photo, Lee Milstead, Fredericksburg, Va.

Stumpf Asks Disaster Area Designation

Representative LeRoy Stumpf, Plummer, presented a resolution seeking disaster aid for Red Lake and Pennington county area farmers to the Minnesota House of Representatives committee on agriculture on Tuesday, November 17. The committee unanimously gave the resolution informal approval. It will be introduced in the full House of Representatives in December.

The resolution asks the President of the United States and Congress to declare the two counties disaster areas for the purpose of receiving federal disaster aid.

Stumpf noted in his presentation to the committee that some parts of Red Lake county have received as much as 60 inches of rain since the end of May. In addition, he said, unseasonably cold weather has added to the problems of farmers in the stricken areas.

"Both counties are facing significant losses in the output of wheat, barley, oats, corn, sunflowers, soybeans, potatoes, hay and honey, and the economic losses may total more than $0,667,000," said Stumpf. "In addition, the impossibility of completing fall field preparation due to wetness will extend the disaster into the 1982 growing season."

The area legislator explained that it is necessary to have the counties declared a disaster area to enable affected farmers to apply for low interest disaster loans.

Financial Aid Depended On By Students

Ninety per cent of University of Minnesota undergraduates surveyed recently said they work to pay college expenses and 25 per cent said they would be forced to withdraw without financial aid.

Continued inflation coupled with proposed reductions in financial aid "will undoubtedly create problems for some students," said Glenn Hendricks, head of student life studies and planning department, which conducted the survey and a similar one in 1975.

"There doesn't seem to be room for many students to rely on more work or for students to get more money from their parents," Henricks said.

Study was initiated by the Minnesota student association to find out how much it costs to go to school and where students get their money. Questionnaires were mailed to 567 randomly selected undergraduates registered at Twin Cities campus winter quarter 1981, of which 406 students responded.

Respondents said they spent an average $4,286 for the 1980-81 academic year, $1,596 more than the average student surveyed spent in 1974-75. Increased costs of attending school have been met partially by a higher percentage of students receiving loans, grants and scholarships, the study shows.

During the 1974-75 academic year only 19 per cent of respondents indicated they received money from grants and scholarships and 14 per cent received university-administered loans. But this year 33 per cent said they received help through grants and scholarships and 27 per cent used university-administered loans.

Total of 58 per cent of respondents in the current study said nearly half their income came from financial aid in the forms of grants, scholarships, loans or GI or Social Security benefits. Ninety per cent of respondents said slightly more than half their income was derived from employment or savings. Four per cent lower respondents listed parents as their chief source of income in the 1981 survey than in the earlier one, 44 per cent of the sample said parents contributed 41 per cent of their income, while about half said their parents provide little or no money.

Since the first study six years ago Consumer Price Index has climbed 66 per cent, Henricks said. During the same period, amount of student aid available through loans, grants and work programs has increased 160 per cent. Also eligibility requirements for federal loans were relaxed during the Carter administration.

Students' expenses varied considerably depending on age and whether they lived at home. Average expenditure of students not living with parents or relatives totaled $4,884, while those living at home spent only $2,924. Average expenditure of students 24 or older was $5,253, while those under 24 spent only $4,087. Seniors spent an average $4,532 while average freshman spent $3,787. There was no significant difference in amount spent by men and women.

Tuition, books, entertainment, transportaion, personal items and family support contributed to students' expenses. Amount spent by those who provided family support was the only expense that had decreased since the earlier study, while amount spent for tuition had increased 68 per cent.

Room and board was the largest single expense reported. Mean cost of room and board was $2,094, a $794 increase over the earlier survey period. Average amount spent for tution in 1980-81 was $1,310, while 1974-75 figure was $780.

Study indicates a 44 per cent increase in amount spent for books and entertainment since 1974-75. Respondents said they spent $230 for books last year and $345 for entertainment.

Transportation costs have increased by 32 per cent since the earlier survey and amount spent on personal items jumped 40 per cent.

Onkka Given Meritorious Mast At NC

Marine Lance Cpl. Michael C. Onkka, son of Carl and Ruth Onkka, Thief River Falls, has been awarded a Meritorius Mast while serving with Detachment "A", 2nd Force service support group, marine corps, air station, Cherry Point, N.C.

A Meritorious Mast is official recognition from a marine's commanding officer for superior individual performance. It is issued in the form of a bulletin published throughout the command, and a copy is entered in the marines permanent service records.

A 1974 graduate of Lincoln senior high school, Onkka joined the marine corps in December of 1979.

GTA Members Conclude 44th Annual Meet

Members of the Grain Terminal Association (GTA) concluded their 44th annual meeting recently in Minneapolis after two days of reports, speeches and voting.

Meeting began November 17 with a financial report by GTA president and general manager B.J. Malusky and divisional reports by John Sellner, vice president, Great Plains supply; Karl Butzer, vice president, GTA feeds; Roland Pavek, vice president, country operations division; and Allen Hanson, vice president, GTA grain marketing.

Lawrence Williams, senior vice president of finance for the St. Paul bank for cooperatives and the federal intermediate credit bank, spoke on financial conditions throughout the nation, particularly in rural areas, and on recent legislation that allowed the banks for cooperatives to take part in the financing of farm product exports.

Nita Gibson, Seminole, Texas, president of "Women Involved in Farm Economics" (WIFE), offered a "Bill of Rights" for the American farmer. Her bill of rights included the rightful pursuit of a profit, and prohibited the executive branch of government from making treaties involving agricultural products without the advice and consent of the American farmer.

"We believe that if we unite commodity by commodity and establish a system with supply being released only on demand, we can establish a seller's market. We believe this system would establish the producer as a price maker instead of a price taker," she said.

Ann Scott, transportaion economist for the Montana Farmers Union, urged the 4,000 farmers gathered at the Minneapolis auditorium to work hard on transportation at national and state levels and to consider building subterminal elevators to combat rail abandonments.

In resolutions passed at the meeting, members of the cooperative urged federal and state governments to assure a sound rural highway network, and asked the Interstate Commerce commission to keep the principles of free enterprise in mind when making merger proposals.

Members also commended Malusky and vice president and assistant general manager Lowell Hargens for their many years of service to the cooperative. Both Malusky and Hargens have announced their retirements next spring.

GTA board chairman Gordon Matheson, Conrad, MT, called upon farmers to adopt a "renewed commitment to working together to solve our problems." He continued, "That is not going to come cheap. If we are going to continue to be an effective part of the grain marketing system, we have to make an envestment far above that required in the past. The alternative is to let the private grain companies monopolize our industry once again."

Election of directors brought reelection to three-year terms on the GTA board of Matheson; Philip Testerman, Wessington, SD; Edward Ellison, Elbow Lake; and Lester Larson, Brocket, ND. Myron Just, Berlin, ND, former North Dakota commissioner of agriculture, won the seat of John Horner, Burnstad, who was seeking reelection to a fifth term of office.

Meeting was followed by a banquet in the Minneapolis auditorium and speeches by Malusky and the U.S. Rep. Byron Dorgan of North Dakota.

Dorgan noted that there is as much wheat in the international pipeline as there is oil in the Saudi Arabian pipeline and that Saudis were the "recognized price leaders" in the oil market. "Why, then, is the American producer not the price leader in American wheat?" asked Dorgan. "Why do we grow wheat at $5.20 a bushel production cost and then sell it to some of the most prosperous countries in the world at a price that yields the farmer $3.50? There's too much interference by people who want cheap food policy."

Pennington Co. Delegates At NFO Conclave

Pennington county will be represented by a delegation of nine members at the national convention of the National farmers organization to be conducted today through December 3 at Indianapolis.

Those planning to attend include Merle Lundeen, Juel and Annabelle Chervestad, Ronald and Gail Kotrba, Bill Peterson, Jens Steen and Darrow and Shirley Lundeen.

Convention will feature a report by President DeVon Woodland of Blackfoot, Idaho, on progress made during the last year in bargaining for farmers at the marketplace to achieve cost of production plus a reasonable profit.

Reports will also be heard from various commodity departments on gains recorded during the year, along with new programs for 1982.

National farmers has coast to coast membership and its members own and operate nationwide collection, dispatch and delivery points, handling virtually all farm commodities.

Crime Rate Is Rising Faster In Rural Areas

Rural crime in Minnesota increased 13.1 per cent during first six months of 1981 compared to a similar period in 1980. This is much higher than for urban areas which showed an increase of only 4.8 per cent according to Public Safety Commissioner John P. Sopsic.

Sopsic noted 1981's increase came on top of a 12 per cent rural crime increase in 1980 over 1979.

Increases during first six months of 1981 in rural crime were these: murders up 19 per cent; rape 22 per cent; robbery 17 per cent; aggravated assault 8 per cent; burglary 16 per cent; larceny 12 per cent; vehicle theft 11 per cent and arson 4 per cent.

Total value of property stolen in rural Minnesota during 1980 was $11,357,089, up 20 per cent from 1979.

Sopsic said most popular targets of criminals in rural areas are fertilizer, herbicides, machinery, tools, cattle, grain, guns and home furnishings.

"Farm chemicals have become a lucrative business for thieves since the steep rise in oil prices led to a sharp increase in cost of chemicals," Sopsic said. "Thieves hit rural grain elevators, farms, feed stores or lawn and garden centers that handle farm chemicals. Law enforcement officers in Minnesota, Iowa and South Dakota have been cooperating in an effort to keep up with the chemical burglary activities," Sopsic added.

He urged farmers to join Operation Identification, a program of the Department of Public Safety, that encourages marking of valuables, which aids in recovery of stolen articles.

"Farm equipment, cattle and grain are easy targets for thieves. It's not a good idea to leave major farm equipment or trailers or trucks loaded with grain out in the field," Sopsic warned. "If you must, remove the distributor cap, rotor and wire and secure equipment with a chain. Tools, portable equipment and barrels and sacks containing chemicals should be locked up. Grain should be stored in a protected location."

Farmers should be as careful about protecting their homes as city dwellers, Sopsic reminded, urging installation of good locks. "Make your home look occupied when you're away," he concluded.

Mn. Waste Management Board Explains Position

Extensive opposition has surfaced against establishment of a state hazardous waste disposal site on any of the four areas under consideration in Kittson and Marshall counties. Land owners on the sites, farmers on neighboring property, communities which receive floodwaters from the areas, county boards of commissioners and the regional development council board are among those publicly on record as opposed to site use.

Viewpoint of the Minnesota waste management board is published in its November issue of "Foresite". Because of the local interest in the potential siting, the article is reprinted here in its entirety:

Some call it a process of "suspense," others a series of "eliminations." For the Waste Management Board it has become the "narrowing" of large areas around the state to smaller areas and, eventually, specific sites. The "narrowings" will end in 1984, when the Board selects Minnesota's hazardous waste disposal site.

Although the process is methodical and gradual, it reached an important juncture and took on a new dimension on October 8. After several months of narrowing large areas "likely" to yield safe and acceptable hazardous waste disposal sites, the Board selected small "candidate areas" for specific investigation as possible sites for a hazardous waste disposal facility.

On October 8 the Waste Management Board designated 20 "proposed candidate areas" for possible disposal sites, totalling 57 square miles statewide. The areas — selected from 55 "preliminary candidate areas" designated on September 10 — affect 12 Minnesota counties, including lands owned by 240 Minnesotans and a variety of public lands.

Board Chairman Robert Dunn termed the October 8 proposal "the latest step in a long, careful and deliberate siting process." In the weeks since, he and other Board members have emphasized three important points concerning the consideration of the 20 proposed candidate areas:

+ Board members are especially mindful of the concerns and anxieties of the owners of property within the 20 areas. Although the Board will continue to pursue the siting process to eliminate unsuitable areas and resolve many uncertainties, it will be in frequent personal communication with residents in or near the areas now under study.

+ The needs, concerns and livelihoods of individuals in each of the areas will be considered as the Board continues to evaluate the areas. In making the October 8 selection, in fact, the Board not only considered a variety of technical information but also looked at other factors — such as details on farming — which concern important social considerations.

+ A great deal of work still remains to be done in evaluating the various areas and eliminating unsuitable sites. None of the areas, Dunn emphasized, are "final" candidates for a hazardous waste disposal facility. Much more technical analysis remains to be done, and the Board will make several more "narrowings" and eliminations in the coming months.

Dunn also emphasized that the 20 "proposed candidate areas" continue to reflect the Board's four siting categories, or "criteria combinations," which have characterized the siting areas since large "study areas" were designated in May. Of the 20 areas, according to the four categories:

+ Four are under the heading of "best hydrogeology statewide;"

+ Five are in the category of "good hydrogeology which avoids prime agricultural lands;"

+ Three have good hydrogeology and are "in or close to the seven-county Metro areas;" and

+ Eight proposed candidate areas have good hydrogeology and are on public lands.

"We emphasize that all of the areas will be considered equally and that no area or category has any advantage over another," Dunn said. The four categories are separate and discrete; Board members hope that when six candidates sites are chosen in May the four categories — or "siting options" — will be represented.

In preparing for its October 8 decision the Board reviewed "fact sheets" on the 55 preliminary candidate areas. Those sheets included specific information — much of it provided by local residents — on a number of siting factors, including:

+ Surface waters and hydrogeology;

+ Transportation — both to and within — the individual areas;

+ Population and existing and planned land uses;

+ Possible impacts on natural resources, such as wildlife and natural habitats; and

+ Agriculture, including productivity, farm types, crops, irrigation, tiling, and ditches. Information from the fact sheets will be utilized by the Board as it evaluates the 20 areas, along with additional information yet to be gathered on the areas.

Much of the additional information will be obtained through soil borings in each area, which Assistant to the Board Chairman Tom Johnson detailed.

"Soil borings will involve the drilling of five holes at each proposed candidate area. Four holes will be drilled to approximately 100 feet, and one hole will be drilled to the bedrock, perhaps to a depth of 200 feet," Johnson explained. "A drilling firm contracted by the Board will perform the borings, to provide samples to help determine the texture and content of the soils, the presence of any groundwater and other important siting factors.

"The holes will then be filled with a non-shrinkable material to a level several feet below the surface, then filled with soil to a depth sufficient not to jeopardize any future cultivation or soil tillage," Johnson said. "Any anticipated temporary damages will be paid for 'up front' and followup visits will be made with landowners to determine that the drillings were done properly and without disruption," he said.

"No one from the Board will unduly encroach upon any private property, and we will personally communicate with landowners before anyone undertakes the soil borings," Johnson emphasized. "These on-site drillings will provide information needed to eliminate areas unsuitable for a hazardous waste disposal site."

Board communications with local residents have already begun with letters from Dunn to local officials and to owners of property within each of the 20 areas. Dunn and other Board members have sought to dispel a variety of rumors which have circulated about the Board.

"The Board has not imposed any moratorium on development within these 20 proposed candidate areas," Dunn said. "In addition, the needs and livelihoods of property owners will be paramount as the Board's siting process continues.

"The land-disposal of hazardous wastes is, for the Waste Management Board, the last resort in our state's program of hazardous waste management," Dunn added. "In the many months before we select the final site the Board will work to help establish new processing facilities, to reduce hazardous wastes and to promote all alternatives to hazardous waste disposal."

Learn How To Buy Meat At Its Freshest

When can you buy meat at its freshest? To find out, ask the manager of your grocery store what days he gets his supply. Different stores have different delivery schedules, depending, on volume of food turnover, says a nutrition column compiled by Laurence M. Hursh, M.D. consultant, national dairy council.

Another way you can determine the freshness of meat is by knowing how to read a meat wrapper label. The label contains such information as the cut of meat, its weight and the price per pound. It also indicates the "pull date," which tells both the butcher and the buyer the last day the meat can be sold.

Meat is not necessarily unsafe to eat after the pull date. It is, however, past peak freshness.

Smart shoppers take the time to check newspaper advertising for food specials before making a trip to the supermarket. They also take a list on every shopping trip — and then buy only those foods on the list (except for unadvertised food bargains that they can really use).

Convenience foods don't have to be low in nutritional value. Nor do they have to be expensive. By preparing and freezing dishes rich in meat, vegetables and cheese when you have the time, you can concoct your own personalized "TV dinners." And you'll save money.

One way to cut down on your grocery bill is by buying large and whole cuts of meat. That doesn't mean, however, you have to bore yourself and your family with the same supper night after night. There are many ways to use a cut of meat. Round bone roast, for instance, can be prepared as pot roast, Swiss steak or stew.

Do you have a nutrition question for Dr. Hursh? Write "Nutrition for Today," P.O. Box 721, Rosemont, IL 60018. Answers to questions will appear in future columns.

'Critterman' Appears At Roseau Thurs.

Current described as "not a show . . . but an experience," the Roseau county museum proudly presents Dennis Olson, alias "Critterman", Thursday (December 3) beginning at 8 p.m. in the museum assembly room.

". . . the room vibrates in anticipation when with a sinister hiss, the hunched figure charges in. He looks only part human. Slowly unfolding words of animal lore from the North Woods . . . this critter reveals the "secrets" of the woods. He does skits, makes you laugh, makes you fear and makes you feel!"

This is "Critterman", one of four characters developed by actor-naturalist Dennis Olson as an effective technique in the discovery of natural history for all ages. As a biologist-geologist, Olson has been a teaching naturalist in northern Minnesota for 10 years, establishing a reputation as an innovator in his field. His articles, in state and national publications cover such topics as arctic ecology, beavers, winter adaptions, hunting and human predation, snowshoeing, backpacking and plant lore. He founded Earthlore theatrical productions in 1980 to share his creative ideas with others.

"Critterman" is an experience for the whole family. Sponsored by the Roseau county historical society, there is no admission charge. For more information about this event, contact the Roseau county museum at 463-1918.

Drunk Drivers Being Arrested At Record Rate

Minnesota State Patrol, announced a 40.0 per cent increase in number of arrests for driving while intoxicated (DWI) during first nine months of 1981, according to Department of Public Safety (DPS) Commissioner John P. Sopsic.

This comes on top of 30 per cent increase in Patrol arrests for all of 1980 compared to 1979. Patrol made 5,255 DWI arrests in 1980.

Patrol arrested 5,107 people for DWI between January 1 and September 30 this year compared with 3,634 for the corresponding period in 1980. Col. Roger Ledding, Patrol chief, said he expected totals to rise during Thanksgiving and Christmas holiday periods. "We know the combination of holidays, possible bad weather and alcohol is often a tragic mixture," Ledding said. "Our troopers will be striving harder to keep the drunk driver off the road."

Project 20 troopers, teams assigned to high-accident roadways in the state, are making many DWI arrests during their shifts. They work different sections of the state for 10-day periods and have made as many as 13 DWI arrests in some areas. Surprisingly, those arrests are being made during daylight hours, Ledding added. Other troopers assigned to regular districts are noting usualy high numbers of nighttime DWI arrests.

Overall, division of driver and vehicle services of DPS reports the total number of DWI arrests thus far this year has increased to 25,768 for the first nine months compared to 22,116 for a similar period in 1980. That represents a 16 per cent increase. Minnesota recorded its highest number of DWI arrests in 1980 when nearly 30,000 were made.

New Business Rises From Arctic Ashes

mailing explaining what they had to offer, and they were in business.

How do they feel about the potential of their business? "I'm pretty optimistic," says Glen. Since incorporating in August they have recovered their investment plus making a living at it. "We've also accumulated some inventory," adds Larry.

Rapid recovery is credited to a conservative approach, hard work and low overhead. Their shop is a small quonset shed in Larry Coltom's back yard. It's heated with wood burned in a barrel stove so utilities only amount to about $13 per month. "and Taffy, our security guard, works cheap," adds Larry. At the mention of her name, Taffy raises her ears and wags her tail. She appears to be guarding the stove. "She gets really excited if anyone gets around the test sled, though," notes Larry.

They usually work from at least 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., but if there are orders to be packed they work until done. "Whatever it takes," says Wayne. Glen compares it to farming, noting "we've got a six month season and that's when we've got to make it." He says they'll probably do some research and development in the off season.

"We're scrappers, make no mistake about that," says Larry, "We'll fight, scratch and claw to make this thing work," adding, "There's no such thing as can't be done to us!"

Who does what, individually? Glen is in charge of books, Wayne and Glen do most of the ordering, and Larry is in charge of field testing, but all work together, helping to get the job done. When Glen is called to the phone, Wayne steps in and cc's heads for him. Glen takes over grinding ports for Wayne under like circumstances.

The phone rings a lot. "It can be aggravating when you're trying to get something done," notes Larry. Sometimes it's people wanting to order parts, or inquiring about dealerships, but much of the time it's people just wanting some free advice. "We do a lot of things that don't make a lot of money," says Larry, but he notes that service is a big part of their reputation. "If we treat the customers, the product will sell itself."

Their list of products is growing, but currently includes high-performance modification kits for Arctic's 6000 El Tigre and 340 Sno-Pro models. Kits consist of tuned exhaust system, cylinder porting and two 44 millimeter carburetors, plus a clutch kit for the 6000. Customers may order either the full kit or any part of it.

They also sell tuned exhaust systems for Arctic's 500, 250 and 440 cc machines, plus special "corner grabber" track studs, "super tuff" clutch bolts, and clutch engagement kits for 80 and 81 machines. Larry says, "I lie awake at night trying to think up things we can do to make this thing better."

Customer sends in his cylinders and heads, (they prefer not to get complete engines and charge $25 per hour for disassembly) and they grind ports to a predetermined size and shape, established through testing. Heads are cc'd (measured for volume) and sent to Al Aaseby's machine shop in Thief River Falls with instructions on how much material to remove from the gasket surface. This process raises compression ratio. Head is cc'd again when they get it back, to ensure that machining was done to specifications.

Aaseby also makes the track studs which are then sent to Minneapolis for hardening and plating. All other parts come from various locations: carburetors from Chicago, cables from Kansas, weight arms and clutches from Indiana, engagement kits from Coon Rapids, exhaust systems from Wisconsin, and various other parts are purchased from Arctic and Polaris. Everything is shipped directly to them and they then reship to the customer or dealer.

Occasionally, a delay in receiving one of the parts holds up shipment of otherwise complete kits. Such was the case on the day I was there. A phone call to the manufacturer brought promises that the order had been shipped. The day's mail revealed a shipment from the manufacturer, but not the one wanted. More phone calls were made to try to track it down. "That's one of the disadvantages of low overhead," commented Wayne.

I asked about their testing facilities, commenting that they must have had a lot of equipment at Arctic. "We had just about everything there," said Larry. What do they use now? "I've got the fastest sled in the world out back, and about 10 acres with hardly a blade of grass that's not torn up," says Larry, adding with a grin, "I don't know if it's cheaper than plowing, but the ground sure turns black."

They seem very confident about their abilities and their machine. Wayne says, "I've got the facts pretty well stuck in my head. I know what that machine will do if I change something." Larry admits there could be a need for more test facilities sometime in the future, but notes, "if it doesn't work in the field, it's no damn good."

How fast is their sled? "The fastest in the world" says Larry. 6000 El Tigres would do close to 100 mph out of the box with 85 stock horsepower. Their kit pushes horsepower figures up over 100. They say it has been clocked at over 1000 mph on blacktop.

Who buys that kind of machine? Glen says the typical 6000 owner bought it because it was the fastest production sled in the world. He added that that kind of person "always wants a little more. He's very high performance minded." Snowmobiles are one of the few areas left where government has yet to place a lot of restrictions. Larry observes that people were racing their snowmobiles even back when they would only do 15 or 20 mph. "Competition is something great!" he comments.

Since they are all racing oriented, I asked Larry if he would be coming out of retirement as a driver and competing again. "I might try 'Alex' (the Alexandria Sno-Cross) this year. It all depends on how busy we are, I guess. I really enjoyed that one last time." (He won it.)

What are future plans for Hi-Performance Engineering, Inc.? "We're always looking to expand," says Glen. With about 25 current dealers handling their products, and about one a week being added, their market is expanding too. To qualify as a dealer one must buy at least $1,000 worth of products. They now have dealers in states as far away as Alaska, Utah, Idaho, Massachusetts, New York and Connecticut. They also sell direct to individuals at retail prices.

Noting that they are developing products for other Arctic machines, I asked if they would consider other brands of snowmobiles. "Our hearts are too black yet," said Larry. Glen conceded that if they had to they would,' "But we'd rather not." Wayne explains, "what we know best is what comes easiest." With about 8,000 El Tigres out there, they figure they have a couple of years of business just serving them.

If someone bought up Arctic would they go to work there? They all say they wouldn't leave Thief River Falls. If they reopened the plant here? "That would be nice," says Glen, "I'd have to give it some long hard thought." That they enjoyed their jobs with Arctic is obvious, but Larry sums up their feelings about the new business when he says, "I don't think we'd ever give this up though, even if we just did it nights."

IWA Struggles To Maintain Operations

plant in Karlstad and another 100 at the Arctic plant in Clearbrook. It also represented employees in several other employee groups.

Now the dues paying membership is down to about 225 and the future of the local operation is uncertain. While the local had a business agent, assistant agent and secretary during the peak years, Bjornrud is now alone in the office at the corner of Eighth street and Atlantic avenue. He has been his own secretary since July. In the IWA, members don't pay union dues if they are not employed, and the operation has depended to some extent on reserves which were built up during the good years.

Largest active unit in the local now is comprised of the non-professional employees at Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls with about 155 members. Bagley Kiln and Component company in Bagley, which kiln dries lumber and cuts it to order for futniture companies, has another 31 members. Headwater Mills at Bagley manufactures pallets and employs 35 to 40 union members. Martin Mills at Shevlin has had up to seven employees but is now down to two. And the union represents about 10 maintenance and custodial employees at the Roseau school.

Under the union's contract with Arctic Enterprises, the members remain members in good standing for a period of three years following a lay-off. This preserves their seniority in the event of a call-back. Since there is no dues payment involved, many of the union members have retained their membership and are still carried on the local's membership rolls. Bjornrud estimates that current numbers would be about 750 in Thief River Falls, 125 in Karlstad and 100 in Clearbrook. The union's current contract with Arctic Enterprises extends through June 15, 1982.

After that time, the Arctic pact becomes a type of continuing contract, Bjornrud said, but in practical application there is no contract if there is no company with which to negotiate.

Despite the fact that Arctic union membership is dormant and appears likely to be terminal, occasional meetings are still held. "We attempt to keep the membership up to date on what has been happening in the bankruptcy proceedings," Bjornrud said. "We have a claim against the company for about $300,000 in vacation pay alone, as well as other claims for unpaid benefits. Our members are naturally interested in what may become of those claims."

While the union has been supportive of the company in its struggle for survival, it maintains the interest of its members first and foremost. Such was the case in 1974 when a two week strike against the company was the first such labor dispute in Thief River Falls since a railroad strike before World War II. In 1976 a strike lasted for seven or eight weeks and emotions ran high, creating some bitter feelings, even within the union membership.

Even now the union is engaged in litigation with Polaris at Roseau. The Polaris snowmobile division of Textron corporation was purchased in July by a group of people who were primarily within the company. Both Textron and the new owners took the position that the plant had been closed, and the new owners refused to recognize the IWA local as bargaining agent for employees and the contract which the local had with the Textron division.

All personnel were terminated on the date of the sale of the company July 20. People who were working on some parts manufacture received their termination notice with their paychecks when they left their shift at 3:30 p.m. The IWA filed charges against Textron and the new company with the national labor relations board (NLRB) for failure to bargain with the union over the state of employment resulting from the sale, and the termination of benefits such as the company's pension plan. Accumulated vacation pay was included in the final paychecks issued, Bjornrud said.

The charges were filed in haste on the basis of information which was available at that time, Bjornrud said. Should they be dismissed by the NLRB, the union will appeal and add further charges on the basis of later information.

As of mid-October, when 29 employees were re-hired to work on clutch assemblies at the Polaris plant, the new Polaris company has recognized the IWA local as bargaining agent. It still has not recognized the contract which existed at the time of sale and negotiations are underway between the union and the company.

Local 4-348 was formed here in 1367. Prior to that time, from 1963 to 1967, Arctic employees were represented by the IWA out of the Bemidji office. At the time of its inception here, the local had an estimated 300 to 350 members.

As the local attempts to continue as much as possible with business as usual, Bjornrud must of necessity be looking ahead to the future of the local operation itself.

"If nothing changes," he says, "there will likely be some reorganization at some point in the future. The local will always be here. I want to emphasize that continuation for the members we have, some of whom have wondered about representation if area employment doesn't soon improve. The operation may have to be changed, but the IWA will continue to provide representation for its members."

Dunn Gives Comment On Waste Site

restricts the land disposal of hazardous waste. There aren't any state laws more restrictive of hazardous waste burial than Minnesota's, and few other state laws have such a strong emphasis on alternatives to land disposal.

With the clear need for safe and acceptable alternatives to improper hazardous waste dumping and handling, the board's siting process to provide a safe and properly sited facility for secure hazardous waste containment — and to thoroughly develop alternatives to disposal — cannot be delayed.

Those are our obligations — to ourselves and to future generations.

Dear Readers,

Modern families are being separated by age, by distance, by knowledge, and by philosophy. Sometimes, an elder member, especially if living alone, wants to be certain he or she gets the kind of funeral desired. Prearrangement of a funeral desired. Prearrangement of a funeral makes sense in such situations and we at Belmont Funeral Home offer to discuss prearrangement with you.

Respectfully,

MEA Summarizes Result Of Strikes

Education leaders looking ahead during a lull in negotiations activity anticipate another surge in teacher strikes across Minnesota.

To date, there have been 34 such strikes, 28 of which have been settled (total settlements reported by all sources: about 300). Winona is the only district in which a strike is scheduled, for November 25.

In the first round of filing of notices of intent to strike, there were 239 from the state's 434 school districts. In the second round, there were 125. In the third round: 31, so far.

All strikes so far have been in districts whose teachers have the Minnesota Education association (MEA) as their exclusive bargaining agents; the MEA represents teachers in 377 districts.

MEA President Donald C. Hill observes:

"The first round of filings of notices of intent to strike was orchestrated so that all teachers would have available as many options as possible through their negotiations. So it's not surprising that only 23 districts in the first round of filings were struck.

"The climate has changed, it's gotten much tougher. We anticipate there will be a much higher proportion of strikes in districts from which the third round is being filed."

There have been only 13 strikes since closing of the first strike peroid in mid-October.

The number of requests for mediation — 373 — has remained stable for many weeks. Of those 373, initial mediation sessions were scheduled by the state's bureau of mediation services (BMS) for 205 and 190 have been held. The rest have been settled.

Have the strikes had an effect on settlements?

"Yes," Hill says, "they have. Even in districts that have settled teacher contracts without strikes, there is demonstrable improvement in settlements when compared with those districts where settlements occurred before the strikes began September 25."

The 34 strikes have involved more than 6,300 teachers and some 100,000 students, ranging from Walnut Grove's 17 teachers and 331 students to the 1,848 teachers and 31,116 students in Anoka-Hennepin.

Of the 28 settlements, part of the disagreement in Prior Lake is in arbitration, so results are not available. In the remaining 27 settlements, average package settlements for the 1981-83 biennium range from Walnut Grove's $4,500 to Eveleth's $6,300.

Here are the remaining 25 average package settlements, in the order in which the strikes occurred: Paynesville, $5,620; Tracy, $5,500; Deer River, $5,814; Anoka-Hennepin, $6,207; Lake City, $5,205; Wabasha-Kellogg, $4,706; Glenwood-Lowry, $5,175; Proctor, $4,934; Hibbing, $5,300; Hill City, $5,200; New Prague, $5,400; Isle, $5,058; Fridley, $6,255; St. Cloud, $6,134; Crookston, $4,800; Lester Prairie, $5,185; Rockford, $5,600; Grand Meadow, $4,800; Cambridge-Isanti, $5,500; Thief River Falls, $5,150; Bemidji, $5,319; Jordan, $5,450; Forest Lake, $5,450; Houston, $4,760; Pine River, $4,948.

Senator Says Arms Control Efforts Good

Calling President Reagan's arms control proposals a "good fath effort," Senator Rudy Boschwitz said this plan shows the United States is serious about achieving real reductions in intermediate range nuclear arsenals in Europe.

"The President's plan helps deflect criticism from our European allies that we are not serious about arms control. Clearly, President Reagan's proposals show we are not only serious about arms control, but arms reduction as well," Boschwitz said.

The proposal calls for a cancelled deployment of American Pershing II and Ground-Launched Cruise Missiles in Europe in exchange for Soviet withdrawal of their SS-20, SS-4, and SS-5 missiles.

"While the Soviet Union will probably not accept the U.S. proposal when talks on intermediate-range weapons begin in Geneva on November 30, our offer will serve to set the discussions on a course toward reductions in the two superpower's weaponry," Boschwitz explained.

The administration's proposal to begin strategic arms reduction talks (START) "again shows that the President wants not merely arms control but arms reduction," he said.

Boschwitz said he will support and work with the administration on follow-up efforts in these stragegic weapons talks.

"This is one endeavor in which we cannot afford to fail," Boschwitz said.

Thief River Falls people don't appear to be too concerned about the fact that four of the 20 candidate sites for hazardous waste disposal in Minnesota are located on drainage courses which bring water into the city. That water becomes part of our city's water supply.

Residents in the immediate area of the proposed sites — three in Marshall county and one in Beltrami county — are very concerned about the potential. And they are doubly concerned that more people in this downstream don't share their alarm.

The state waste management board is looking for one site in the state for disposal of hazardous waste. Such waste would be the remnants of petroleum, chemical and other products which would not be consumed or transformed into non-hazardous substances by waste processing methods. It would be stored in double-lined "cells" of clay, according to the plan, where it would remain inert and immobile forever.

If the plan and its implementation are sound and 100 per cent successful, there needn't be any real concern. But humans have been known to make mistakes and even the best thought out plans have been known to fail. And it only takes one small error to cause a whole lot of people a whole lot of problems.

At a meeting in Goodridge last Tuesday night, concern was expressed that there is a communications gap between the waste management board and its professional staff, as well as between the board and the staff and the public. The opportunity is now at hand to rectify that contention.

The entire waste management board will hold its regular meeting in the Thief River Falls city auditorium on Friday of this week at 9 a.m. The meeting is open to the public and will provide an opportunity for all interested to witness how the board operates and its system works.

Furthermore, at 7 p.m. Thursday the board will hold an open meeting to hear from area residents who wish to comment on the site selection process. It might be a good idea to attend either or both sessions and just listen to what is said. Some of our good neighbors to the north and east have some very real worries, and we have cause to worry along with them.

We've said it before and we'll say it again: there are three kinds of people in every community — those who make things happen, those who watch things happen and those who wonder what happened. Don't be one of those who wonders what happened; at least be an informed watcher.

Fair Weather Friends?

When Jeno Paulucci announced his company's move to Ohio earlier this fall, it caused State Rep. Jim Evans to comment in the Becker County Record at Detroit Lakes. The article is as follows:

I've read the "Jeno Moves" stories and am reminded of the old saying, "Judge a man by his own deeds and words; the opinions of others can be misleading."

Of course, I'm in no position to judge Jeno Paulucci, but I think it might be a worthwhile project to reflect on Jeno's words and his most recent corporate action: to move his pizza-making operation to western Ohio.

Let's start with an open letter to the people of Minnesota that Mr. Paulucci printed in the Minneapolis Star several years ago. This full-page statement begins with bold letters. I quote: "Bad business climate? Put up or shut up! Lately you are hearing a lot of false gospel that the Minnesota business claimte is bad. . . that business cannot grow or prosper in Minnesota. Years ago on the Iron Range we had a saying that answered the loose-talking politicians. Loudly, we'd say, "P-A-L-O-N-E-Y!" (evidently this is a clever play on words somehow connecting Jeno with Bologna?)

Jeno continues in his harangue, "During every political season there are certain politicians and business leaders in Minnesota who — to gain their own selfish ends — would try to make Minnesotans believe the opposite of the truth. . . most especially about our business climate here in Minnesota and our Minnesota leadership."

"Unfortunately, these same self-serving individuals not only cause many Minnesotans to believe and spread these false stories, but even more importantly, they give business leaders in other states as well as other nations the false impression that it would be bad for them to consider doing business in Minnesota."

Then we come to the clincher: "Minnesota is truly one of the best states in this nation to start and-or expand a business regardless of what they say about taxes."

At several points in Jeno's formal statement, he accuses leaders in Minnesota of working to gain selfish ends. He calls them "self-serving" individuals. Well, so much for his words.

Jeno F. Paulucci, who employs 1,300 workers and makes frozen pizza and pizza rolls at two Duluth plants, is packing his industrial bags and moving east — to Ohio.

Why is he moving, especially after he painted himself as a stout-hearted Minnesota supporter and cheerleader? According to Jeno it was "proximity to major markets, efficiency of modern single-floor production systens, valuable experience in food processing among the available work force, and the whole-hearted cooperation we have received from western Ohio."

I heard one person lamenting, "Isn't it a shame, Jeno lost his market and had to move." I agree. Who could have predicted a massive move of Pizza eaters from the midwest to the east coast? Evidently, it's happened. It was just bad luck — all those frozen pizza fans packing their bags and moving on. I suppose that in this business you have to reconcile yourself to the frightening demographics: that's the way the pizza flops.

One incidental point we might mention is the deal Ohio layed on Jeno to entice him away. The offered a $3.75 million, low interest loan plus a $200,000 grant to help cover site preparation costs. On top of that, the city fathers have agreed to accept an application for a 10-year abatement on plant real estate taxes. Not bad, Jeno.

Now, a dispassionate observer might conclude that Jeno was just moving for the bucks. In a sense, it's a sound business decision, and one might be able to characterize it as (pause) self-serving.

Every rookie salesman and athlete is familiar with the old saying, "When the going gets tough, the tough get going." Well, Jeno has given a new twist to the old maxim.

An Obsolete Law?

Following comments are from the Washington Report:

Supporters of the Davis-Bacon Act argue that the Depression-era statute is still needed to protect construction workers from unfair competition for jobs.

The law requires the payment of the prevailing wage on federally assisted construction projects in a given locality. The prevailing wage translates, for the most part, into the highest union wage under the procedures the Labor Department uses to set the pay levels.

But two recent developments on union wage scales raise serious questions on who needs protection from what in the construction-employment marketplace.

Union electricians in Los Angeles are on strike after rejecting an offer by a contractor's group to raise their pay — wage and fringes — by 50 per cent over three years. to a total of $30.93 an hour.

Plumbers employed by the San Francisco city government have received a 22.8 per cent pay raise — to $30,224 a year plus fringe benefits — in line with a policy of setting the municipal scale according to the local union scale.

As unions elsewhere follow such patterns of pay increases far beyond the private-sector average, the new wage levels eventually are cranked into the Davis-Bacon requirements. The inflationary impact of using union wage scales is obvious.

Davis-Bacon was passed to protect local construction workers from competition for jobs from itinerant laborers.

Can even the most ardent supporter of Davis-Bacon now claim that the power of the federal government should be invoked to protect construction workers making more than $30,000 a year?

Congress owes it to the taxpayers of the national, whose average income is about half that figure, to repeal this obsolete law.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Husband: "Who was that you were talking to on the porch for the last hour?"

Wife: "Oh, that was just Mrs. Jones; she didn't have time to come in."

The asylum inmate had his ear pressed against the wall. "Listen," he whispered to the new attendant. "I don't hear anything," the attendant puzzled after listening intently. "I know," said the inmate suspiciously. "It's been like that all day!"

PERSONNEL CHANGES in the 4-H and home economics areas in the Marshall county extension office have occurred recently. Ray Thompson, county extension director (pictured) along with new staff members, Nancy Mathiason, county extension agent, home economics-family living programs (center), Alice Colby, associate county extension agent, 4-H (right) and Phyllis Jorgenson, secretary, are presently organizing approaches to provide information and learning experiences for youth and adults throughout the county.

Gov. Quie's Column

Proposals for Minnesota's Long-Term Economic Health

Two problems are plaguing Minnesota. One, we are in a recession that is causing financial trouble nationwide. And two, state government has overextended itself by taking on too many responsibilities. Last Tuesday, faced with a biennial shortfall of $768 million and serious cash flow problems, I took these factors into account in preparing the plan I announced for balancing our state budget.

It is a decisive plan that calls for resolving the entire projected deficit through reductions in state expenditures, aids and transfer payments. In all, cuts of 11.8 per cent will save the state $776.8 million over the biennium, resulting in permanent cuts in state government spending. It will also return control and deicision-making back to the people at the local level where it belongs.

It's a plan that takes account of severe constraints faced by our schools, universities and local governments as they confront budget cutbacks. These tremendous institutions provide essential services which must continue with a minimum of disruption as we re-evaluate the relationship between state and local government.

Solving theState Problems

The best protection we can provide against future budgetary problems is to improve the job climate and stimulate private sector jobs. I plan strong measures during the 1982 legislative session to ensure that we will be more competitive with neighboring states.

However, there are some things we must accomplish to balance the budget by 1983:

1. Cut state spending 11.8 per cent for the current biennium, saving $776.8 million. This will make up the entire shortfall.

2. Create a State Aids Stabilization Authority. This authority will enable local governments, schools, colleges and universities, if they choose, to spread the impact of up to half of their cut over five years through short-term borrowing. This financial "shock absorber" will provide protection while stopping spending-as-usual policies, and will be available to those entities which need to borrow. The stabilization authority will get its money through a sale of bonds which will be backed by the faith and credit of the local units themselves. The bonds will not be a state obiligation.

3. Reduce the number of state jobs, but do so while maintaining a concern for the people involved. Attrition — job termination through resignations and retirements — will be used to accomplish these goals.

Responsibility Must Return To Local Government

During my lifetime in public service, I have witnessed a trend toward bigger government and less local responsibility for decision-making. In Minnesota, this had resulted in three out of four tax dollars the state collects going back to localities from the state. This has created a problem. We have guaranteed three-fourths of the state's revenue to local governments without the security of being guaranteed revenue ourselves. In a recession, such as the one we are in, people's and businesses' incomes are down which means less taxes can be paid and the state's revenues decrease.

My proposal will give localities more control over their affairs. I believe that the people of an area, through the officials they have elected, are best able to assess their needs. If we give local governments, schools and colleges the flexibility to make their own decisions, they will make the right decisions. My proposal depends upon their ability to effect spending cuts, if not immediately, then over time with the assistance of the stabilization authority.

The transition to more local control through spending cuts as deep as I have proposed is necessary, but not painless. If local units decide to keep spending at levels higher than I have recommended, property taxes could rise.

In addition, since homestead credit is among programs the state pays for that must be scaled down, local property taxes will rise. But we must keep things in perspective.

On the average, Minnesota's homeowners actually are paying less in property taxes now than they did in 1976 — and they will continue to do so even after this change.

When the state pays such a large portion of a person's property taxes (58 per cent) the useful tension that should exist between local officials and the people they represent is reudced. Tension that is needed if costs are to be controlled. People should know the real cost of local services.

The decisions we must make in the coming months will be hard ones. They must meet the test of a few basic principles that have guided me in the past:

— We must look first to cutting spending rather than raising taxes when times get rough.

— We must trust men and women at the local level to do what is right for themseleves and their neighbors.

— And we must do what is right, not just for today, but especially for tomorrow. For we are the stewards of our children's future.

The challenge facing our state during this recession is a tremendous one. Our problem is caused by the economic downturn and state government assuming and paying for so many responsibilities. It will be solved by an economic recovery and a reduction in state government's role. We must trust the decisions of localities. This will take the wisdom and cooperation and assumption of responsibility of all people and all levels and branches of government.

Herman Man Reelected To GTA Board

Ed Ellison, Herman, has been reelected to his second three-year term on the Grain terminal association's (GTA) board of directors by Minnesota delegates attending GTA's 44th annual meeting in Minneapolis recently.

Ellison, a member of the Herman market company, raises barley, wheat, sunflowers and corn on 1,600 acres near Herman. He and his wife Barbara have four children.

Ellison, along with Olaf Haugo, Waubun, and George L. Mann, Windom, are the Minnesota district's representatives on GTA's 13-member board. Haugo and Mann were not up for reelection this year.

GTA is a regional grain marketing, processing and supply cooperative serving 150,000 farmers and ranchers throughout the Upper Midwest and Pacific northwest.

At its annual meeting, the cooperative announced total revenues of $2.47 billion and net earnings of $19.6 million for the fiscal year ending May 31, 1981. This past year GTA marketed more than 459 million bushels of grain for 780 local farmer-owned cooperatives located in eight states.

Adopt-A-Book Program At Library Begun

Northwest regional library's "Adopt-a-Book" program is under way and several area residents have already contributed.

Persons wishing to help develop their library's children's book collection are asked to stop by their local library or the bookmobile and look over the adopt-a-book titles. A donation can then be made to the library to cover the cost of the book. When it is received, it will be placed in the local library collection with a book plate thanking the donor.

Publicity announcing the program was somewhat vague, and residents are assured that their adopted books will go directly into the local collection.

Titles up for adoption cover a wide range of reading levels and interests and have been selected from lists of recommended books. Their prices range from $4.95 to $11 and any donations are tax deductible.

Egg Production In State Down Five Per Cent

Minnesota's layers produced 184 million eggs in October 1981, down five per cent from last year. Layer numbers during October totaled 9.8 million, up three per cent from the previous year. Egg production per 100 layers during the month was 1,873 eggs compared with 2,026 a year ago.

Minnesota's hatcheries produced 919,000 egg-type chicks during October, down 34 per cent from the hatch a year ago. Eggs in incubators on Nov. 1, 1981 totaled 1.1 million eggs, down two per cent from the 1980 level.

Minnesota broiler-type hatchings in October totaled 1.5 million chicks, up 19 per cent from the previous year. The 1.6 million eggs in incubators on Nov. 1, 1981 were up 24 per cent from the 1980 level.

Marshall Co. Extension Programs Are Underway

Educational programs through the Marshall county extension service have begun with county extension director Ray Thompson and two new staff members generating traditional and different approaches to provide information and learning experiences for youth and adults throughout the county.

Current staff members include Thompson, who gives direction to agricultural and community development programs; Alice L. Colby, lead agent for 4-H youth development; Nancy J. Mathiason, who provides direction to home economics-family living programs; and Phyllis H. Jorgenson, secretary, who also serves as receptionist and gives support to office coordination.

Staff represents a combination of resources between Marshall county, the agricultural extension service of the University of Minnesota, and the U.S. department of agriculture. Their mission is to help people meet educational needs for knowledge, information, and skill development that result in personal growth and attainment of individual and community goals.

Extension effort in Marshall county also mixes time and talents of numerous volunteers, advisory committee members, and persons who give leadership to agricultural improvement, 4-H youth clubs and projects, homemaker study club, programs, and community development.

Each staff member uses a variety of educational approaches including meetings, workshops, demonstrations, tours, radio and newspaper, newsletters and columns, in addition to office and farm visits, telephone contact, and research-based brochures.

In agriculture, Thompson notes that crop and livestock production continue to be the traditional focus of extension education programs in the county, but clientele are looking for more indepth information. Number of requests for horticulture information is growing each year, and there is increased interest in custom rates, cash rents, tillage methods, and farm computers.

University resources available to aid agricultural education in Marshall county include several area extension agents located in the vicinity that have expertise in potatoes, crop production, pest management and farm management, as well as the specialist staff on the St. Paul campus.

Thompson also has University resources he can call on for community resources development, especially related to agri-business and public policy issues.

Colby works with some 349 4-H youth, ages eight to 19, which are involved in 18 clubs. There are presently 171 adult volunteer leaders working with the Marshall county 4-H program. A member of the staff since early summer, Colby has been conducting officer training workshops to help develop programs for youth in the county.

One of the challenges in the 4-H program area is the need for total family involvement and development of ways for interaction between youth and adults. County conservation day for sixth graders has been a success. Colby is planning workshops this winter to development judging teams, and giving special emphasis to demonstration skills, basic clothing construction, and consumer education. She also has access to state 4-H specialists.

Home economics family living is more than the traditional approaches to cooking and sewing, notes Mathiason, who joined the extension staff October 16. Clientele have expressed a wide variety of concerns relating to family living, child development, housing, interior design, and consumer economics. There are presently 450 persons involved in the county's 29 homemaker study clubs.

Mathiason is planning to give emphasis to nutrition, food preservation, strengthening families, and consumer aspects, such as coping with what one has, and consumer rights. She spends 20 per cent of her time working with 4-H youth projects in home economics, and has both area and state extension staff to draw resources from for use in the county.

As noted earlier, volunteers, club officers and advisory groups also play a major role in extension educational efforts throughout the year. Current leaders include:

Marshall county extension committee: Lawrence Bjorsness, Newfolden, chairman; Leo Orpen, Middle River, vice-chairman; county auditor Chuck Cheney, Warren; Mrs. William Hoper, Stephen; Mrs. Kenneth Quern, Oslo; Duane Krohn, Viking; Allen St. Germain, Argyle; George Panek, Goodridge; and Dale Zutz, Warren.

4-H federation officers include: Karen Krohn, president, Viking Volcanoes; Mark Fagerstrom, vice president, McCrea; Jayne Erickson, secretary, Viking Volcanoes; and DeAnna Carlson, treasurer, Triangle Club.

Officers for homemakers include: East — Mrs. Gail Steinhauer, president, Rt. 2, Thief River Falls; Mrs. Virgil Erickson, vice president, Middle River; Mrs. Leslie Folden, secretary-treasurer, Newfolden; and Mrs. John Meland, historian, Newfolden; West — Mrs. Kurt Bjorgaard, president, Rt. 1, Warren; Mrs. Lawrence Kuznia, secretary, Stephen; Mrs. Eldor Omdahl, Assistant secretary, Warren; Mrs. Medard Yutrzenka, treasurer, Argyle; Mrs. Harvey Deschene, assistant treasurer, Argyle; Mrs. Hazel Hurst, historian, Warren; Mrs. Larry Laymon, Warren; and Mrs. Duane Potucek, Warren.

Upcoming extension educational programs in Marshall county include the following:

Agriculture: Grain drying and storage workshop, December 8, Newfolden; farm estate planning, January 5 and 12; crop production meetings at four locations January 8 and 21; crop improvement meeting at Argyle, February 11; potato update at Argyle January 15; corn production update at Newfolden, March 3; farm computers at Warren, March 8; edible bean management at Warren, March 10; plus meetings on marketing, sheep, swine, and horticulture.

Homemakers club educational opportunities include: January — "Time Management-How to Say Yes or No Gracefully"; February — "Gardening: Care and Vegetable Varieties"; March — Mending and-or altering clothes; April — planning for retirement; May — nutritious snacks. Open meetings are scheduled for kitchen design February 8 in Warren and child behavior-peer pressure March 23 in Warren.

4-H activity was recently highlighted with 145 persons attending the annual leaders' recognition banquet. Special emphasis during December includes development of demonstration skills that can be used with the Winter Shows and county fair events, and district record judging. 4-H public speaking contest will be conducted as part of the federation meeting in January. Coordination work is beginning for the junior leader trip to 4-H citizen Washington focus, adult trip to the national leaders' forum, and 4-H summer exchanges to Norway and Japan.

Marshall county extension office, an educational unit of the agricultural extension service, University of Minnesota, is committed to the policy that all persons shall have equal access to its programs, facilities, and employment without regard to race, creed, color, sex, national origin or handicap.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

I would like to take my hat off to the crew who operated the snowplow west of town on Highway No. 1 the day after Thanksgiving.

Their main goal in life is to wreck mailboxes, the second is to plow snow. After doing a super job on the first, they still had time and energy enough left to clear the road. This takes talent and they are hard to find.

Thank you.

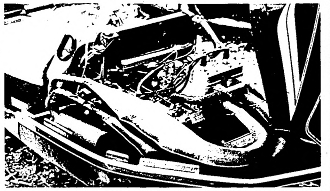
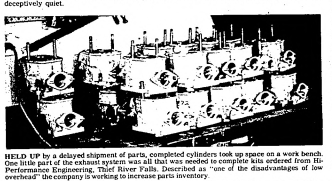
SECURITY at Hi-Performance Engineering is the job of Taffy, Larry Coltom's dog, who remains pretty calm until someone gets close to the test sled. After chasing the sled across the test track she had worked up a pretty good froth around her mouth, but didn't quit barking until several minutes after we had gone inside.



A PEEK under the hood of Hi-Performance Engineering's test sled reveals an engine which Larry Coltom claims will be "embarrassing for manufacturers of 1982 sleds when these '80 and '81 Arctics are faster." The fat tuned exhaust pipes utilized the stock muffler, causing the sled to be deceptively quiet.



HELD UP by a delayed shipment of parts, completed cylinders took up space on a work bench. One little part of the exhaust system was all that was needed to complete kits ordered from Hi-Performance Engineering, Thief River Falls. Described as "one of the disadvantages of low overhead" the company is working to increase parts inventory.

Labor Market Review Shows Worker Drop

Developments in the labor market during the month of September were gradually on the downward side, as both the total labor force and total employment experienced declines, according to the Minnesota department of economic security's "Northwestern Minnesota Labor Market Review."

Throughout the nation, both the total labor force and employment declined noticeably during September. The number of persons who lost their jobs rose by approximately 410,000 during this month, and this increase was about equally divided between layoffs and permanent separations. While the total number unemployed less than 15 weeks increased in September, 1981.

Employment in manufacturing did not change significantly between August and September, while construction employment declined another 20,000 jobs during this time. In the state and local government sector, employment declined by 145,000, primarily because fewer teachers and other school personnel were being hired or rehired at the beginning of the school year. Some gains took place in the mining industry, and in services, during September of 1981.

In Minnesota, total employment declined more sharply than the labor force in September of 1981, causing both the number of unemployed and the percentage of unemployment to rise somewhat. Certain manufacturing industries experienced small losses during this time, while employment gains took place in transportation, rentail trade and services in September. Construction employment, chiefly in the building trades, dropped somewhat in September of 1981. Gradual increases in unemployment are likely to be noticed throughout the state in the upcoming months, as seasonal outdoor work winds down.

Labor market conditions in the northwestern counties of the state remained essentially the same between August and September of 1981 as the decrease in employment was almost equally matched by a decline in the labor force. This was partly due to students ending their summer jobs and leaving the labor force to return to school, and this is a very normal occurrence in the month of September. Most counties had unemployment rates in September of 1981 that were similar to or slightly below the percentages recorded in September of 1980.

Unemployment in Pennington county in Septmenber of 1981 at eight per cent was third high in the region behind 12.1 per cent in Roseau county and 9.6 per cent in Red Lake county, but only .1 per cent ahead of Marshall county at 7.9. Norman county had the lowest unemployment in the region at 3.4 per cent, followed by Kittson at 5.0 and Polk at 5.3.

Work force in Pennington county declined to 7,631 from 8,245 a year ago, while number of people employed declined from 7,651 to 7,017 and unemployment increased from 594 to 614.

Keeping A Log Can Save Auto Repair Expense

When's the last time you had your brakes inspected? Changed the air cleaner? Replaced the automatic transmission fluid? Difficult to recall, isn't it?

Keeping a log of maintenance the repair items in the glove box will make it quick and convenient to check, and thereby will help an owner keep a car in better condition, says Automotive Information Council (AIC).

Log should contain date, mileage, service performed, name of repair facility and price.

Receipts also should be kept while the item is under warranty.

Checking periodically can help you plan maintenance needs in the coming months by comparing entries to recommended schedule of maintenance. This practice can lead to more dependable driving by reducing unexpected and inconvenient repairs.

Log also can aid in money planning. Many times receipts will have a notation of other items that soon will need service. That can be noted in the log for reference and, combined with review of scheduled maintenance, will permit adjusting your budget.

Record of maintenance and repairs also will be useful at resale time. It can be shown to the prospective purchaser as proof the vehicle has been cared for, and can result in a higher price.

Record-keeping also will keep you more aware of the need for periodic maintenance.

4 Food Groups Necessary For Nutrients

In nutrition circles, they're the Four Pillars of Truth: milk, meat, fruits and vegetables, grains.

Buy why four? And why these four? There are, after all, many other ways to classify foods. For instance, we could think of foods in terms of two major groups instead: plant and animal foods.

Or we could classify foods by color. Or by texture. Or shape.

So why those four? asks Dr. Laurence Hursh, consultant to the national dairy council.

The divisions, actually, are far from arbitrary. In fact, they're based on years of research.

Your body requires as many as 50 different nutrients for a wide range of purposes. These nutrients fall into six classes: protein, carbohydrate, fat, vitamins, minerals and water.

Each of the four food groups is constructed upon key, or "leader," nutrients from several of these classes. For instance, the meat group has as its foundation protein, niacin and thiamin (both vitamins) and iron (a mineral).

Combined, the four food groups thus compliment each other, providing you with all the leader nutrients — as well as the trace nutrients your body requires in minute amounts only — you need for good health.

Eating well-balanced meals from the four food groups also gives you these nutrients in their right portions. This is something the folks who skip meals in favor of nutrient supplement pills sometimes fail to realize. As a result, they often shortchange themselves of a particular nutrient and end up malnourished. Or, in some cases, they overdose — usually on a vitamin or mineral — and end up extremely ill.

An example of the latter is "hypervitaminosis A," a condition that results from taking too much — you guessed it — vitamin A. It can cause severe headaches, loss of body hair and joint pain.

In the long run, the four food groups approach to nutrition is more than just a safe, sound and sensible one.

It's also a natural one.

Stangeland Urges Limited Casein Imports

"Unless future imports of casein are severely restricted, thousands of American dairymen will be forced to the brink of bankruptcy," Congressman Arlan Stangeland told the International Trade Commission (ITC) recently.

"Casein imports have hiked up the cost of the Federal dairy price support program and displaced 333 million pounds of American dairy products last year," Stangeland said at a special ITC hearing requested by President Reagan.

Casein, an all-protein milk derivative produced in New Zealand and other countries, is used as a substitute for American dairy products. Although some casein is used in medicines and other products which cannot utilize dairy goods, most casein-importers use it to undercut the American dairy industry.

"According to the department of agriculture, 53 per cent of the casein used in America goes directly into products for which American milk solids could be used," Stangeland said.

"These imports hurt American dairymen in two ways," he said. "First, casein imports are displacing hundreds of millions of pounds of dairy products in the American market every year. Since most foreign casein-producers are heavily subsidized by their govenoment, foreign nations are dumping their casein on our market at the expense of our farmers. Secondly, those imports cost the Federal government over $300 million in 1980 by expanding the Commodity credit corportation's purchases of domestic dairy products.

"Everyone who is knowledgeable about our dairy industry is aware of the unprecedented cuts in the traditional levels of Federal support for dairy products which are being considered by Congress," Stangeland said. "The sole reason the dairy price support program has been such an easy target for urban representatives is the rapid increase in the cost of the program. That rapid increase has been fueled by these intolerable casein imports."

"Because of these proposed cuts in dairy supports, many dairymen are facing bankruptcy," he said. "If our small and medium-sized dairy producers are forced out of business, consumers could be forced to pay higher prices for milk and dairy products."

"Casein and other imported milk-proteins have undercut American dairymen, have cost the Federal government $300 million, and could eventually hurt our consumers," Stangeland said. "The ITC should recommend that President Reagan take the strongest measures possible to restrict future levels of casein and milk-protein imports."

Under current law, the president can reduce future imports to 50 per cent of a commodity's long-term importation levels.

"Such a restriction would help our situation," Stangeland said. "Since some casein would still be imported, this policy would not punish American consumers of certain medicines and other special products that cannot use domestic milk solids. But the restrictions would help our dairy farmers, — would significantly reduce Federal expenditures, and would guarantee consumers a steady supply of dairy products at a stable price."

"By skipping the April and October price adjustments this year, and by considering the drastic cuts in the Federal dairy program, Washington is sending a clear signal to our dairymen that they should reduce milk production," Stangeland said. "If we are forcing them to cut back on production, it only seems fair that the ITC adjust its policies to restrict the importation of competitive products, such as casein. The ITC will continue it's hearings before making recommendations on casein imports to Presidnet Reagan."

Answers from the Bible by Pastor Don Peres

Q. Pastor Don, I am terribly ashamed to write this, for I am a Christian and I have been unfaithful to my husband. I now realize the awful sin that I have committed. I have asked God to forgive me, and I feel that He has forgiven me. Should I tell my husband about this? He is unsaved and a very nervous person. What should I do?

A. I would have to agree with you 100% that what you have done is an awful sin. But I want to assure you that God will forgive you if you truly have repented and confess your sin to God and have a desire not to do it again (I John 1:9).

You will need to be strengthened with the Scriptures many times in the future. The Devil is no gentleman, and he will remind you a thousand times what a sinner you are and what a terrible thing that you have done and will cast doubt on God's ability to forgive. Get a good grip on scriptures passages as Romans 4:7, Colossians 2:13-14, I John 1:9, I John 2:1-2.

In answering your question about telling your husband of your sin, we need to find out what the Scriptures have to say.

Truthfulness is to be an important characteristic of Christians, and we as Christians are told to live honestly before believers and unbelievers.

Ephesians 4:25 L.B. says "Stop lying to each other; tell the truth, for we are parts of each other and when we lie to each other we are hurting ourselves."

Colossians 3:9 L.B. says "Don't tell lies to each other, it was your old life with all its wickedness that did that sort of thing; now it is dead and gone."

Remember you cannot build a good home on deception; you will not be able to teach your children to be truthful if you are not truthful. Your husband may find out from someone else and then it will be worse. Homes are built on trust, and which is more likely to rebuild his trust in you — your telling him or his finding out from someone else? King David tried to hide his sin, and now the whole world knows about it.

Straightening things out is never an easy task. We forget that sin is costly, and part of the cost for you may be the way your husband could react.

The question, however, is not "is it easy?" but "is it right?"

If you have any questions that you would like to have answered from the Bible, please write Pastor Don Peres, Box 129, Thief River Falls, MN 56701.

Nordics Are Basketball Favorites

John Oren of the Baudette Region, statistical keeper in the North Border Conference and a devoted follower of the sport of basketball in northwestern Minnesota, tabbed Marshall County Central as the preseason favorite in the 1981-82 North Border basketball race.

Oren, who has published a fine preseason conference program filled with records, rosters and information on all seven North Border Conference teams, expects a close pennant race this winter, but gave the edge to the Nordics, followed by defending champion Middle River, Warroad, Badger, Roseau, Lake of the Woods and Grygla-Gatzke.

He groups Marshall County Central and Middle River together in a first-place battle, then says any number of teams could be in the run for third place.

Marshall Country Central and Middle River must, at this stage of the game, be rated the overwhelming favorites to vie for the championship during the coming season," writes Oren. "But any number of clubs could pull off some surprises this year. Warroad, Badger and Roseau will all be stronger this season than they were last year."

Like most of the North Border teams, Marshall County Central went through the 1980-81 season with a line-up staffed mostly by underclassmen. The Nordics' list of returning veterans is headed by 6-2 Jeff Dahl, 5-11 Rick VanCamp and 6-1 Dave Kragness. Dahl, who averaged 14.6 points and 10.6 rebounds per game last year, and VanCamp, who averaged 11.7 points during an injury-plagued junior campaign, were both all-conference picks, while Kragness, who averaged 10.1 points per game, was on the honorable mention all-conference list.

"Physically, we have the talent to field the best team I've coached in my 15 years at MCC," Nordics coach Ron Ueland told Oren.

Meanwhile, Graduation striped four starters from the North Border and District 32 champion Middle River squad, but the Skippers still return enough talent to present a serious title threat again this year.

Jon Nuemann, a 6-4 senior center, is the lone starter back for the Skippers, but he's expected to be one of the top performers in the North Border Conference this winter. An all-conference selection as both a sophomore and junior, Nuemann averaged 16.7 points and 10.3 rebounds per game in 1980-81. Joining him will be 6-0 Mike Peterson, 6-0 Steve Bengston, 6-1 Ryan Johnson and 5-8 Doug Kilen, all front-line reserves a year ago who will give the Skippers a very physical line-up.

"We'll be strong at the inside positions," Middle River coach Eldon Sparby told Oren. "In fact, we'll probably be stronger there than we were last season. But we won't be as quick, and our outside shooting won't be what it was."

Whoever emerges as the 1981-82 North Border Conference champion can be expected to be a District 32 favorite as well since the North Border has supplied the District 32 champion four times in the past five years. Marshall County Central won both titles in 1977, Lake of the Woods won District 32 titles in 1979 and 1980 and Middle River claimed the trophy in 1981.

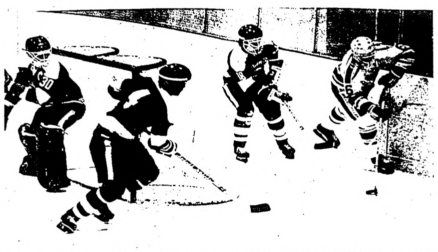
The Times will be keeping tabs on the North Border Conference basketball race again this year, with attention focused on area teams Marshall County Central, Middle River and Grygla-Gatzke. Our coverage also includes Goodridge, Plummer and Oklee. Coaches of the boys and girls winter sports at those six schools will be asked to continue their cooperation in reporting their results, and we'll be more than happy to publish their scores. If your team seems to be missing in the Monday or Wednesday stories, remind the coaches to report their games.

Miscellaneous

+Several former Lincoln high school hockey players were on hand Saturday in coaching roles during the annual preseason Section 8 high school hockey jamboree in the Thief River Falls sports arena. Former Prowler Jeff Lindquist is head coach at Red Lake Falls, while the others serve as assistant coaches: Chris Biegner, Alexandria; Pete Sullivan, Bemidji; and Bill Poole, Thief River Falls.

+Another former Lincoln high school athlete, Mark Storhaug, was named Section 3 girls high school swimming coach of the year at Bemidji. Storhaug, a former standout swimmer at Lincoln and Bemidji State University, completed his second year as coach of the Lumberjills.

+Detroit Lakes Tribune story estimates that it costs an average of $293 to outfit a high school football player; $339.50 to outfit a hockey player (but $613 to fit a goalie with all the required equipment); and about $153 to outfit a basketball player with a uniform, warm-ups, shoes, etc.



CARRYING THE PUCK behind the East Grand Forks net, Thief River Falls sophomore Tim Bottem was chased by Mike Williams of the Green Wave while Jeff Anderson closed in and goalie Joel Duray kept an eye on things during Saturday's annual preseason Section 8 high school hockey jamboree in the Thief River Falls sports arena. East Grand Forks out-scored Thief River Falls 3-1 in a pair of 11-minute periods — the final session of the 18-team-day-long jamboree.

Pie Social Tuesday . . .

Lincoln Girls Open Season Vs. Fisher

Lincoln high school girls basketball team will officially open the 1981-82 Thief River Falls winter sports season Tuesday when the Prowlers host Fisher at 7:30 p.m. in the Lincoln gym. Junior varsity game starts at 5:45.

In conjunction with the start of the winter sports season, the Thief River Falls Sports Boosters club will present its fourth annual pie and ice cream social Tuesday at 6 p.m. in the Lincoln cafeteria.

For 50 cents, an individual will receive a piece of pie, ice cream and beverage, and will be admitted free-of-charge to the basketball game that night.

Open to the general public, the pie and ice cream social centers around winter sports activities: boys and girls basketball, boys swimming and hockey. Parents of athletes or cheerleaders on those teams are asked to donate a pie for the event, bringing them to the Lincoln cafeteria before 6 that night.

Prowlers Compete In Crookston Jamboree

Thief River Falls was the only Region 8AA school to decision a Region 8A opponent Saturday in a preseason high school basketball jamboree played in the new University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC) gymnasium.

Playing a pair of eight-minute quarters, the smaller school Region 8A members came up with two wins and a tie against their larger school Region 8AA counterparts.

Results saw Warren defeat Bemidji 22-12, Thief River Falls beat Fisher 19-7, Argyle out-scored East Grand Forks 33-29 while Crookston and Stephen played to a 21-21 tie.

"The kids played well on the defensive end," pointed out Thief River Falls coach Tom Hunt, who said the short session didn't provide that much information. "It was a chance for the kids to put on the uniforms and get into a game situation," he mentioned.

Thief River Falls begins its 1981-82 regular season schedule Friday when the Prowlers travel to Roseau for an 8 p.m. game. They'll be in Grafton Tuesday, December 8, before hosting Moorhead Thursday, December 17, in their home opener.

TRF Backcourt Club To Meet

Thief River Falls basketball Backcourt club will meet Saturday at 10 a.m. at the Rex Cafe.

Roseau, Bemidji, East Grand Forks . . .

Top Picks Headline Results In Section 8 Hockey Jamboree

Preseason polls predicted Roseau, Bemidji and East Grand Forks would be the top three teams in Section 8 high school hockey this winter, and the Rams, Lumberjacks and Green Wave did indeed look like the best of the bunch Saturday during the annual preseason Section 8 jamboree played in the Thief River Falls sports arena.

Sixteen of the 17 Section 8 teams were on hand for the day-long affair that matched teams in a pair of 11-minute periods. Only Little Falls, the newest Section 8 member, declined an invitation to participate in the event.

Results of the matches saw Hallock open with a 4-2 win over Detroit Lakes, Fergus Falls beat Lake of the Woods 3-1, Thief River Falls junior varsity (scheduled to play Little Falls) handled the Hallock junior varsity 9-1, Crosby-Ironton blanked Red Lake Falls 2-0, Alexandria and Indus played to a 2-2 tie, Crookston topped Moorhead 4-2, Roseau shut out Brainerd 2-0, Bemidji downed Warroad 4-2 and East Grand Forks handled Thief River Falls 3-1.

Attendance, slow during the afternoon portion of the jamboree, picked up as the day wore on, and there was a good-size crowd that evening.

Among those in attendance were scouts or representatives from several college and professional hockey teams, including NHL clubs Montreal, Minnesota, St. Louis and the New York Rangers, and colleges like Bemidji State, Yale, Brown, University of Minnesota and the University of Wisconsin.

Detroit Lakes — Hallock

Hallock beat Detroit Lakes 4-2 to start the jamboree. Senior wing Scott Haugstad scored twice for the Bears, while Todd Klein and Mark Nordling got one goal apiece. Detroit Lakes goals against standout Hallock goalie Larry Fertig were scored by Ken Steinmetz on a power play in the first period and by Bob Caulfield on a 2-on-0 breakaway in the second period.

Fergus Falls — Lake of the Woods

Fergus Falls snapped a 1-1 tie when Vic Evavold scored on a breakaway with 2:43 remaining, then added an open net goal by Tom Mann in the final seconds for a 3-1 win over Lake of the Woods. The Otters' Duke Halvorson scored just eight seconds into the match, with the Bears' Dave Cauble tying it on a shorthanded goal midway through the second period.

Red Lake Falls — Crosby-Ironton

In a mild surprise, Section 8 newcomer Crosby-Ironton shut out Red Lake Falls 2-0 behind the goaltending of sophomore Tim Palmer. The Rangers scored twice within a two-minute span late in the second period as Hart Engen blasted a long slap shot and Dave Munt converted a 4-on-3 power play.

Alexandria — Indus

It was a 2-2 stalemate between Alexandria and Indus. The Cardinals got goals from Ross Campbell in the first minute of play and from Rick Herrly, who tied it when left alone in front of the net with 5:05 remaining. Roger Hasbargen scored from the slot in the first period for the Trojans, who went ahead 2-1 when sophomore Brent Benike scored in the first minute of the second period.

Crookston — Moorhead

Moorhead's Jim Steen split the defense and scored early in the first period, but Crookston controlled play the rest of the way for a 4-2 decision. Rick Dahle, Paul Miller and Richard Clauson made it 3-1 for the Pirates in the first period. Tim Trautman stuffed in a backhand to pull the Spuds within 3-2, but freshman Monte French scored on a breakaway to wrap it up for the Pirates.

Roseau — Brainerd

Jay Otto scored twice for Roseau and missed a hat trick opportunity a couple of times thereafter in the Rams' 2-0 triumph over Brainerd. It was a match-up of the defending regular season champion Warriors against the defending Section 8 tournament champion Rams, but it was all Roseau as the Rams buzzed around the Brainerd net, especially in the second period. Both goals by Otto, a senior wing, came in the first period.

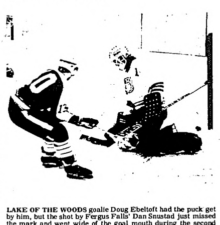
Warroad — Bemidji

Juniors Don Smith and Ron Smith scored two goals apiece as Bemidji doubled Warroad 4-2. Don Smith scored both of his goals in the first period, getting a breakaway at the beginning and a rebound near the midway mark. Ron Smith had pair of goals as it became 4-0 just 29 seconds into the second period. Art Krahn finished a flurry of goal-scoring activity in the first minute of the second period, then Merlin Ravndalen finished it in the final minute of play.

EGF — TRF

A first period goal by Kary Strandell was supplemented by Tim Mishler and Jeff Bowen goals in the second period as East Grand Forks built a 3-0 lead en route to a 3-1 decision over host Thief River Falls in the final jamboree session of the night. Rob Blankenfeld tipped in a Jeff Storhaug slap shot from the point with 8:16 remaining for the Thief River Falls goal. Senior Paul Wennberg and sophomore Doug Odegaard shared the goaltending duties for the Prowlers, who lost the services of senior defenseman Steve Olson in the first minute of play when he crashed heavily into the boards, suffering a shoulder injury. His status for Saturday's scheduled 1981-82 regular season opener against Crookston in the sports arena is not certain.

Thief River Falls coach Wendell Grand wasn't particularly satisfied with the Prowlers' jamboree performance. "We look at it (jamboree) as a practice, and it wasn't what we would call an excellent practice for us," he said.



LAKE OF THE WOODS goalie Doug Ebeltoft had the puck get by him, but the shot by Fergus Falls' Dan Snustad just missed the mark and went wide of the goal mouth during the second portion of the annual Section 8 high school hockey jamboree played in the Thief River Falls sports arena Saturday. The Otters topped the Bears 3-1.

Wildlife Group Photo Contest Winners Picked

Fourteen amateur photographers have won $2,000 in prizes for their winning color photographs of "Nature in the World" in the National Wildlife Federation's eleventh annual photography contest. Their award-winning photographs, which were chosen from more than 15,000 entries, appear in the December-January issue of the National Wildlife Federation's bimonthly magazine, National Wildlife.

National Wildlife readers were invited last year to submit photographs from where-ever their travels have taken them. Winning photos include scenes from such diverse places as the Caribbean, Africa, Alaska and the Galapagos Islands.

Chosen for the back cover of National Wildlife was Bill McRae's shot of the Silhouette of a bighorn sheep at sunset. McRae, a 47-year-old iron worker who lives in Fairfield, Mont., caught the bighorn as it paused atop a peak near Mt. St. Helens in Washington state. "The eruption created some beautiful sunrises and sunsets," McRae explained, "and because I knew where a group of the sheep congregated, I was able to plan out this shot." It was taken at 1-1,000 of a second with a 400mm lens set at f8.

Such planning was the key to success for many of the National Wildlife photo winners.

Fritz Polking, of Greven, West Germany, took his winning shot in a more exotic locale — Ecuador's Galapagos Islands National Park. The 45-year-old shop owner photographed a Galapagos hawk just as it was about to settle onto the shell of a giant tortoise. The unusual picture was taken with a 200mm lens set at f8 at 1-500 of a second.

Vancouver Aquarium in Canada was the scene of Roy Manstan's winning photograph. The U.S. Navy mechanical engineer from Lyme, Conn., captured the steady gaze of a young harbor seal, its head just above the water in its outdoor pool. Manstan took the shot at 1-250 of a second with a 200mm lens set at f8.

Other prize-winning photographers, who will share in the prize money, are:

Alaska: Don Cornelius, of Ketchikan, photographed a flock of mallards basking in the misty warm water discharged of a power plant near Anchorage.

Helen Rhode, of Cooper Landing, for her photograph of a bull moose which settled down for a rest in McKinley National Park just twenty feet from Mrs. Rhode's late husband, Cecil.

Arizona: Alex Kerstitch, of Tuscon, who took an underwater photograph of two sea slugs mating in Mexico's Sea of Cortex — an area where few sea creatures have been photographed in the past.

Colorado: Horst K. Droeger, of Boulder, whose winning shot was of his young son and a friend examining a turtle they caught in a creek near their home.

Florida: Dick Harrison, of Sarasota, whose winning photograph is an underwater shot of a marine biologist face-to-face with a Nassau grouper in the waters off San Salvador Island in the Bahamas.

Pennsylvania: Ronald Engle, of Dillsburg, took his photograph of three captive white-footed mice.

Texas: Wyman P. Meinzer, Jr., of Lubbock, for his close-up of a black-tailed jackrabbit poised in a meadow in northern Texas.

Utah: Kent R. Keller, of Ogden, whose winning photograph is of an ewe and a lamb digging for forage on a snowy ridge in Yellowstone National Park; and Rich Kramer, of Salt Lake City, who set up a blind near the bird feeder in his back yard to get a close-up of a black-capped chickadee atop a fence post.

Entries for the 1982 National Wildlife Federation photo contest are now being accepted until the deadline of June 30, 1982. A total of $2,000 in cash prizes will be awarded, and all winning photographs will be included in the December-January, 1983 issue of National Wildlife.

Theme of the twelfth annual photo constest is "Nature Around the World." Photographs may be taken not only in the U.S., but anywhere in the world. All entries must be in color and my be of wildlife, plants, scenery or people participating in outdoor activities.

Entries are limited to five per person. Slides are prefered, but prints up to 8x10 are acceptable. Each entry must bear the name, address, and telephone number of the photographer, and should be sent with a brief description of where, when and how the shot was taken, the make and model of the camer and lens used and the exposure setting. Send entries to Photo Contest, National Wildlife, 225 E. Michigan Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin 53202.

MN. Waste Management Board Will Meet In TRF

"We hope there will be a good turnout of local people," emphasized Tom Johnson, assistant to the chairman of the Minnesota waste management board, discussing the meeting of the board to be held at the Thief River Falls city auditorium Thursday and Friday.

Thursday evening's session at 7 p.m. will be inteded for public testimony concerning proposed establishment of a hazardous waste disposal site in the state. Five of 20 candidate sites are located in this general area, including three in eastern Marshall county, one in Kittson county and one in western Beltrami county.

During the day Thursday the board will make a tour of the candidate sites to view the type of geography in the area and discuss suitablity with local people. Drilling will be in progress on at least one of the sites and may be in completion stages on another. The drilling is being done to determine soil types existing in the proposed areas to a depth of at least 100 feet in several areas and to bedrock in one spot on each site.

Friday's meeting of the board will be an offical meeting beginning at 9 a.m. in the city auditorium meeting room. Public attendance is invited but public participation in discussion Friday will be limited to an afternoon period from 1:15 to 2:30 p.m. The meeting will adjourn at 2:35 to permit board members to catch the Republic Airlines flight back to the Twin Cities.

The Thief River Falls meeting will be the third held by the waste management board in various regions of the state and the 33rd regular meeting since it was established. Meetings have been held in Aitkin and Clay counties previously and the next in the series of seven is scheduled for the Sibley and Renville county area December 17.

Agenda for the business meeting of the board Friday shows a call to order at 9 a.m. with review and adoption of the agenda. Chairman Robert Dunn's report will follow approval of minutes of the previous meeting, after which staff reports will be given.

Allan Shilepsky, hazardous waste coordinator, will discuss the hazardous waste management plan at 9:30 a.m. and present a soil boring report at 10:30 a.m., according to the agenda schedule. Lee Paddock, special assistant attorney general, will discuss supplementary review at 10 a.m.

Tom Johnson, assistant to the chairman, is scheduled to discuss moratoria on site development at 11 a.m. and provide a public affairs update at 11:15 a.m. The board will recess at noon for lunch prior to the public testimony portion of the meeting at 1:15 p.m.

Thursday evening's meeting is scheduled for the main auditorium upstairs and the Friday business meeting for the basement meeting room of the city auditorium.

Members of the waste management board, appointed by the governor, include Laurence Hunter, Hastings, District 1; Keith Kuiters, Clarks Grove, District 2; William Kirchner, Richfield, District 3; Milton Knool Jr., White Bear Lake, District 4; Louise Kuderling, Minneapolis, District 5; Thomas Renner, Elk River, District 6; Allan Eide, Hitterdal, District 7; and David Hartley, Hermantown, District 8. Dunn serves in the full-time position as chairman.

Johnson told the Times in a telephone interview Tuesday that the board and staff are hopeful that public attendance will be good at all phases of the two-day meeting here. He said that testimony from local people is encouraged to help provide the board and staff with additional information to assist in the decision making process. The board is charged by the state legislature with the selection of one hazardous waste disposal site in the state by Jan. 1, 1984. The 20 candidate sites are to be reduced to six sites by May of 1982.

School Make-Up Schedule Slated

Extension of the student school year two days beyond the date of high school graduation and shuffling of the AVTI schedule to accommodate various programs took place when the Thief River Falls board of education met in meet and confer session with faculty representatives Monday evening in the school district service center.

School calendar adjustments were made necessary by the agreement to make-up eight of the 22 days lost from the school year during the Thief River Falls Education association strike against the district earlier this year.

In the kindergarten through grade 12 program, make-up schedule will be as follows:

December 23 will be a make-up day for students and teachers. January 16 (a Saturday) will be a district-wide teacher in-service day. January 18 and 19 will be student make-up days instead of teacher in-service days. February 15 (Presidents' Day) will be a make-up day instead of a holiday.

April 8 and 12, originally left open for make-up of snow days when school might be closed, are now scheduled for strike make-up days. May 27 and 28 — the two days after high school graduation May 26 which had been scheduled as teacher in-service days — will be student make-up days extending the school year by two days.

A teacher in-service day will be scheduled later for either Saturday, May 29, or Tuesday, June 1, at the discretion of the administration. Teacher in-service days lost to classes January 18 and 19 will be made up on a flexible schedule developed for each building. If necessary, make-up of snow days will take place on Saturdays or the first week in June at the discretion of the administration.

At the area vocational-technical institute where programs and situations vary greatly, three make-up days will be held on December 21, 22 and 23. A teacher in-service day originally scheduled for January 25 will be used as a student make-up day.

April 8 and 12 (left open for snow day make-up) will be used for make-up class time. Equivalent of two days will be made-up by extending the normal school day by 66 minutes during the weeks of February 6 and March 1. The January 25 in-service day will be made-up by faculty working four hours on the evenings of November 24 and December 1.

Second year carpentry students will be an exception, making up the full eight days by extending the school day by two hours for 24 days. Licensed practical nursing program will make up its eight days after July 1.

In its regular meeting which began at 8 p.m., the board approved an increase in the annual tuition for the adult small business management program from $250 to $375. All bids for three 1982 bus bodies and three 1982 International model bus chassis were rejected and authorization was given to re-advertise for these tiems.

Jerry Prickett, supervisor of buildings and grounds, presented a proposal to enlarge the present board room. The board requested a list of advantages and disadvantages of the remodeling along with estimated costs of the work.

Resignation of Donald Ryan as custodian at Franklin middle school was accepted. Harry Sjulson reported on legislative meetings he had attended and discussion was held on salaries for the business manager and supervisor of buildings and grounds.

Next meeting of the board was scheduled for December 21 at 8 p.m.

LRR Watershed Board Funds Shirrick Dam

Lower Red River watershed management board recently reviewed data for a water modeling study targeted at the Red river and its Minnesota tributaries, gave Step II funding approval to Shirrick dam and passed a resolution asking the legislature to include three northwestern Minnesota counties in a two mill construction levy.

Modeling study, undertaken last March, is part of the board's effort to obtain better flood-flow information throughtout the Red River basin. When completed, it will allow individual watershed districts and the Lower Red

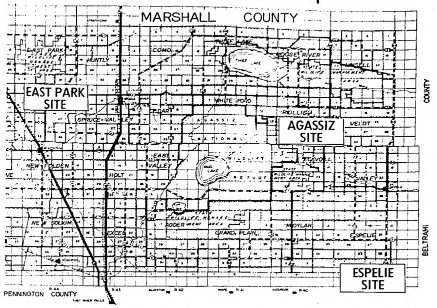
Candidate Hazardous Waste Disposal Sites



MORE OPPOSITION to establishment of a hazardous waste disposal site in this area of the state is provided by the U.S. fish and wildlife service and Agassiz national wildlife refuge. Joe Kotok, refuge manager here for the past 13 years, is shown with an aerial photo map of the refuge area. The Minnesota waste management board has selected a four-square-mile site in Rollis and Whiteford townships of Marshall county as one of 20 candidate sites for hazardous waste disposal. More than three-fourths of that area lies within the boundaries of Agassiz refuge. When the management board wanted to drill test holes on the site, Kotok insisted that it follow the established procedure, which includes completion of an environmental assessment, regional fish and wildlife service review and regional director's decision whether or not to issue a drilling permit. The board opted to drill on private land outside the refuge boundaries rather than follow through with the established procedure.

Agassiz Refuge Objects To Waste Disposal Site

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

If the Minnesota waste management board wanted to drill test holes for siting of a hazardous waste disposal site on Agassiz national wildlife refuge, it would have to follow established procedures, according to Joe Kotok, manager of the refuge for the U.S. fish and wildlife service.

The waste management board did in fact want to drill test holes on the refuge — but its staff was turned off by the procedure, which included the completion of an environmental assessment statement and approval by the regional director in Minneapolis.

Kotok makes no secret of the fact that he and the fish and wildlife service, are opposed to establishment of a hazardous waste disposal site on the refuge. For that matter, Kotok is opposed to location of the disposal site anywhere in the area. He doesn't see how he could find either the drilling or the site location compatible with the stated purposes of the wildlife area.

Stymied by the federal procedure, the waste management staff is taking the next available route — attempting to get information through permission from private land holders outside the proposed waste disposal site area to drill on their land adjacent to the refuge property. That drilling could be done late this week or early next week.

"Let's face it," stated Tom Johnson, assistant to board chairman Robert Dunn in a Times phone interview. "We have thousands of dollars tied up in the equipment that's in the area now doing the drilling. It doesn't make sense to move it many miles out of the area and then bring it back later. We believe that at the present level of analysis the perimeter drilling will provide us with just as good basic information as drilling on the site itself."

The equipment Johnson mentioned is in this area to drill test holes on a Kittson county site, the three sites under consideration in Marshall county, and a site in western Beltrami county. Some of the work has already been done.

According to Dale Setterholm, who is directing the drilling operation for the board, five holes were drilled in the Beltrami county site, four to a depth of 100 feet and a fifth to a depth of 357 feet. Near Caribou in Kittson county five holes were drilled to 100 feet and the sixth is in the process of being drilled to bedrock.

On the Espelie township site the first hole is currently being drilled to a 100-foot depth. Four more holes will be drilled to 100 feet there, plus one to bedrock. Agassiz and East Park sites remain, Setterholm said, with drilling on the Agassiz site likely to start about Friday and the East Park site in mid-December.

Since the necessity for an environmental assessment precludes immediate drilling on Agassiz refuge, plans are to drill two 100-foot holes on the William McCallum property within the four square section candidate site, and one 100-foot hole each on property owned by Keith Hagen and Klamar Brothers adjacent to the refuge. Setterholm said that another hole to bedrock will be drilled next to one of the four holes mentioned.

Regarding the process which resulted in the board's decision not to pursue drilling on the Agassiz site, Kotok said that he "just could not make a judgmental decision and say, 'yes, you can do that'. They would have to have a permit on hand."

Kotok said it woud take some time to write the environmental assessment part of the application — a task which would fall to him. The assessment would have to be submitted to the regional director in Minneapolis, who in turn would have to review it

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mayasich of Eveleth. Parents of the groom are Al Bacon and Iris Bacon, both of Thief River Falls.

Rev. David Tushar officiated at the double ring ceremony. Marge Erickson, a friend of the bride, was the organist, playing "Canon in D" for the processional. Soloist was Renee Shur, a friend of the bride. She sang "God, A Woman and Man," "Ave Maria," and "Gift of Love," with the bride's twin sister, Debra Gunderson, providing the violin accompaniment.

Baskets of palm leaf formed the chancel setting and accented the banner made by the bride's mother.

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a sleeveless gown of white organza featuring a fitted bodice appliqued with lace. Sheer organdy formed the ruffle that outlined the neckline; and embroidered lace trim edged her skirt and chapel-length train. Her headpiece was a white picture hat with organdy overlay. She carried a bouquet of white stephanotis, white carnations and babies' breath.

Matron of honor was the bride's twin sister, Debra Gunderson of Eveleth. Other attendants were Jennifer Mayasich and Christin Mayasich of Eveleth, sister-in-law and sister of the bride. Blazek-Peterson Vows Said In Middle River

Marriage vows were exchanged recently at St. Joseph's Catholic church at Middle River by Patricia Jayne Blazek, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Blazek, of that city, and Terry Scott Peterson, son of Mrs. Gary Peterson of Middle River and the late Donald Peterson.

Rev. Vincent Bryce officiated at the double ring ceremony. Barb Geer was the organist and together with KayDell Super, trumpeter, played "Trumpet Tune," for the wedding march. During the ceremony, Donovan Ruud, a friend of the groom, and John Burkel, a cousin of the bride, sang "Looking Through the Eyes of Love," "Rainbow," "Years From Now," and "The Rose."

The ceremony included the lighting of the unity candle, the presentation by the bride of a long-stemmed rose at the altar of the Blessed Virgin, and the expression of the couple's love for their mothers by presenting each with a long-stemmed rose.

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her parents. She was attired in a Victorian-styled, empire fashioned, gown of Chantilly lace featuring long, sheer sleeves with chiffon ruffled cuffs, banded with satin. Matching ruffles formed the collar and outlined the sheer lace yoke. Her bouffant skirt was encircled at the hemline by a wide chiffon flounce that extended upward in back, creating a bustle effect. Bands of satin and Venice lace trim enhanced the flounce and the lace cathedral-length train. Her fingertip veil was attached to a lace derby hat. She carried a cascade bouquet of peach roses, accented with various white blossoms, greenery and babies' breath.

Lynn Nelson attended her sister as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Kim Blazek, sister of the bride; Tammy Blazek, sister of the groom; and Brenda Abrahamson, Gatzke, a friend of the bride.

Their gowns of peach lustruous polyester knit, styled in empire fashion with spaghetti straps, featured chiffon capelets, matching the skirt overlay. In their hair, they wore sprigs of babies' breath. They carried long-stemmed peach roses with babies' breath and greenery.

The bride's personal attendant was her cousin, Brenda Blazek.

Best man was Rick Rantanen, a friend of the groom. Groomsmen were Gary Ryba, a friend of the groom, Kenny Blazek, a brother of the bride, and Scottie Peterson, a cousin of the groom. Serving as ushers were Ron Nelson, a brother-in-law of the bride, and Jamie Peterson, a brother of the groom. All wore spice colored tuxedos with peach ruffled shirts and peach rose boutonnieres.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Blazek selected a floor-length gown in spice brown with a beige bodice and beige accessories. The groom's mother wore a pink floor-length gown with white accessories. Their corsages of sweetheart roses were in correlating shades.

Honor guests were the couple's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Taus, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Blazek, Mrs. Ida Horien and Mrs. Florence Peterson.

A wedding reception at the Meadowbrook ballroom near Middle River followed the ceremony. Host and hostess were Tom and Kay Dell Super, friends of the couple. Dawn Solfield, cousin of the bride, registered the guests as friends of the bride, Jackie Cwikla and Julie Jesme, served the punch.

The three-tiered, heart-shaped wedding cake, iced and decorated in the bride's chosen colors, was topped with a fresh-cut floral arrangement, a replica of the bride's bouquet. The godmothers Joanne Thompson and Norma Dahle cut and served the cake as Angie Solfield, aunt of the bride, and Betty Peterson, aunt of the groom, presided at the silver service.

Friends of the bride, Audrey Beito, Darcie McKeever and Jody Christofferson, served as waitresses. Gifts were carried by Donny Nelson and David Nelson, newphews of the bride, and David Blazek, a brother of the bride.

to prioritize projects and aid future planning.

McCombs-Knutson, Twin Cities engineering firm commissioned to do the study, reported on its progress. The consultants provided peak flow statistics for every tributary of the Red. Their centers on years 1966, 1969 and 1979. According to a computerized regression equation using storage, slope, marsh area, cultivated area and total available moisture as variables, clearly defined contributing areas emerged throughout the basin.

These areas have been assigned values relative to their flood potential. Although final results are not complete, it is suspected cultivated areas near main stream of the Red have the highest flood contributing potential. Early findings also question whether marshlands west of the Red Lake region have as much storage capability as assumed. However, engineers said more analysis is needed before any conclusions are made.

Study is now headed into development stage where computerized data already collected, plus input from numerous state and federal agencies will be formulated into a working program.

Concluding their presentation, consultants asked if there were more specific directions the board wanted the study to take. Board members asked that study use hydrographs as opposed to specific figures and that question of flooding duration also be addressed. Further information can be expected in Janurary when two groups meet again.

Step II funding for project in Red Lake watershed was approved after the board heard a status report by that member district. Proposal involves construction of a $900,000 structure on the Black river west of Red Lake Falls.

Upon completion, Sherrick dam will have total storage potential of 6,500 acre feet (4,500 acre feet controlled) and take in drainage area of 107 miles. Site is expected to provide downstream flood relief to Crookston and East Grand Forks.

Red Lake watershed officials said the project is awaiting permit approval but they have scheduled hearing in Janurary.

In other action, board approved a resolution asking the state legislature to amend a bill that left out portions of Beltrami, Itasca and Koochiching counties from Lower Red's two mill construction levy. Affected counties are part of Red Lake watershed district.

Board also accepted a resolution from the Red Lake district opposing any further prelimary engineering costs being funded by Lower Red instead of the sponsoring district. Board accepted the resolution into the record but took no formal action themselves. Final item saw payment of Step II funds to the Sand Hill district for construction on Project II.

AGASSIZ REFUGE in eastern Marshall county is one of the proposed candidate sites for a hazardous waste disposal facility. Manager Joe Kotok is concerned about the proposal and opposed to establishment of the site. Among the concerns is the volume of water which flows through the refuge from a 640-square-mile collection area involving three rivers and a major judicial ditch system. This view toward the northeast from the tower near refuge headquarters is in the direction of the proposed site. More than three-fourths of the proposed four-square-mile candidate site lies within the wildlife refuge boundaries.

Tax Saving Steps Should Be Taken Now

Although most changes in the new federal tax law will not apply to your 1981 federal income tax return, there are still important tax saving steps you should take before December 31 to benefit from the new law, according to the Minnesota Society of certified public accountants (CPAs).

If you anticipate your income will be the same next year, your basic strategy should be to cram all possible deductions into this year and to defer as much income into next year as you can. Because tax rates on your 1981 income will be higher than rates applied to 1982 income, deductions taken on 1981 income will mean cash in your pocket.

If your tax bracket is under 50 per cent, your 1982 tax rate may drop about 10 per cent. If your tax bracket is higher, even bigger tax savings are in store for you in 1982.

As an example, if you and your spouse are in the 50 per cent tax bracket, your combined taxable income is around $46,000. Next year, the tax cut lowers tax brackets. You will need $85,000 in income to remain in the 50 per cent bracket.

Here's how to compute next year's tax rate. If your taxable income is in the 44 per cent bracket, subtract 10 per cent or 4.4 from 44, and your income drops to the 39 per cent bracket.

In considering deductions, look over last year's tax return, reviewing deductions to remind yourself what options you have this year. Do you need eyeglasses or dental work which can be paid for by December 31? If you have medical expenses amounting to more than 3 per cent of your income, it will be worthwhile to take these deductions this year.

Make your January mortgage payment in December. That way, you can deduct your interest for December which is often included in the January payment. Speed up deductions for business expenses or charitable contributions. Advance the last payment due on your estimated state tax.

If you plan a major purchase, Minnesota CPAs suggest you buy it before the end of the year to take advantage of the deduction for sales tax. For example, if you were to buy a $25,000 boat, with the 5 per cent Minnesota sales tax you would have a federal income tax deduction of $1,250 — in addition to the standard sales tax deduction computed by the Internal Revenue Service.

Delaying income until 1982 is the other phase of wise year-end tax strategy. As a salaried employee, you may not be able to do much about this unless you expect a year-end bonus. If you receive it after December 31st it won't be taxable until next year.

Self-employed persons may be able to delay billings until after the first of the year and thus reduce income. Sales representatives can also think about delaying the closing of a deal, so that the commission will be part of next year's income.

Another way to manipulate income is through capital gains. Congress has reduced the ceiling on capital gains tax to 20 per cent on gains received after June 9, 1981. Naturally, this new ruling favors high bracket taxpayers, and in those brackets, CPAs advise cashing in assets and adding the gain to 1981 income. If you are below top brackets, wait until next year, when the lower tax rates will also lower the tax on any capital gain.

Here's an example to help you decide if it's smart to sell collectibles now in order to realize a gain.

Let's say you are single and your taxable income (after deductions and exemptions of $35,000 for 1981 is in the 49 per cent tax bracket. You paid $2,000 for a coin collection a few years ago. If you sell that collection for $9,000, $7,000 is capital gain because you held it for more than one year: This means 40 per cent of $7,000, or $2,800 will be added to your 1981 income, bringing it up to $37,800. You will pay $11,579 in federal income tax this year.

However, if you delayed and sold the collection next year for the same price, your taxable income will be the same, but your total income tax on $37,800 will be $10,440 — $1,139 less — because you would be in the 44 per cent marginal tax bracket.

If you are married, and you both work and file a joint income tax return, you would pay less tax, becaues of next year's reduction in the marriage penalty. You would be able to reduce the income of the lower paid spouse by 5 per cent.

January 1 is the time to start putting money aside (even if you have to borrow it) for an Individual Retirement Account or Keogh plan for 1982, say the Minnesota CPAs. If you are covered by a pension plan at your job, you will still be able to invest in your own IRA and deduct up to $2,000 from your income.

One of the most important parts of financial and tax planning is getting financial records in order. This helps to see more clearly what tax breaks are available to you next year.

U.S. Customs Apprehends Deserter

November 29, U.S. customs inspectors and officers of the U.S. immigration and naturalization service at the Pembina, N.D. port of entry were responsible for the apprehension of a man wanted for desertion from the U.S. navy.

The 37-year-old resident of Pasadena, Texas, was turned over to the Pembina county sheriff after a customs computer check at the border crossing identified him as a fugitive.

During the period from October 13 through November 29, six fugitives have been apprehended due to U.S. customs service and immigration and naturalization service inspections at the Pembina port of entry, and all were turned over to the Pembina county sheriff.

MFU Farmers Demand Action On Policies

Delegates to the 40th annual Minnesota Farmers Union convention conducted recently in Bloomington made three strong statements in special orders of business.

Farmers opposed a shift to property taxes in the search for a solution to the state's revenue shortfall; called for a comprehensive state land use policy to preserve farmland; and urged an end to current economic policies that threaten farmers through a shift of financial resources away from agriculture.

In three separate statements, the farmers agreed that swift and strong action must be taken.

State tax and financial policy — Minnesota Legislature should continue its investigation of revenue shortfall and seek a long-term solution, including balancing the 1982-83 biennium budget, the farmers said in a separate special order of business.

"State programs must be evaluated to insure their cost-effectiveness, but the delivery of needed services in areas such as agriculture, education and health services should not be jeopardized in the long run by short-range financial solutions.

". . . Revenues should come mainly from progressive taxes based on the ability to pay, such as the income tax.

"We strongly believe that any solution of state financial problems should avoid a shift in responsibility from the state to local units of government and school districts through a delay in and reduction of state aid payments. The burden of any such reductions would ultimately fall on property taxpayers, chiefly farmers in many tax districts," the farmers agreed.

Farmland preservation — Calling quality farmland the state and nation's greatest asset, the farmers named preserving it as a major responsibility.

In a special order of business, the delegates stated:

". . . Our state has seen 1 million acres of farmland converted to non-farm use during the past decade.

"For this reason, we urge the Minnesota Legislature to develop a comprehensive land use policy intended to preserve and conserve our agricultural land to the greatest possible extent. Upon completion of the policy statement, the legislature should implement an agricultural land preservation program with proper land use incentives or controls to carry out the state policy."

Federal programs were also critized by the delegates.

"We are concerned that our present administration in Washington has not completed work on a federal soil and water conservation program. To date, USDA has only briefly indicated that funding of any new conservation program will be very limited and whatever is authorized will be sent to the states in the form of block grants to those areas that most need conservation assistance," their policy paper said.

The farmers reinterated their position that to ensure proper conservation of the land, it must remain in the hands of family farmers.

National farm and economic policy — Citing figures showing net farm income down 40 per cent from 1979, high interest rates, and federal policies that threaten to further deteriorate the conditions facing farmers through a shift of finances away from agriculture, the delegates accepted the following recommendations:

(1.) "Most importantly, reinstate a farm program that addresses a supply management formula that ensures an adequate livelihood for farmers and ranchers and recognizes their contribution to the nation's economy," the special order of business states."

(2.) "Support a farm credit allocation system that provides credit to our nation's farmers, particularly young farmers, at a reasonable rate of interest that will allow them to remain in the business of producing food and fiber for domestic consumption and provide exports to improve the U.S. balance of trade."

(3.) "Reemphasize the responsibility of the federal government to ensure a strong farm and economic policy designed to strengthen agriculture and provide a strong economy for all Americans."

(4.) "Reallocate financial resources and government commitment back to agriculture and other productive sectors of society."

ENERGY INDEPENDENCE DAY IN DECEMBER?

Well, not quite, but we're trying. Actually, the Minnesota Energy Agency would like our state to celebrate a little less energy dependence each day. WE NEED YOUR HELP!

Minnesota is totally dependent on others for oil, natural gas, and coal to meet our energy demands. But we do have peat and special crops, like cattails, which we think will some day meet fifteen to forty per cent of our energy needs.

The State Legislature asked us to develop a proposal for special energy crop research for our state. We want to talk to you about it and hear your ideas.

Please join us for a meeting in Thief River Falls.

Church, Farm Spokespersons Attend Meet

A call to action was issued to more than 100 church and farm leaders at the close of the landmark 1981 farm-church-land conference conducted recently in Washington, D.C. by Minnesota Farmers Union president and National Farmers Union executive board chairman Cy Carpenter, St. Paul.

Carpenter told the conferees that the two-day session could be an historic occasion, but only if they acted upon their return home.

Conference was organized to bring church and farm spokespersons together to discuss the future of rural American for the first time on a national level. Specifically, land use policy and its effects on both urban and rural food consumers and producers was discussed. Urban-rural unity was a common ideal presented by many speakers and participants.

Sponsors included many church denominations and farm organizations, including national and Minnesota Farmers Union.

"If no action comes from this conference, it will be a major setback. But if action does result, it will be a force far stronger than the writing of a farm bill," Carpenter said in a closing session. "It's no coincidence that we're meeting in Washington at the same time as Congress is finishing its writing of the 1981 farm bill."

Carpenter said that traditionally people have spent a lot of time studying the past and learning from their mistakes, or looking into the future. "But we're not spending enough time causing and literally demanding change for the present," he said.

"I believe that we must have a work force for family farming to which churches, farm organizations and others contribute time, effort and financial support to allow and in fact require an understanding of farm problems, then a change, and then a reversal of our present method of establishing policy and values for land, agriculture, and not the least, the people," he said.

The church is a natural place to start in changing farm policy, since churches form a nucleus in the rural community, Carpenter pointed out. And churches will benefit as well, he said, since without family farmers rural churches would not exist.

"As one of our earlier speakers mentioned, we should recognize again that the Bible is largely a story of people and their involvement in God's gift of land. We should apply that in our everyday lives and everyday values," Carpenter siad.

One of the most important values is the involvement of the family in farming the land.

"Present agricultural policy tears families apart instead of holding them together. A realistic policy would allow both parents to be equitably compensated from their farming operations and maintain the family unit, instead of economically forcing one or both parents off the farm in order to suppliment their family farming income," Carpenter said.

These problems and others can only be solved if the people attending conferences such as this one take action when they return home, he said.

"This conference can only be historic if action follows. It will be history if in its simplest form it creates change, develops policy, establishes values, and causes personal public involvement and a commitment to the use of land for food production," said Carpenter.

"It will be history if churches and farm organizations can create in the rural communities throughout the country the mechanism for establishing those values in policy and utilizing them, rather than having them imposed on their communities from policies formed outside of agriculture."

Carpenter noted that at least one conference participant had spoken about the lack of discussion in churches about land policy.

"Most denominations have a policy paper about land use," he said. "But it is seldom talked about. This has be become a from-the-pulpit issue."

Organizations and churches involved in planning the conference include: National and Minnesota Farmers Union, National Farmers organization, National Grange, American Lutheran church, the Board of church and society, United Methodist church, the Christian Life commission of the Southern Baptist Convention, the Interreligious Task Force on U.S. food policy, the Lutheran church in America, and the Lutheran council, USA.

PARKS AND RECREATION board members were among city board and commission members recognized Monday evening during local government day. A dinner was held in the city auditorium basement meeting room. Left to right are Ken Wiebolt, chairman; Ole Engelstad and Don Howe. Not present were Dale Wennberg and Lori Olson.

All single parents, both men and women, are invited to attend the meeting.

Voters Opposed To Tuition Tax Credits

"The recent defeat of the tuition tax credit referendum in Washington, D.C. demonstrates voter opposition to the whole idea of tuition tax credit legislation," says Mary Ann Leveridge, president of the national Parent-Teacher Association (PTA). "This is the 13th consecutive time since 1967 that localities have defeated similar tax credit initiatives," says Leveridge.

The referendum, which would have allowed taxpayers to claim a $1,200 tax credit per child off local income taxes for tuition paid to private elementary and secondary schools or to public schools outside the Washington city limits, was defeated by a nine to one margin by district voters.

According to Leveridge, the vote was considered a test of tuition tax credits. "Therefore, its overwhelming defeat is heartening and should serve as a signal to tax credit proponents that voters do not want much needed dollars syphoned away from public schools to private schools," says Leveridge.

Leverdige has previously called tuition tax credits one of the greatest threats to public education today because they would undermine the funding of public education at a time when federal programs for education have already been cut by more than 25 per cent. Says Leveridge, "It is clear that tuition tax credits are both educationally and economically unsound."

"The supporters of tuition tax credits spent a lot of money on a sophisticated-media campaign," says Bill Brown, president of the D.C. PTA, "but we were able to demonstrate the fallacy of the pro-tuition tax arguments. Our voters recognized that this legislation would turn many of our schools into dumping grounds for those children that private schools can't or don't want to educate," says Brown.

"National tuition tax proposals are currently being stymied in Congress by the worsening national economic situation, so proponents of tax credit legislation are moving their battle to the local and state levels," says Leveridge. The National PTA is committed to defeating tuition tax credits everywhere, in every form and at every level of government," she says.

"We expect that similar referenda will be brought up in some other cities, but we expect that they will be defeated, too," says Leveridge.

National opposition to the tuition tax referendum in Washington was led by the National coalition for public education — a coalition of 40 organizations that was founded in 1978 by the national PTA and which is chaired by the national PTA. Local opposition was led by the district PTA in conjunction with other local district groups.

National PTA, a six million member organization, is the largest child advocacy organization in America.

Minn. Solar Industries Guild Formed

1982 will be a pivotal year for the solar business community. Minnesota solar industries could, formed this year to promote the continued growth of renewable energy in Minnesota, is a non-profit trade association. Its membership, comprised of the state's solar industry leaders, includes solar system contractors, designers, retailers, manufacturers and commercial ventures which sell products and services related to renewable energy resources such as wind, biomass, hydro-electric and geothermal equipment.

Solar guild will seek to: (1) increase public awareness of the viability of solar devices and services; (2) provide services to members that will assist in the establishment and growth of Minnesota-based solar industries; and (3) promote a Minnesota business climate favorable to solar commercialization.

Guild's highest priority projects for this year include lobbying for the extension of the 20 per cent Minnesota renewable energy tax credit past its December 31, 1982 expiration date, and programs leading to solar collector certification and licensure of solar installers.

David Pogany, solar consultant and charter guild member, notes that "Solar systems can economically, complete today with any new source of energy, whether it be an off-shore oil rig or a new nuclear power plant."

Pogany, a resource economist by training, continues, "Besides being pollution free and inflation proof, solar systems installed in Minnesota are almost always done by Minnesotans, and displace energy purchased from outside the state. The potential for employment ranges from design, engineering and manufacturing to installation, marketing and sales."

Doug Frame, solar guild membership chairman, sees the guild as a means to insure the credibility of businesses. "Strict compliance with the solar guild's code of ethics by members will offer the Minnesota solar consumer a real sense of security," Frame explains. "Hopefully, the industry will be viewed as mature and worthy of being a viable option to fossil fuel use in the eyes of potential customers, government and financial institutions."

Ose Joins In Research View At Crookston

Roger Larson, Clay county King Agassiz, Moorhead; Dr. B.E. Youngquist, superintendent, Northwest experiment station; and Joe Ose, Pennington county, King Agassiz, Thief River Falls, met recently for an agricultural research review at the Northwest experiment station, Crookston.

Occasion marked the annual "research review" given by the experiment station to update the Agassiz Kings on agricultural research at the station and to receive suggestions relative to agricultural concerns.

Superintendent B.E. Youngquist outlined the history and development of the Northwest station, its relationship to the beginnings of the Red River Valley Winter Shows and to the ongoing needs for public supported agricultural research. An overview of the Northwest experiment station was presented by Gene Muller, engineer and information officer at the station, through colored visual and aerial pictures taken of various project areas.

King Agassiz association took advantage of the get-together to meet in executive session to make plans for the coming years activites in respective counties and at the Winter Shows of 1982.

Bud Berglind, Ada, representing the Agassiz association of the Winter Shows board of managers, met with Gary H. Johnson, president and chairman of the group and with directors Ron Peterson, Fisher; Bruce Hamnes, Stephen; Charles Bachand, Brooks; and Vernon Holland, Ada.

Joe Folger Now 'Rocks Rockies' As Disc Jockey

As the last few bars of "Heavy Metal" cascade to a silence, Joe Folger, disc-jockey at KBPI, Denver, CO., takes the microphone into his hands and circulates his voice throughout the Rocky Mountains saying "KBPI rocks the Rockies."

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Folger, Thief River Falls, he comments in a Colorado newspaper feature, "I always wanted to be on the radio." During high school at Thief River Falls, Folger enrolled in a radio class, later practicing his talents on KAVS FM while attending Thief River Falls area vocational technical institute. He graduated from the AVTI in 1975.

After airing his voice to Minnesota communities on station KTRF, Folger's ambitions increased, sending him on a $3,000 two-week trip to prospective cities. "I did not know a soul," he stated, "It was hard to go from a small town to a large city."

Three years ago, Folger found himself in Denver with a job offer from KBPI. He has attained position of music director at the station and records advertisements while off the air.

He comments, "Coordinating the music is like an art form. I try to paint the best picture possible." On the air, Folger follows no pattern when playing songs, but creates a smooth program out of contemporary hits and frequent requests. He talks through the microphone as if it were to one person instead of saying "How are you all today?" or "Howdy folks." When asked why his voice sounds different on the radio, he replied, "It's just because I know what I'm going to say."

While Denver listens to the latest hits, Folger selects succeeding songs and prepares his lines for the next break.

He occasionally receives prank phone calls, ranging from x-rated language to "I'll commit suicide if you don't play. . ." He says he listens to KBPI at home and never gets tired of the music. "Working at KBPI keeps your blood moving all the time," remarked Folger.

He attends many rock concerts, often speaking with the musicians. He says his favorite group is The Guess Who, but he would still like to meet Mick Jagger and Paul McCartney.

Folger still has growing ambitions, which include programming exploration, management control and eventually having his own radio station.

Eat Well And Safely During Holiday Season

'Tis the season to eat well. There is, after all, a mouth-watering assortment of goodies from which to choose — home-baked breads, delicious cheeses and cheese spreads, citrus surprise packages from the sun belt and sumptous servings of turkey, ham and lamb.

With all these taste treats around the house, it's a good idea to take added precautions to guard against food spoilage. That way, you can enjoy holiday foods well into the new year. And you can rest assured that they're safe to eat.

Here are some tips from the U.S. department of agriculture for safely storing various foods:

Breads — If you're going to use within five to seven days, wrap and store in a bread box. (Bread actually stays fresher longer at room temperature than in the refrigerator.) If not, wrap and freeze. Breads will retain their eating quality for two to three months if frozen.

Hard cheeses (such as Cheddar, Parmesan and Swiss) — Wrap tightly and keep refrigerated. Hard cheeses will keep for several months this way. Make sure, though, to cut off any mold that may form on the surface of the cheese.

Soft cheese (such as cottage, cream and Camembert) — Tightly cover and refrigerate. Use cottage cheese within three to five days, others within two weeks.

Cheese spreads — Once opened, cover and refrigerate. Use within two weeks.

Citrus fruits — Store at a cool room temperature (60 to 70 degrees F) or in the refrigerator. Use within two weeks.

Jellies, jams and preserves — Once opened, cover and refrigerate.

Nuts — If shelled, store in airtight containers in the refrigerator. They'll keep for up to six months this way. Unshelled nuts, in general, can be stored for the same period of time at room temperature.

Leftover cooked meats — cover and refrigerate. use within three to four days.

Leftover stuffing — Remove from chicken or turkey, cover and store in refrigerator. Use within two days.

Leftover gravy and broth — Highly perishable. Cover, refrigerate and use within one or two days.

Remember also to check that your refrigerator and freezer are maintaining adequate temperatures. Proper refrigeration takes place below 40 degrees F, while food freezing requires a temperature of 0 degrees F.

Safety is YOUR Business

Airline Gives Comments On Service Cuts

Daniel F. May, president of Republic Airlines, said recently that, in view of proposed Congressional action on the fiscal year 1982 budget, Republic will be able to continue serving 47 of the 51 points now operated under the Section 406 subsidy program.

"We are pleased that Congress has decided to adopt this compromise funding level," said May, "so we can serve the vast majority of our cities requiring the help of Section 406 subsidy."

Fiscal year 1982 appropriation adopted by the House-Senate conference committee provides for a ceiling of $14 million in subsidy payments for the second half of the fiscal year, under Section 406 of the Federal aviation act.

"However, this level of funding is not enough to preserve the entire 406 program," said May. "We have determined that it will be necessary to suspend service at four points. These are Thief River Falls; Ironwood (Mich.)-Ashland (Wisc.); Iron Mt.-Kingsford, and Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

"The cities to be suspended produce limited traffic and have had substantial declines in passenger boardings this year," said May. "We will, of course, work with these communities and the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) to assure that the satisfactory service by a replacement carrier is arranged before we withdraw.

"Republic has no further plans to suspend service at any of its other subsidized points at this time," May said. "We hope to continue serving our remaining Section 406 cities for the present. Our ability to do so will, of course, depend on their traffic development, as well as traffic generally in the airline industry."

May emphasized that Congressional action on the Section 406 subsidy program also needs to be completed for the subsequent fiscal years of 1983 and 1984. "We assume that provision will be made by Congress for a continuation of this subsidy program on a reduced basis in those years. Without that, Republic would have to take a much harder look at whether we can maintain service at some of the other small cities during fiscal year 1982," he said.

Notices of suspension of service at the four points will be filed by Republic with the CAB within a few days. Federal Aviation act requires 90 days' notice from the date of such filing before a carrier may withdraw from a city. Statute also gives the CAB the power to require service by the carrier for an additional period until a satisfactory replacement airline has been designated.

MN. Receives $13,875,700 For Energy Aid

Sen. Rudy Boschwitz has announced that the state of Minnesota will receive $13,875,700 from the department of health and human services to administer and provide for low-income energy assistance programs.

"I firmly believe that the government must help those in need pay their energy costs — which have risen enormously over the past several years. Many of our citizens, particularly the elderly and those with income below certain levels, simply cannot be expected to cope with this kind of increase," Boschwitz said.

"Without government assistance, some of these people would be forced to choose between buying food and keeping warm. No one in our society should be forced to make such a choice," he added.

This money is only a portion of what Minnesota will receive in 1982. Minnesota received over $69 million in 1981 for energy assistance programs. Local agencies in the state administer the program which begins in December of this year. The agencies are required to publicize when and where applications for assistance will be available.

Money Raised For Newfolden Cancer Patient

A collection was recently taken in Newfolden for Craig Bakke, six and one-half-year-old son of Larry and Heidi Bakke, Newfolden, who suffers from cancer.

Collection cans were placed in various businesses in Newfolden. A total of $275.30 was collected in donations to be used for hospital costs and treatment costs for Craig's illness.

Marshall county central Jaycee women would like to thank all who donated to the collection.

Parents Of Missing Children Aided

Parents of missing children now will have access to a national computer information network as part of legislation passed by the Senate.

Missing Children Act, co-sponsored by Sen. Rudy Boschwitz (R-Minn.), establishes a clearinghouse to assist law enforcement agencies in locating runaways, victims of parental kidnapping and children abducted against their will by strangers.

"It's been said that stolen cars get more attention from local law enforcement agencies than missing children," Boschwitz said. "I think it's of vital importance that parents of missing children have this expanded service available to them on a national level," he said.

The FBI presently keeps a file on missing persons based on information received from state law enforcement agencies. It's estimated, however, that only 10 per cent of missing persons — mostly children — are entered into statewide files, Boschwitz explained.

Clearinghouse allows parents to voluntarily provide names and information on missing children. Only law enforcement officials can retrieve the information.

Since the computer system is already in place, the costs of adding names to it is minimal.

Information on the computer can be sent to other countries where children are often taken. Assistance in identifying deceased children will also be provided.

Legislation was considered as an amendment to the state, justice and commerce appropriations bill.

DNR Makes Payments To MN. Counties

Payments totalling $313,306.00 in lieu of taxes have been made to 12 counties in northwestern Minnesota by the Department of Natural Resources.

Payments amount to 50 per cent of income derived from "Consolidated Conservation Lands" and "State Forest Lands" located within the respective counties for fiscal year 1981.

Payments are calculated on the following formula:

(1.) 50 per cent of revenue derived from state forest lands (sale of state land, timber sales, lease payments, easements and other sources.)

(2.) 50 per cent of revenue derived from consolidated conservation land (land sales, leases, timber sales, easements and other sources.)

By law, counties receiving consolidated conservation funds are required to apportion 30 per cent to a county development fund for rehabilitation and development of the portion of the county lying within the conservation area; 40 per cent to the capital outlay fund of the school district from which derived; 20 per cent to the county revenue fund; and 10 per cent to the township road and bridge fund of the township from which derived — provided, however, that in the event the proceeds are derived from an unorganized township wherein there is no levy for road and bridge purposes, the township portion shall be credited to the county revenue fund.

In addition to these payments, counties receive payments for public hunting grounds; land acquired by the DNR through purchase, condemnation, or gift; land owned by the state and administered by DNR, and tax-forfeited lands owned by the state and administered by DNR.

Payments to the counties from these other sources have already amounted to $4,702,971.59 in 1981.

Funds are used for forest management, game and fish habitat improvement, recreational development and improvement, property tax relief, maintenance of county administered and other natural resource land, and the county general fund.

Following is a list of counties in the DNR's northwestern region (Region I) who are receiving payments now from state land receipts.

Region I Headquarters: (Bemidji): Becker — $24,480.34; Beltrami — $69,008.99; Clearwater — $2,395.65; Hubbard — $22,172.42; Kittson — $10; Lake of the Woods — $119,932; Mahnomen — $3,061.23; Marshall — $5,723.76; Norman — $44.50; Pennington — $416.50; Polk — $14; Roseau — $66,047.54; total $313,306.93.

Agassiz Refuge Objector To Disposal Site

and determine whether the action is compatible, based on the information which the refuge manager would provide.

Evaluation would be based on what impact the drilling might have on wetlands preservation, water quality, wildlife, esthetics, vegetation, etc.

"I don't see that there would be any way that I could show that this would be a compatible use. We could not deny them the right to go through the process, but I doubt that they would ever be given the permission to drill. The eventual siting would probably require a full-fledged environmental impact statement, and I don't see how it could ever fly," Kotok said.

He expressed the opinion that placement of a potential hazardous waste disposal site on the refuge was an indiscriminate selection of public lands. "You can't just categorize public lands as unimportant lands," the refuge manager said. "Agassiz is part of the national wildlife refuge system, so we are protected by many executive orders and acts. Our mission here is wetlands preservation, waterfowl production, wildlife maintenance."

One of Kotok's primary concerns is the water flow through the refuge. During the past 15 years — which include several dry years — the refuge has averaged an annual inflow of 135,000 acre feet of water and an outflow of 96,000 acre feet. (An acre foot is the amount of water required to cover one acre of land with water one foot deep.)

He points out that all the water from the upper reaches of the Red Lake River watershed flow through Agassiz refuge. Included are the approximately 400 miles of lateral ditches which feed the Judicial Ditch 11 system, the Mud river, Moose river and Thief river. He estimates the drainage from 640 square miles is involved in the Agassiz collection system.

By the waste management board's own criteria, the site should never be considered, Kotok believes. He said he will present a prepared statement at the waste management board's public hearing Thursday evening at 7 p.m. in the city auditorium. The statement will come from the regional office in Minneapolis.

He said he has informed the waste menagement board staff of his opposition and has expressed his displeasure at not having been contacted in advance regarding the selection. He first learned that a portion of the refuge had been proposed as a candidate site by reading it in the Thief River Falls Times, he said. Although he has had a number of telephone conversations, he has yet to meet personally with anyone from the waste management office, he said.

Further, he added, it appered that local contact had not been made by the waste management office with local agencies such as county engineers, soil conservation service representatives, water management boards and others.

The refuge manager indicated that he had received a packet of materials from the waste management board on Saturday — the first materials he has had for review since learning of the site proposal.

"Agassiz represents some of the best remaining wetlands in northwestern Minnesota, approximating 40,000 of Agassiz' 61,000-plus acres," Kotok said. "It doesn't make sense that this would be included."

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

Your recent coverage of the hazardous waste siting has been excellent, and should inspire action by all of us area residents.

Just before the Red Lake River froze into a band of steel, I dunked a huge watering can into the flowing river. Today, as I poured that hoarded water onto the Swedish Ivy plant in the kitchen window, I thought how we have taken the purity of our river water for granted.

I used to think that one advantage of living in northwestern Minnesota was that without heavy industry and without high population density, we could enjoy a relatively clean outdoor environment. But now our state is considering burying a time bomb where it might affect our underground water and rivers for years to come.

We do not want the hazardous waste in our neighborhood. So what is Minnesota going to do with the waste? I wonder whether there are not some other alternatives. Surely burial is not a prudent method of disposal, for we really have not figured out how to prevent eventual rupture and seepage from buried containers. I doubt that a "suitable" site can be found anywhere in our beautiful state, and it is not fair to send the stuff to another state.

One problem with burial is that we really do not know much about the depths or interrelationships of aquifers and ground water. There must instead be a way of neutralizing or incinerating or separating chemicals, and then storing remaining ash or residue ABOVE GROUND. Or, if we cannot safely dispose of the waste in some safe way, then we had better not manufacture the hazardous-waste producing item in the first place.

At the present time, we can at least gain a feeling of satisfaction at having a certain control over our lifestyle and our environment. The dramatic economic problems facing our state could well be temporary. But, the burial of hazardous waste in Marshall county could be dangerous forever. Let us all support our area councils, commissions and boards that have already gone on record as being against the local sites.

OVERDENTURES

There is a new way to make dentures which vastly improves the retention of dental plates and has become a boon to denture wearers. Hopeless teeth are no longer extracted. Instead, root canal treatment is performed, then the teeth are cut down to the level of the gumline. The roots of the teeth remain imbedded in the jawbone and the presence of these roots prevents the bone under the gums from shrinking. This preserves the ridges and gives good retention and support for the dentures.

Another method is to cement metal studs on top of the imbedded roots. The studs protrude about one-quarter inch. Corresponding snaps are fastened to the denture. All the individual needs to do is to snap the denture onto the studs and there are no more worries about slipping dentures.

An overdenture can give you a more natural feel than a conventional denture because your own natural root tips transfer tactile sensations directly into your bone. That makes the overdenture feel more "real."

Answers from the Bible by Pastor Don Peros

Q. Pastor Don, I need some answers on the subject of free abortion. There are many people in our country who apparently believe that a woman and her physician should have the right to terminate a pregnancy for any reason, or no reason at all. How do you feel about this importance? Please give some scripture.

A. I haven't written on this subject until I could consider it objectively from every vantage point, and not be biased by what other people were saying, either pro or con. I have done that now, and for the last three or four years I have found myself increasingly more opposed to abortion to the point that now I am unalterably opposed to the concept of free abortion as it is now being advocated, for just any reason.

Now there are exceptional circumstances, obviously such as where rape has occurred, or incest, or where the life of the mother has been threatened for health reasons. But I have some strong feelings about abortion for other reasons, those that do not have that kind of justification, to take a normal, healthy child prenatally and to lift him from the uterus and allow him to die on a porcelan table in some doctor's office or in some hospital. That just can't be right. I can't believe it is right.

It was the scriptures that ultimately convinced me that abortion was so wrong. I noticed in my reading of the Bible that God was acquainted with those children, before they were born.

Jeremiah 1:5 says, "Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee, and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee, and I ordained thee a prophet unto the nations."

Luke 1:15 talks about John the Baptist being filled with the Holy Spirit even while he was in his mother's womb.

Psalms 139:13-16 L.B. teaches, "You made all the delicate, inner parts of my body, and knit them together in my mother's womb. Thank you for making me so wonderfully complex! It is amazing to think about. Your workmanship is marvelous and how well I know it. You were there while I was being formed in utter seclusion! You saw me before I was born and scheduled each day of my life before I began to breath."

The scriptures teach that I am not an inanimate object. I was not a lifeless creature. I was not a soulless creature. I was an individual, a human being from the time I was one cell, the zygote, the first cell of life.

I cannot believe God can bless a nation which would handle His handiwork in such a disrespectful way.

If you have any questions that you would like to have answered from the Bible, please write Pastor Don Peros, Box 129, Thief River Falls, MN 56701.

Aquaculture — Raising Bait, Begins In MN

by Paul Dienhart
'U' 'M' News Service

Every Fisherman knows that Minnesota gamefish are picky eaters. That's meant a $23 million industry for state bait dealers, an industry that might expand dramatically in the next few years thanks to a science just getting established in the state — aquaculture.

There are few things a walleye likes better than a fat leech swimming at the end of a hook. The big muskies and northerns favor a fish called the white sucker. The demand for both baits is greater than the supply. The solution may be a scientific way of raising bait in ponds and tanks.

"Minnesota has a bait industry worth millions, but it's a secret. It's a non-developed industry almost like the hunter-gatherer stage of agriculture," said Douglas Tave, an aquaculture specialist at the University of Minnesota.

Baits that have gained immense popularity in the past few years — leeches and white suckers — may prompt state bait dealers to find new ways of keeping their tanks stocked. Leeches are captured wild from ponds, but by midsummer it's hard to find the big ones walleyes love. Most white suckers are raised commerically, but fish don't thrive on the techniques that are used to raise fathead minnows, the old standby of bait shops. More efficiency is needed to raise a bait that fetches $3 a dozen.

"The only way we're really going to supply all the bait we could sell is by better management practices," Tave said. "Minnesota is already exporting bait, but we could do a lot more and improve our balance of trade with neighboring states."

Aquaculture — farming the water — is a new idea for raising bait. It's been practiced in the South to raise catfish in man-made outdoor ponds. In Idaho, trout are raised in parallel rows of trenches flowing with artesian spring water. Decorative fish raised in aquariums are Florida's second largest airfreight item.

The time is ripe for a big advance in Minnesota's bait industry, Tave said. Until recently, a Minnesota effort to become bait supplier to the Upper Midwest would have been destroyed by economic competition.

"Arkansas is the top bait state," Tave said. "One guy alone has 16,000 acres of bait farm. When Alabama tried to raise bait, Arkansas came in and drove all the dealers out of business. At the time, Minnesota's bait industry was too puny to bother with. Now, Minnesota is relatively safe because of the cost of transporting bait from the South. Minnesota dealers realize that."

But there's a big obstacle to overcome before Minnesota can become king of the leech and white sucker. "We don't really know what's going on," Tave said. "we're starting from zero: Many dealers don't even know how many fish they stock. We can't tell percentage survival. We can't estimate profits because production methods vary so much. We're not even sure if aquaculture technology for food fish will transfer to bait fish."

"Once you decide to make something into an industry, it has to become a science. The bait industry in Minnesota has just been making it on its own without any help or hindrance from science. The exciting thing is that some minor manipulation might increase profits by millions. Adding a little fertilizer to ponds might increase white sucker survival by 5 per cent. That's $3 per dozen multiplied by thousands," Tave added.

The university may build fish ponds at an experimental station in Rosemount near the Twin Cities campus to scientifically test such aquaculture variables as yield, disease control, water quality and feed, Tave said. "Maybe we'll open up a new industry by discovering that these fish can eat waste grain."

Research on using aquaculture for bait leeches has progressed the furthest. From research by Hollie Collins and Linda Holmstrand, fishery biologists at the Univeristy of Minnesota-Duluth, a fact sheet on techniques for raising and trapping leeches has been published by the university's Sea Grant program.

Collins and Holmstrand solved the mystery of why big leeches disappear by midsummer. They have a two-year life cycle and die after depositing egg sacks in their second year. "Intensive harvesting knocks down the population severly," Collins said. "You can't go to the same pond next year because the leeches will be too small. But we doubt harvesting results in permanent damage. Our pond was harvested intensely two years ago and is now bouncing back."

A leech has both male and female sex organs and each leech can produce some 80 leechlets, Collins said.

Leeches don't seem so lowly when one considers that, buying them by the dozen, they can cost $35 to $40 a pound. "Compare that with beefsteak," Collins said. The Department of Natural Resources estimates that $4 million to $5 million worth of leeches were sold by Minnesota dealers last year," Collins said.

Bait leech is not just any leech. It's Nephelopsis obscura, the ribbon leech, a scavenger that has no teeth for sucking blood.

The ribbon leech has at least two other important qualities. First, there's something about it that walleye, smallmouth bass and crappies prefer over other leeches, even an active swimming leech like the redspotted blood sucker. Second, they like the cool climate of Minnesota. "By the time you hit the Iowa border bait leeches are hard to find," Collins said.

These qualities give Minnesota bait dealers something of an advantage. They're already exporting leeches. Collins and Holmstrand are now working on a cost-benefit analysis of a leech aquaculture setup. They're also trying to perfect a commerical diet for leeches. "We're getting a lot of interest from bait dealers," Collins said.

Tave, who joined the university in September, will assist in future studies of leech culture. He came to Minnesota from Auburn University in Alabama, a world leader in the study of aquaculture. Half his time is spent as an aquaculture extension agent for the Sea Grant program. After only a few weeks in Minnesota he got a call from Cargill, the huge Minnesota-based grain dealer, and one call after another from bait dealers. "The word is out," he said, "there's money in those ponds."

But concentrated bait farming could be a disaster for the uninformed, Tave cautioned. "Fish live in their own wastes," he explained. "If something happens to make the fish suffer stress, the bacteria is there to cause disease. It's a fragile situation that could go anytime. You could wake up one morning to find you've lost 50,000 fish. That not only hurts, it stinks!"

An interesting 1982 Lincoln high school football schedule was revealed Monday by head coach John Schmitz at the Prowlers' annual post-season awards banquet in the Lincoln cafeteria.

Unchanged will be games against Grand Forks Red River, Detroit Lakes, Moorhead, Bemidji, Fergus Falls, East Grand Forks and Crookston. However, Staples officials have decided to discontinue a six-year-old series with Thief River Falls and the Prowlers lost a two-year-old series with Grand Rapids when the Indians became caught up in several conference changes and scheduling arrangements in northeastern Minnesota high school football circles.

Replacing the Cardinals and Indians on the Prowlers' 1982 football schedule will be Breckenridge and Mahnomen.

Thief River Falls and Breckenridge faced each other from 1972 to 1975 during the Cowboys' brief membership in the Northwest Athletic Conference.

According to our records, Thief River Falls and Mahnomen, familiar opponents in basketball, have never met in football. The game should create a great deal of interest among the fans as the Class A Prowlers play the Class B Indians who have gained state-wide recognition with their football program that produced state playoff appearances in 1974, 1975, 1976, 1979, 1980 and 1981. They were Class B state runner-up in 1979 and won the title in 1980 with a team that many said ranked on par with any team of any size in the state. This year the Indians were unbeaten and ranked No. 1 in the state before losing to eventual champion Holdingford in the Class B state semifinals.

Breckenridge was also a state playoff participant this fall in Class A.

There's one catch to the Prowlers' 1982 football schedule: six of the nine games will be on the road, including a stretch of five straight road games.

Thief River Falls will open the 1982 season by hosting Grand Forks Red River. The Prowlers will then pack their bags for consecutive trips to Detroit Lakes, Mahnomen, Breckenridge, Moorhead and Bemidji. Back-to-back home games against Fergus Falls and East Grand Forks will be followed by the traditional season-ending game with Crookston, on the Pirates' field this time.

The Thief River Falls-Staples series was a good one, and it's too bad it has to end. Three of the six games were one-point wins for the Cardinals, who edged the Prowlers 29-28 here in 1976 to start the series and won by a 15-14 margin at home the following year. This past fall Staples again beat Thief River Falls 15-14 on the Cardinals' field. The Prowlers managed to string three straight wins together over the Cardinals, winning 26-12 in 1978, 37-0 in 1979 and 29-7 in 1980.

Grand Rapids, a power in Class AA the past couple of years, beat Thief River Falls twice in the brief series, but both times the Prowlers gave a good account of themselves, losing a 30-6 game at Grand Rapids in 1980 and challenging the highly regarded Indians before losing 13-6 here this fall.

New Basketball Rules In Effect

If you aren't already aware of the new rule changes in college and high school basketball this year, a reminder here that the game will have a new look in 1981-82.

Most dramatic change will come at the college level — seen locally at Northland community college — where the center jump, except for the start of the game and the start of overtime, has been eliminated. Instead, the two teams will alternate possessions whenever a jump ball is called.

High schools will still have the center jump, but will join the colleges in a change on free throws where rebounders can now enter the lane as soon as the ball is released rather than waiting until it touches the backboard or rim as in the past.

Center line (over-and-back) violation has also been changed at both levels. Now the ball handler must have both feet, plus the ball across the center line before he's considered in the front court. It should be an easier call for officials, but the uninformed fans will undoubtedly be yelling for over-and back calls until they get accustomed to the change.

Another change will concern the defense. Now an opponent guarded closely for five seconds will result in a turnover, not a jump ball as in the past. However, in college, the five-second rule still means a jump ball — which really means the ball simply goes over to whichever team's turn it is for possession rather than having the actual jump ball taking place.

TRF, Crookston Hockey Teams Tangle Saturday

At the beginning of preseason practice, Lincoln high school hockey coach Wendell Grand acknowledged that the Prowlers were set for forwards, with a number of experienced centers and wings returning from last year's squad that reached the Section 8 tournament championship game. However, he wasn't so sure about the status of his goaltending and defensive units.

Now, with the 1981-82 season opener scheduled Saturday night against Crookston in the sports arena, Grand finds the situation hasn't changed a whole lot. His three forward lines are set, but there are still questions in goal and on defense.

The lines will have junior Tom Kenville centering senior Tom Ose and sophomore Tim Bottem; junior Tim Bergland centering senior Jeff Imgrund and sophomore Steve Wiskow; while Rob Blankenfeld centers Jim Dillon and Rick Engelstad, with senior Jeff Moser also seeing action as a wing on that all-senior line.

Rest of the line-up isn't so easy to figure out, Grand indicated this morning (Wednesday). He's undecided who will be his starting goaltender, with senior Paul Wennberg and sophomores Doug Odegaard and Lee Genereux the three possibilities.

The situation on defense was really clouded Saturday when Steve Olson, a senior who is expected to be one of the top defensemen in the area, suffered a shoulder injury in the opening moments of play against East Grand Forks in the Section 8 jamboree. His shoulder popped out and he's been ordered off the ice for 2-to-3 weeks.

That left the Prowlers with one senior on defense — Mark Harder, who missed virtually all of last year with a broken wrist; an inexperienced junior — Jeff Storhaug; and three sophomores — Jim Geatz, Brian Johnston and Gary Cornell. Geatz, though, played regularly last year after harder was sidelined.

To complicate matters, Crookston looked good in beating Moorhead 4-2 during the jamboree in the sports arena. Thief River Falls wasn't as sharp in losing to East Grand Forks 3-1.

"We're not overly ready for a game," admitted Grand, "but we have to be ready by Saturday."

Junior varsity game starts at 5:30 p.m., with the Prowlers and Pirates, who have been bolstered by a cooperative program with Mount St. Benedict this year, taking the ice at 7:30.

FLANKED BY head coach John Hustad and assistant coach Jodi Dallmann, Lincoln high school senior Lisa Desrocher will represent Thief River Falls in the diving portion of the 1981 Minnesota state high school girls swimming and diving championships scheduled to be held Friday and Saturday at the Cooke Hall pool on the University of Minnesota campus in Minneapolis.

Lisa Desrocher To Compete In State Swim Meet This Weekend

Senior Lisa Desrocher will be the lone Thief River Falls entry this weekend in the 1981 Minnesota state high school girls swimming and diving championships at the Cooke Hall pool on the University of Minnesota campus.

Desrocher, who qualified for a spot in the diving portion of the state meet with a fourth place finish in last week's Section 3 competition at Bemidji State University, will be entered in her fourth state meet, having qualified previously as an eighth grader, a freshman and sophomore.

Diving prelims start Friday at 10 a.m. Finals in all events are scheduled Saturday.

"She thinks she has a chance," said Thief River Falls head coach John Hustad as he talked about Desrocher's chances for a medal-winning finish. "Her dives are consistent, and that means a lot."

The key, according to Hustad, will be Desrocher's performance through her first three dives. Judges make their first cuts after three dives, then narrow the field again after five and eight dives to reach the finals.

"If Lisa can make that first cut, she has a chance," pointed out Hustad. "If she makes those first three dives it means she's probably diving pretty well."

Prowlers Open Against Rams

New Lincoln high school basketball coach Tom Hunt will make his debut as Thief River Falls head coach Friday when the Prowlers open their 1981-82 season with an 8 p.m. game at Roseau. Junior varisty game starts at 6:15.

Starting line-up for the opener will probably find 6-2 senior Eric Bondy and 6-2 junior Mark Gere at the forwards, 6-3 junior Randy Naeseth at center and 6-0 senior Kevin Sanders, along with 5-9 junior Steve Kruta at the guards.

Kent Kainz, a 5-10 senior, would likely be the first man off the bench, while 6-0 senior Dave Upham, 6-1 senior Rick Trontvet, 6-1 senior Shaw McCabe and 6-2 senior Kevin Leach are all expected to see playing time.

"We're going go need help off the bench, that's one of our keys this year," mentioned Hunt. "First part of the year we'll play a lot of kids. We have to find out who can play for us, and the only way we can do that is to put them into game conditions."

While a number of players are expected to get into the game, Thief River Falls' success will hinge on a trio of Bondy, Gere and Sanders, three veterans.

"I won't make any bones about it," said Hunt. "Bondy, Gere and Sanders have to have good years for us to be successful."

Thief River Falls will follow its trip to Roseau with a game Tuesday at Grafton before the Prowlers' home opener Thursday, December 17, vs. Moorhead.

Jim Hallmek Is Named 1982 Football Captain

Jim Hallamek was named to succeed Rob Jorstad as captain of the 1982 Lincoln high school football team Monday during the Prowlers' 19th annual post-season banquet in the school cafeteria.

Heading ths list of award winners was senior Mark Harder, who was named recipient of the prestigious most valuable player "Ole Award," named in honor of the late Evonne "Ole" Olson, a long-time Thief River Falls sports fan.

Other special awards went to Hallamek, named winner of the coaches' defensive award; Jim Dillon, who earned the coaches' offensive award; Jorstad, named the team's most dedicated player; and Kevin Leach, selected the team's most improved player.

Athletic letters were presented to seniors Ken Bakke, Jon Bolen, Eric Bondy, Tom Colby, Kent Ellingson, Keith Grochow, John Helms, Steve Hoff, Wade Hruby, Jeff Imgrund, Kent Kainz, Rick Langlie, Jon Ness, Rod Nichols, Dan Odegaard, Steve Olson, Tom Ose, Brent Schmitz, Dave Upham, Paul Waswick, Dillon, Harder, Jorstad and Leach; juniors Brett Brandon, Bob Evans, Jerry Kertz, Jeff Milender, Randy Naeseth, Jeff Ness, Darren Wiskow, Kerry Wollin and Hallamek; sophomores Brian Johnston, Rick Spong and Steve Wiskow; and student managers Brett Poole, Duane Rux and Robert Vanyo.

Don Olson served as toastmaster for the event; Jeff Imgrund gave the invocation; Stan Upham and Dave Upham presented the parent-son response; superintendent of schools Robert Block was the guest speaker; and Jon Ness gave the benediction.

Head coach John Schmitz introduced assistant coaches Charlie Cornell, Tim Olson, Dave Peterson and Ralph Halvorson, presented the special awards and letters and briefly reviewed the 1981 season in which the tough-luck Prowlers lost their first six games and then had to forfeit their final three scheduled starts because of the teachers strike here for an 0-9 record.

"There are several reasons why we were 0-6 (0-9)," reported Schmitz. "Number one, we had some problems at the start of the year trying to find a set line-up; Number 2, the coaches did a good job adjusting the defense to the personnel we had, but our offense wasn't adjusted to our personnel. We needed a little something to get us going."

But even in a winless campaign, the Prowlers earned the respect of opponents and their own coaches.

"These young men performed very well," explained Schmitz. "They never gave up."

NEWLY NAMED Lincoln high school football team captain Jim Hallamek posed with Thief River Falls head coach John Schmitz Monday during the Prowlers' 19th annual post-season banquet in the school cafeteria. Hallamek succeeds Rob Jorstad as team captain.

Northwomen Will Open With NCC Tournament

Season-opening competition for the Northland community college women's basketball team will be in a four-team holiday invitational tournament hosted by the Northwomen this weekend.

First round games will be played Friday with Northland paired against Hibbing at 6 p.m. and the Grand Forks Air Force Base matched against the Northland Alumni at 8 o'clock. Saturday's schedule will feature the consolation game at 12 noon and the championship game at 2 p.m.

A Northwest Division champion in volleyball this fall, Northland may be hard-pressed to match that success in basketball with just an eight-member squad.

"We're a little short on numbers," admitted Northland coach Deb Jacobson, "and that may hurt us, especially if we have any injuries. We do have some pretty good players, though."

One of the top players would be newcomer Diane Fisher, a sophomore transfer student from Moorhead State University. A member of the 1,000-point club in high school at Plummer, Fisher will "definitely be an asset," acknowled Jacobson.

However, Fisher's basketball time was cut short by a knee injury last year with the Dragons that required surgery. She still isn't at full strength, and her availability depends on the acquisition of a knee brace. Her status at this point is questionable, admitted Jacobson.

Vicki Troska, Goodridge; Sue Maslowski, Cloquet; and Stacey Sinn, Thief River Falls are returning sophomores from a year ago. Freshman additions include Deb Koskela, Plummer; Shelly Taggart, Greenbush; Donna Stewart, Lancaster; and Joyce Storeby, Strandquist.

"It's frustrating that we don't have more numbers, especially since there are girls in school who are capable of playing," reported Jacobson.

Without Fisher, the scoring load would probably fall on Taggart inside and Maslowski outside. Taggart and Koskela provide Northland with some height and are expected to be strong rebounders.

NAMED RECIPIENT OF the 1981 most valuable player "Ole Award" at the Lincoln high school football banquet Monday was senior Mark Harder. The award, named in honor of Evonne "Ole" Olson, one of the orginators of the banquet, was presented by members of the Olson family, including Betty, Terry and young Jeremy.

Flyers Build Early Lead In 43-34 Win Over TRF

A terrible first half ruined the 1981-82 season opener for the Lincoln high school girls basketball team Tuesday as the Prowlers dropped a 43-34 home court decision to Fisher.

The Prowlers accomplished little through the first 16 minutes in falling behind 29-9 at intermission. They showed little movement on offense and made just three of 23 field goal attempts — many way off target — and turned the ball over 13 times. The defense was equally to blame, standing flat-footed as the Flyers penetrated the zone for a 14-for-29 shooting exhibition.

Thief River Falls managed to save face after intermission as the Fisher lead slowly dwindled. It was still 35-20 at the end of the third quarter, but it shrank to 42-34 on a string of six straight Thief River Falls points in the final 1:24.

Mary Kraft, a 5-7 senior forward, led the Flyers with 15 points, 12 of them coming in the first half when she was left unguarded on the side. Lisa Christianson, a 5-8 junior center, added 12 points. Most of the Thief River Falls points came from 6-0 senior center Tara Nicholson and 5-11 senior forward LeAnn Paetznick with 12 and 10 points, respectively.

Thief River Falls finished 11-for-48 from the field (23 per cent) and 12-for-20 from the free throw line (60 per cent). Fisher was 20-for-54 shooting (37 per cent) and a not-as-busy 3-for-7 at the line (43 per cent). The Prowlers, after being out-rebounded badly at the start, did manage to finish with a 29-28 edge on the board, but topped the turnover charts 27-25 in the sloppily-played game.

The Prowlers play Tri-County Saturday at 8 p.m. in Karlstad to being a string of six straight road games. They won't play at home again until a Jan. 14 game vs. Crookston.

CONFRONTING FISHER guard Laurie Yanish, Thief River Falls defender Lisa Glass tried to cut off a fast break basket Tuesday in the first half of the Prowlers' season opening basketball game in the Lincoln high school gym. The Flyers rolled up a 29-9 halftime lead en route to a 43-34 victory.

Plummer To Open Against Argyle Girls

A .500 season is the goal for the 1981-82 Plummer high school girls basketball team, but coach Rick Kovisto admits that might be a tough plateau for the Cardinals to reach.

Plummer opens its season Thursday by hosting Argyle, a rematch of a jamboree sessions last week in which the Eagles blitzed the Cardinals 40-22.

Five performers returning from last year's ball club will be the likely starters for Plummer Thursday, including senior Charlene Tvedt, junior Bonnie Fisher, sophomore Sheila Sorenson, sophomore Helen Jaeger and freshman Jody Pahlen.

Plummer won six games last year, and Kovisto says, "I sure hope to win more than six games this season."

Nordics Expect To Field Strong Basketball Team

Marshall County Central high school basketball team has a wealth of experience, a good supply of talent and high expectations heading into the 1981-82 season. What the Nordics need, according to head coach Ron Ueland is time to develop into the top-notch team they're expected to be.

"We've got good players," confirmed Ueland. "If things go well for us, we should be able to beat anybody."

However, things haven't fallen into place yet, he warns. "We're not a good team yet; we hope to be by March. We're not playing very well without the ball right now. The player with the ball looks good, but the other four just end up standing around. We have to work on playing without the ball, and our defense needs some work."

Marshall County Central is scheduled to open the season Tuesday at Badger, a team that beat the Nordics 28-26 in a jamboree session at Roseau Monday. "It wasn't a very satisfactory outing," noted Ueland.

Headlining the 1981-82 Nordics will be Jeff Dahl, Rick VanCamp and Dave Kragness. Dahl, a 6-2 senior who averaged 14.6 points and 10.6 rebounds per game, and VanCamp, a 5-11 senior who averaged 11.7 points per game from the backcourt, were all-conference picks in the North Border Conference last winter, while Kragness, a 6-1 senior, averaged 10.1 points and earned all-conference honorable mention honors.

Other seniors counted on to help the Nordics this season are 6-3 Mark Knutson, an occasional starter last year who is strong on the boards, Troy Broderson, Troy Swanson and Bill Castle. Larry Larson, Scott Anderson and Ted Thompson all played as sophomores last winter and can be expected to see court time again this season as Ueland continues to substitute freely.

Marshall County Central was plagued by poor shooting percentages last year, and the Nordics have yet to overcome those problems in early 1981-82 drills, mentioned Ueland. "Our shot selection has been poor, but I know that will improve."

Despite all of the Marshall County Central pluses, Ueland still maintains that defending North Border Conference champion Middle River will be the team to beat again this winter, with Warroad and Badger also presenting North Border challenges.

Saturday Opener . . .

Northmen To Play Alumni Ball Club

Northland community college basketball team will stage its traditional season opener Saturday when the Northmen host an alumni squad at 7:30 p.m. in the Northland gym.

Coach Chet Engelman said his starting line-up will probably include sophomore Kyle Hams, Thief River Falls; along with freshmen Matt Fontz, Canton, Ohio; Derek Stokes, Canton, Ohio; Mark Simon, Post Falls, Idaho; and Duncan Gregory, East Chicago, Ind.

A recent addition to the Northland squad who is expected to play Saturday is Scott McKeever, a prolific high school scorer at Middle River who has transferred from Fergus Falls community college.

Among the Northland alumni expected to be on hand are Chris Kneen, Keith Charbonneau, Doug Engelman, Jerry Hooten, Jay Forney, Kent Hanson, Tony Burke and Willie Bayne.

Jon Neumann Leads Middle River . . .

Skippers Center Game Around Top Performer

Featuring one of the top players in the area, Middle River, despite graduation losses that took four starters, still figures to be in the thick of the 1981-82 North Border Conference high school basketball race.

Reason for the optimism is the presence of Jon Neumann, a 6-4 senior center-forward who averaged 16.7 points and 10.3 rebounds per game last year. He was an all-conference selection as both as sophomore and junior and has college potential.

"Jon is the best inside ball player I've ever had," said Middle River coach Eldon Sparby. "He's a good shooter, he's strong, he's smooth, he handles the ball well. He's going to be a player everybody will have to try to stop this year."

An opposing coach, Ron Ueland at Marshall County Central agrees. "Neumann has got to be the best player in (Class) A or AA in northwestern Minnesota this year," said Ueland. "In my 15 years of coaching, the three best players I've seen around here have been John Koller (Lake of the Woods), Scott McKeever (Middle River) and Jon Neumann — he ranks right up there with the other two."

The trick, says Sparby, is to figure out a way to get the ball into his big man, and come up with a supporting cast so opponents cannot simply sag around Neumann.

Several players were top-line reservers on last year's unbeaten conference championship team that went on to win the District 32 title, including 6-0 Mike Peterson, a good all-around athlete, and 5-10 Doug Kilen at the guards, with 6-1 Ryan Johnson, 6-0 Steve Bengtson and 6-1 Brad Berg all battling for a front line spot.

"Nobody is going to push us around," says Sparby in reference to his football-size forward wall.

Sparby puts the finger on Marshall County Central this year, with Badger, Warroad and Middle River top challengers. "Newfolden has got the most talent, but I don't think anybody in our league will go undefeated like we did last year," he said. "I think it's going to be very competitive, very balanced."

The Slippers begin their 1981-82 season Tuesday at Grygla.

Cards Expect To Improve Mat Mark

Erskine-Plummer cooperative high school wrestling team, coached by Gary Brantl, figures to be greatly improved this year, with a large turnout supplying the Cardinals with optimism going into the 1981-82 season.

With 24 wrestlers on hand, and the possibility of a few more yet to report, Brantl says, "We finally have the depth we need. We've got some individuals who, once they get into shape and get down to weight, can do all right at the end of the year."

Expected to be the leaders are Paul Lindseth at 185 pounds, Mick Brekke at 155 and Troy Gustafson at 145, with 132-pounder Mike LaBlanc also showing promise.

"I think we'll finally get off that two-or three win plateau this year," predicted Brantl.

The Cardinals opened their schedule Tuesday, losing a 38-27 decision to Warren-Alvarado. They'll face Oklee Thursday at Erksine.

MCC Girls Win Opener 85-26

Marshall County Central high school girls basketball team began the 1981-82 season in impressive fashion Monday as five Nordics hit double figures in an 85-26 home court rout of Roseau.

Winning coach Tom Mjelde was impressed. "It was probably the best I've ever seen an MCC team play," he said. "I think we'll be all right this year. Time will tell."

Jill Johnson paced the high-powered Nordics in their opener with a 29-point, 11-rebound game. Sue Olson added 19 points, Julie Gustafson 12, Dorene Larson 10 and Brenda Dahl 10.

Marshall County Central opened up a 50-6 halftime lead. The winners were 34-for-77 from the field (44 per cent) and 17-for-24 at the free throw line (70 per cent), while Roseau was 9-for-44 from the floor (20 per cent) and 8-for-24 from the line (33 per cent). The Nordics held a 32-24 rebound edge.

"We lack height," admitted Mjelde, "but we have the quickness and really good defense. We've got six or seven girls who can score in double figures."

The Nordics, who open the 1981-82 season with five straight home games, host Strandquist Thursday.

Eagles Rally, Defeat Bears

Grygla-Gatzke overcame a sluggish start with a strong second half of basketball Tuesday for a season-opening 50-48 victory over Hallock.

The Bears led 26-19 at halftime, but the Eagles outscored the visitors 23-7 in the third quarter to take command.

"We were rusty in the first half," acknowledged Grygla-Gatzke coach Bill Raduenz, "but we came out in the thrid quarter and really played some good basketball."

Four scorers reached double figures in the winner's balanced attack as Sheri Anderson hit 12 points while Kim McLean, Tammy Sistad and Jean Verbout all had 10. But Raduenz was most pleased with the play of juniors Denise Wikert and Becky Klein, who came off the bench and played well as the starters ran into foul trouble.

The Eagles were 19-for-66 from the field (29 per cent) and 12-for-29 from the free throw line (41 per cent). The Bears were 18-for-52 from the field (35 per cent) and 12-for-27 from the line (44 per cent).

Anderson, McLean and Verbout are returning starters from a year ago, giving Raduenz a good nucleus to work with, but McLean at 5-7 is the tallest of a very small group of Eagles.

"We're trying to play better defense (press) this year because we're so short," reported Raduenz.

Grygla-Gatzke plays at Roseau Thursday and visits Badger Monday.

Goodridge To Host Oklee

Graduation took ten players from the Goodridge high school basketball team, leaving the Huskies with just two lettermen entering the 1981-82 season, which starts Friday at home against Oklee.

"We're really young, and we're small," reported Goodridge coach Rick Nelson, "but it's an enthusiastic group. We're looking forward to the season."

Set for starting jobs Friday are seniors Mike Drangstveit and Don Wayne, along with junior Darrin Easthouse. — Drangstveit and Easthouse are lettermen. Two other sports are up for grabs, said Nelson, among senior Ken Frazer and sophomores Jeff Langan, Tony Wiseth and Tom Bakken.

Goodridge lost by a 17-15 count to Oslo in District 31 jamboree play at Warren to kick off the season.

"We've got some good quickness and we can play some good defense," pointed out Nelson. "We're going to have to get the ball down the floor in a hurry, and we're going to play tough defense — we're going to make the opponents play 94 feet of basketball."

Middle River Beaten 27-24 In First Game

A youthful Middle River high school girls basketball team struggled through first game jitters Tuesday in losing a 27-24 game to Strandquist.

Missing eight players from a strong 1980-81 team, the Skippers begin the 1981-82 season without a senior. Tuesday's season opener marked the varsity debut of nearly every player.

"They were really tight," pointed out Middle River coach Tom Neibauer. "They'd never played varsity ball before."

Strandquist built an 8-2 first quarter edge and held that lead the rest of the way in the low-scoring affair at Middle River.

"We're starting over this year," admitted Neibauer, whose line-up is centered around junior Kari Skoglund and sophomores Jody Christofferson, Bonda Peterson, Paula Rantanen, Tammy Sorter and Diane Black.

Middle River visits Warroad Thursday.

Farm Prices Continue On Slide Down

Mid-October index of prices received by Minnesota farmers decreased four per cent from September and 10 per cent from a year ago, according to the Minnesota agricultural statistics service. The decrease in the farm index from both last month and last year was partially offset by rising prices for oats, dry edible beans, all hay, calves, milk and eggs.

Prices for all other commodities were lower, except lambs which were the same as last month but below a year earlier. Slaughter cows were the lowest since November 1978, beef cattle were the lowest since December 1978; sheep since August 1977; and wool prices were the lowest since December 1976.

The crops index decreased four per cent to 123 during the month. This was 14 per cent below the index a year earlier. The mid-October prices and the changes from last month are: All Wheat, $3.78 per bushel, down one cent from the revised September estimate; corn, $2.29, down 12 cents; oats, $1.75 up four cents; barley, $2.32, down seven cents; soybeans, $5.85, down 25 cents; flaxseed, $6.37, down three cents; potatoes averaged $4.60 per hundredweight for all grades, down $2.80.

All hay was up $2 per ton to $76, alfalfa hay at $80 was up $2 and other hay at $58 was up $8. All sunflowers at $10.10 per hundredweight were down 60 cents from the revised September price. Dry edible beans were up $2.90 to $24.80 per hundredweight.

The meat animal index at 137 was eight per cent below last month and nine per cent below a year ago. All hogs at $43.60 per hundredweight were down $5.30 from a month earlier. Beef cattle averaged $50.40, down $3.40. Calves were up $4.60 to $73.50. Sheep brought $14.20, down $1.10. Lambs were unchanged from last month at $52.40.

The dairy index increased two per cent during the month to 151. This was one per cent above the index last year. the preliminary milk price at $13.30 per hundredweight was up 26 cents from the revised September price.

The poultry and egg index at 104 was 10 per cent below last month and 18 per cent below a year ago. Turkeys were 31 cents per pound liveweight, down seven cents from a month earlier. Eggs brought 54 cents per dozen for all grades in mid-October, up one and one-half cents from mid-September and seven and one-half cents above a year earlier.

Embargo Provision Is Passed

Agriculture will not be the sole target of foreign policy trade embargoes, according to a provision of the 1981 Farm Bill agreed to by House-Senate conferees.

The "Embargo Protection" provision of the Farm Bill, authored by Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, discourages the use of selective embargoes, such as the recent Soviet grain embargo.

"Each one of the last three Presidents imposed an embargo that focused on agriculture," Boschwitz said. "In each instance, the objective of the embargo was not achieved, such as with the Soviets in Afghanistan. And in each instance, the embargo had a terrible impact on ag markets."

"Not only are selective embargoes unfair, they don't accomplish their purpose."

Boschwitz fashioned his provision in early April, when the Senate Agriculture committee first considered the 1981 Farm Bill. It passed the committee easily, then passed the entire Senate without amendment. The House of Representatives passed its own version, but House conferees agreed to the Boschwitz version by a bipartisan 10-3 vote.

Reagan Administration recently declared its support for the Boschwitz provision.

If the president wants to impose a selective embargo on agriculture, this provision would make it expensive. The U.S. government would have to compensate farmers in one of two ways.

First, a direct (deficiency) payment program would pay the difference between market price and 100 per cent of parity. For example, the present price for wheat at 100 per cent of parity is $7.90 per bushel. Current market price is less than $4 per bushel. So, in the event of an embargo, the U.S. Treasury would pay farmers nearly $4 per bushel.

A second option is a loan program which raises loan rates to the level of full parity and can be implemented at the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Sole exception of the provision, according to Boschwitz, is a selective embargo aimed at a country that in the previous year accounted for less than 3 per cent of our total exports of a good.

Boschwitz, also a member of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, stressed such provisions would not provide a serious strain to the president in his conduct of foreign policy.

"If an embargo is to be implemented, this will give it some teeth, as it will be across the board," Boschwitz said.

WOODCUTTING BEE was evident recently at the Dake Ayers home, Rural route 1, Thief River Falls, as several neighborhood men, women and children gathered to put up winter firewood for the family of Dake Ayers. Ayers died unexpectedly this past August. Conservation Program Out For Review

The U.S. department of agriculture (USDA) is asking Minnesotans to comment on a preferred soil and water conservation program that secretary John Block announced October 28.

"The preferred conservation program has some substantial changes from the present program," said Harry Major, Minnesota state conservationist for USDA's soil conservation service. "The top national soil and water conservation priorities would be reduction of soil erosion and reduction of flood damage in upstream areas so, if this program is adopted by the administration and Congress, USDA financial and technical assistance would be directed to critical erosion and flood prone areas of Minnesota and other states."

Critical areas and program priorities would be developed by local and state conservation coordinating boards. Staffing for these boards would come from existing organizations — soil and water conservation district boards, agricultural stabilization and conservation (ASC) committees, extension advisory boards, and other groups.

Under the preferred program, funding for conservation would be available to states through USDA matching blocks grants. Current federal conservation program funds would be reduced in order to make such grants available.

Preferred program is the culmination of an extensive appraisal of the nation's soil and water conditions, mandated by the soil and water resources conservation act (RCA) of 1977. RCA requires USDA to "appraise continuously" the nation's soil and water conditions, and establish policy and programs.

Programs is explained in a RCA program report available for review in local soil conservation service & agricultural stabilization and conservation service offices. A summary leaflet which contains a form for responding to proposals is also available from these offices.

Responses will be accepted from the public until January 15. Responses will be summarized by the soil conservation service and a report prepared for the secretary of agriculture. Findings will be used to shape the soil and water conservation program that the secretary recommends to the President and Congress.

Public Notices

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Thief River Falls water utility announced today that the State maximum allowable limit for turbidity in drinking water is being exceeded.

Turbidity is caused by the presence of finely suspended particles such as clay, sand or organic matter in the water. Turbidity can be a problem if it interferes with chlorine disinfection. However, the high turbidity levels, do not create any health hazard because the water utility is able to maintain effective levels of chlorine for disinfection.

The Thief River Falls water utility staff is working closely with State Health Department officials to reduce the turbidity to acceptable levels.

Any citizen seeking addition information should contact Allen Lamm at the Water Plant, phone number 681-3809.

STUFFED SQUASH MAKES ECONOMICAL, HEARTY MAIN DISH

Corn and squash, staples in the diets of the early Americans, are still popular American foods today. The two vegetables combine with ham and seasonings in Hearty Stuffed Squash to make a nutritious, economical dish for the whole family.

HEARTY STUFFED SQUASH

2	medium acorn squash, halved and seeds removed
1	cup water
1/4	cup chopped onion
2	tablespoons margarine or butter
1 1/2	cups crushed herb-seasoned stuffing
2	cups cubed, cooked ham
12-oz.	can Green Giant Niblets Golden Whole Kernel Corn, drained
	Dash pepper
1	chicken bouillon cube
1/4	cup boiling water

Heat oven to 400°F. Place squash, cut-side-down, in 13x9-inch pan with 1 cup water. Bake at 400°F. for 40 to 45 minutes or until tender. With spoon, scoop cooked squash from shells to within 1/4-inch of sides. In medium bowl, mash squash. Reserve shells in warm oven.

In large skillet, saute onion in margarine. Stir in stuffing; mix well. Remove 1/2 cup; set aside. Stir cooked squash, ham, corn and pepper into remaining stuffing mixture. In small bowl, dissolve bouillon cube in water. Stir into squash mixture. Cook over low heat, stirring occasionally, until thoroughly heated. Fill reserved shells with mixture. Top with reserved stuffing. Place under broiler for 1 to 2 minutes or until lightly browned. 4 servings.

ROD SURVIVAL

Angling experts agree that more fishing rods are broken in car doors and trunk lids than on big fish. And chances are good that the number of rods smashed this way will increase as Americans shift from large, roomy automobiles to smaller, more fuel efficient vehicles.

Until recently, rods could be protected easily by placing them in large rod cases, or storing them overhead in vehicles where there was ample room. But as the size of our autos decreases, storage space is lessened, and therein lies a potential problem. Here are some ideas from Mercury outboards' fishing department about protecting your fishing rods when transporting them.

One-piece, six-foot-long rods aren't going to fit very handily into a sub-compact car. One solution is to have only breakdown rods. The reduced length, when the rod is dismantled, will fit inside the trunk, and a telescoping rod-carrying case will provide protection.

If you really want to save on space, consider the four and five-piece "pack" rods popular with hikers. They average about 15 inches in length when broken down, and have their own carrying case.

Many fishermen don't like multi-piece rods. If you prefer longer rods, and trailer a boat behind a small car, the problem can be solved by mounting rod holders inside the hull, or by placing rods in a heavy-duty carrying case and leaving it inside the boat. If you don't trailer a boat, and still want to transport one-piece rods, the only solution is to put them into a carrying case which is then mounted on a car-top carrier, or on a trunk rack such as that used by winter skiers.

Eagles Host Warriors In Friday Opener

Grygla-Gatzke opens its 1981-82 high school basketball season Friday when the Eagles host Strandquist.

Second-year head coach Vern Johnson has three full or part-time starters back from last year's very competitive 9-11 ball club, but graduation took six seniors — one of the heaviest graduation losses among the seven North Border Conference schools.

"We're an unknown quality," described Johnson. "We've got a lot of young kids. Quickness we do have — that will be our strong point."

Three players back from last winter are 6-1 senior Merlin Klamar, 6-1 junior Mike Brateng and 5-11 senior John Verbout. They'll form the backbone of the club, with Johnson also expecting 5-11 Rodney Hagen, who played junior varsity ball last year, to perform well after he's fully recovered from an ankle injury.

A year ago the Eagles, by Johnson's own admission, were the worst shooting team in the North Border Conference. Hopefully the percentage will pick up this year, he said.

Oklee Wrestlers Start Schedule On Thursday

Quality, but not quantity best describes the 1981-82 Oklee high school wrestling team, reports coach Charles Bishop.

"Team-wise, it going to be awfully tough for us," admitted Bishop. "We're just looking for some good competition for the kids we do have."

The Bobcats open the season Thursday against Erskine-Plummer, a 7:30 p.m. match at Erskine.

Three Oklee wrestlers with plenty of experience and a great deal of potential include 132-pound junior John Cyr, who already owns some 70 varsity wins and has reached the Class A state tournament three times; 112-pound sophomore Darrin Tougas, who began his varsity career as an eighth grader; and 119-pound senior Don Tougas, a Region 8A tournament qualifier last year.

Bishop also expects big things from 98-pound sophomore Gary Parenteau and 185-pound senior Rick Dulka.

Huskies Rely On Skills Of Mary Jo Kiesow

Mary Jo Kiesow, one of the top scorers and rebounders in the conference, will be the central figure in the 1981-82 Goodridge girls high school basketball team, but first-year head coach Georgine Troska must first figure a way to get the ball to her top performer.

"We're basically a young team," noted Troska, with Kiesow and Susie Johnson the only seniors on the squad, and Johnson is slowed by back problems.

Junior Jacki Dahlen, sophomores Diane Troska and Dawn Anderson, along with freshman Sheri Vettleson, are expected to join Kiesow and Johnson as the Huskies' top players this winter.

Goodridge opens its schedule Thursday by hosting Fisher.

Farm Bill Aired By Farmers Union

President Reagan's veto of a continuing appropriations resolution recently that technically put the federal government out of business sets an ominous precedent for the 1981 Farm Bill, a National Farmers Union (NFU) spokesman said.

NFU Legislative director Robert Mullins told delegates, members and guests at the 40th annual Minnesota Farmers Union (MFU) convention banquet that he is "very fearful to the precedent this (veto) sets for future appropriations bills and for the 1981 Farm Bill." He noted that the Farm Bill is currently running $6 million over the president's budget guidelines, "drop in the federal bucket."

A conference committee working to complete the 1981 Farm Bill has suspended action probably until December 10 or 11, Mullins pointed out, and Congress is scheduled to adjourn December 18.

"By not completing an acceptable, strong farm bill, Congress is totally absolutely and irrevocably negligent in its responsibility to farmers. This is the worst farm program since 1932," Mullins said.

If the committee does not complete the bill before adjournment, Mullins said there are two possibilities.

"The first possibility is very remote and not very viable," Mullins said. "And that would be a return to the Agricultural Act of 1949. I think all of us in this room tonight agree that we'd be a lot better off under that act than we are today."

"The second possibility, and there is a lot of talk of this in Washington now, is simply an extension of the current 1977 bill, possibly for one year," he said.

He said that while the president recently admitted that the nation is in a recession, with the economic climate of the countryside "I can report to the president that agriculture is not in a recession. Agriculture is in a deep, deep recession.

"Do we have to wait until the consumers in this country have to wait in line to buy milk and bread?

"What do we have to do to awaken this president, our friends in the consumer movement, and most of all our farm state legislators?" Mullins asked.

Citing USDA figures, Mullins said that 1982 is expected to be worse financially for farmers than 1981. Net farm income in the coming year is expected to be $17 billion — down $2 billion from the previous year.

"Current economic policy is fiscally irresponsible and morally bankrupt," Mullins said. "With our new tax bill, we have seen the greatest shift of wealth ever in the history of mankind. This shift has been from the meager possessions of the poor and the moderate income to the filthy rich, and even David Stockman agrees with me now."

Mullins listed two reasons for the national economy and its projected deficit:

First, he explained, we have seen the "most ill-advised" tax cut in history.

And second, there has been the greatest budget increase in non-productive spending in history. Budget spending has not been increased where it counts — in houses and jobs, Mullins charged, but in defense instead.

This fact can be demonstrated by the president's orders to shut down the federal government following his veto, Mullins said.

"Today when the government was preparing to shut down, the first two programs to receive orders were food stamps and nutrition programs. They were the first to feel the ax," Mullins said. He charged that these are some of the very programs that should have been kept alive.

"The answer (to these economic problems) is almost too simple for Congress to accept," he said. "First, we must put America back to work. And then we must follow this with a series of economic moves: to bring down interest rates, to allocate credit for productive uses; and have a more equitable taxation system."

"The greatest thing we could do to assure peace and prosperity would be to put the farmer back to work in the field," Mullins said.

CRAFTY IDEAS

"Swatch" new in craft materials? A special felt, that's what.

With a scissors, a needle and thread or glue and this new fabric, "yule" turn out happy Santas and snazzy snowflakes, flowers and wreaths, and whatever else tickles your holiday fancy.

This unique material is 100 percent polyester. It drapes as beautifully as velvet, is machine washable and yet is considerably less expensive than traditional felts.

S. H. Kunin Felt Co., Inc., of Worcester, Mass., the sole distributor of Polyfelt, made with Dacron polyester from Du Pont, is featuring a do-it-yourself stocking kit this year that includes assorted pieces of felt in traditional Christmas colors—red, white and green. But you can buy this remarkable material in at least 20 different shades.

What's more, you don't have to confine your craftiness to Christmas. With a little imagination, you can turn out felt fantasies for other holidays, birthday parties and all kinds of special events. It's great for wall hangings in children's rooms.

Here are a few ideas to consider: artificial flowers, colorful coasters, comic book characters and all sorts of animals, birds and fish to add sparkle to bedspreads, curtains and draperies.

If you've felt that Christmas and other holiday decorations had to be traditionally bought ready-made at your store, you're wrong. Instead, felt and your fancies can give your home the feel and look of originality all year long.

'U'M Studying Problems With Budget Closely

Despite budget increases over the past decade, University of Minnesota (U.M.) now has less money to spend on educating each student than it did in 1972, the board of regents was told Friday.

Inflation has taken a toll, said Kenneth Keller, vice president for academic affairs, but another key factor has been wholesale shift of students away from low-cost programs to more specialized and expensive fields of study. The result had been an 8.4 per cent decrease over the past nine years in dollars available to teach full-time students.

"Ten years ago, a very large number of our students were registered in undergraduate liberal education, relatively low-cost programs," Keller said. "Today, there has been an enormous shift to upper division, specialized, graduate, professional and technical education."

While state appropriation to the university has increased, much has gone to pay for such things as fuel and utilities, costs that have risen 112 per cent over the nine-year period, leaving less money to pay for education.

"We're being asked to do significantly more with less. That's why we're stretched so far, and that's why I believe it's an exaggeration to say the university has fared well in the past nine years," he said.

Keller's remarks were part of a general discussion of budget problems facing the university and other systems of higher education.

U.M. is faced with an immediate threat by the $750 million hole in the state's budget, but longer-term and more widespread funding problems on both state and federal levels pose a more diffuse threat.

U.M. President C. Peter Magrath said, "Education is a long-term investment that can't be readily put back together once it's taken apart. The nation's universities are in deep trouble. The Chinese had a cultural revolution and they paid, and are paying a terrible price," he said. "We're in danger of having a silent cultural revolution."

Keller described a method to be used during the next two years to plan for U.M.'s future, set priorities, and determine value of and need for specific programs.

Plan assumes that, while programs will need to change, changes will have to be made without extra money, and in some cases with less money.

Decisions to cut some programs and beef up others will be based on several criteria, Keller said. Programs will be judged on quality as well as extent to which they are connected to other programs. Those that involve teaching, research and service (the three-part mission of the university) will be retained. Those that are unique will be kept if further study shows they fit within the university's mission and could not be offered elsewhere. Finally, demand for a program will also be used to determine priority.

"We are not thinking of operating with a hatchet," Keller said. "We are thinking of small variations."

He noted although this long-range planning process may result in some program cuts, university has no plans to lay off tenured faculty people. Whenever possible, tenured faculty members from phased-out programs would be shifted to other units, encouraged to retire early, or make other arrangements.

First phase of the process is nearly complete, and by March regents will see a package of budget planning principles for the next biennium, Keller said.

Says Insanity Plea Not Easy Crime Defense

Pleading insanity is not an easy way out of serving prison time for a criminal act, according to state public defender C. Paul Jones. Jones testified at a November 18 meeting of the House criminal justice committee, against two bills that would eliminate the defense of mental illness in a court of law.

Jones says there already are enough safeguards under current law to prevent someone from using the defense of mental illness as a "ticket to freedom". He says attorneys don't often use the defense, which is difficult to prove, and they don't often win such cases.

Once the court commits someone to an institution after a not guilty by reason of insanity verdict, it's not easy to get out, says Jones. A civil commitment to a state institution is indefinite, and Jones maintains release is not possible before review and examination.

Carol Grant, attorney for Meshbesher, Singer and Spence, also encouraged lawmakers to keep the mental illness defense on the books. "To punish solely on the basis of commission of an act is inconsistent with the rest of the justice system. We don't punish involuntary acts one commits during an epileptic seizure or in self-defense. The truly insane don't have a choice over their actions either."

A month ago, the committee heard from supporters of the bills. They argued that there's abuse of the insanity plea, that it's becoming increasingly popular, those using the insanity plea may get away with serving shorter terms in an institution than in a prison, and the law doesn't hold them responsible for their actions.

Legislation will be before the committee again in the upcoming 1982 session.

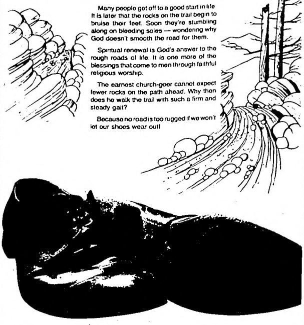
WORN OUT SHOES



Many people get off to a good start in life. It is later that the rocks on the trail begin to bruise their feet. Soon they're stumbling along on bleeding soles — wondering why God doesn't smooth the road for them.

Spiritual renewal is God's answer to the rough roads of life. It is one more of the blessings that come to men through faithful religious worship.

The earnest church-goer cannot expect fewer rocks on the path ahead. Why then does he walk the trail with such a firm and steady gait?

Because no road is too rugged if we won't let our shoes wear out!

BUILD FOR RETIREMENT WITH 12%* TAX-DEFERRED INTEREST EARNINGS!

Here's a solution for the concern all of us have about inflation diluting a financially secure retirement.

It's Lutheran Brotherhood's new Single Premium Deferred Annuity, and it offers a big advantage over many other investments. The advantage is that you pay no taxes on the healthy 12%* earnings until much later — until retirement, when your tax obligation will probably be much lower than it is now. The income can also be spread out over all your retirement years, further reducing the tax.

Lutheran Brotherhood's Single Premium Deferred Annuity. With guaranteed, safe income for all your retirement years, it's a plan no Lutheran can afford to overlook.

* Effective Dec. 1, 1981. The interest rate you will earn will be determined as of the effective date of your annuity, and will be guaranteed for a full year. Future interest rates may change. Minimum purchase $5,000.

Be Selective In Safe Toy Choice

Of all toys purchased annually, more than one-half are bought during the holiday season. At this peak in the buying year an awareness of toy safety should be a primary consideration in selecting toys that are fun — and safe. Even though many hazardous toys have been banned and toys are regulated by the Consumer product safety commission, constant vigilance is still necessary on part of the consumer.

Minnesota public interest research group (MPIRG), long a staunch supporter of safe toy legislation and regulation, offers the following guidelines for safe toy buying:

—Choose a toy appropriate for the child's age and development. Buying toys clearly marked for an older child can pose special problems and definitely increases the need for parental supervision. Some imported toys do not carry labeling of appropriate ages in English.

—Remember that younger brothers and sisters may have access to toys designed for older children.

—Check fabric labels for "nonflammable," "flame-retardant," or "flame-resistant" notices.

—Look for sharp glass and metal edges and sharp points. (Regulated in toys for children under 8 years of age.)

—Avoid toys that produce excessive noise. (Even a toy cap pistol fired too close to a child's ear can cause damage. Warnings are required on boxes of caps that produce noise above a certain level.)

—Avoid shooting games that do not have soft cork tips, rubber suction cups or other protective tips which are securely fastened.

—Check for small parts which may lodge in the windpipe, ears or nostrils of a child. (Regulated in toys for children under 3 years of age.)

—Avoid long strings and cords as they may entangle an infant or young child and cause a strangulation hazard.

—Carefully check the construction of the toy to be sure it is not made of glass or brittle plastic that may break easily into small parts or leave jagged edges. Discard any plastic material used in packaging.

—Check for parts which can pinch fingers or catch hair.

—Exercise care when buying electric toys. Avoid flimsy wiring and poor construction, and look for warning labels.

—Beware of toys that contain poisonous or toxic elements or have an exposed flame.

—Check instructions. They should be easy to read and understand. Instruct the child in the proper use of any toy that might cause injury through misuse.

Consumer product safety commission (CPSC) is the federal government's agency charged with the responsibility of establishing, enforcing, and monitoring product safety regulations. Even though that enforcement appears to be quite effective and there is generally a high level of competence by the toy manufacturers, consumers must remain alert, concerned, and informed. MPIRG and representatives of the CPSC encourage consumers to contact the product safety agency regarding any product safety information. Many free materials are available to the public upon request.

If a toy looks unsafe or if a consumer has a "near miss," contact the CPSC at their Twin cities district office, 612-725-7781, or their toll-free hotline 800-638-8326. They would rather test a potentially hazardous toy before an injury or death occurs. If a toy is involved in a product-related accident, call them immediately.

Today there is a greater awareness of toy safety among consumers and manufacturers than there was ten years ago. This awareness has produced safer, higher quality playthings for children. However, consumers cannot assume that retail shelves are totally free of unsafe toys — constant attention to safety features is advised. The public cannot test toys by dropping them or taking them apart in a retail store. Often, plastic covered packages and glued or stapled boxes prevent even the most cursory examination. Consumers who have doubts about a packaged toy should ask their retailer to open it for them to examine.

MPIRG is a student funded and student governed, nonprofit organization. MPIRG's lawyers, researchers, and student interns work on social change issues relating to consumer protection, energy and the environment.

Because of past consumer interest and activism, there is now regulation of the toy industry and enforcement of toy safety standards. To maintain a high degree of effectiveness, continued responsible and responsive consumer behavior is imperative.

CORDIAL PIE GREETS HOLIDAYS

As you anticipate holidays, count on simplified make-ahead desserts to see you through easy entertaining. Conversation most often lingers over a great dessert — Fluffy Orange Almond Pie, for example. This make-ahead-and-chill pie owes its light and fluffy texture to whipped topping mix — the dry mix that comes in envelopes. All you need is one mixing bowl to blend the whipped topping mix as directed; then, beat in additional milk, vanilla flavor instant pudding and pie filling and orange liqueur. Chopped toasted almonds are folded into the mixture before all is chilled for about four hours. Garnish of quartered orange slices is a clue to the flavor of the luscious pie.

FLUFFY ORANGE ALMOND PIE

2 envelopes Dream Whip whipped topping mix
2-1/2 cups cold milk
2 packages (4-serving size) Jell-O vanilla flavor instant pudding and pie filling
1/4 cup orange liqueur
1/2 cup chopped toasted almonds
1 baked 9-inch pie shell, cooled

Prepare whipped topping mix with 1 cup of the milk as directed on package, using large mixer bowl. Add remaining 1-1/2 cups milk, the pie filling mix and liqueur. Blend; then beat at high speed for 2 minutes, scraping bowl occasionally. Fold in almonds and spoon into pie shell. Chill at least 4 hours. Garnish with quartered orange slices, if desired.

God Didn't Create Us To Be Quitters

Rev. Bob Harrington of New Orleans sent the following expression of his views to a friend, Rev. Myren Anderson of Stephen. Editor Earl Anderson published the article in the Stephen Messenger with the comment, "It doesn't sound the same as what we have been hearing from organized religion of the last 1,800 years but it seems to make sense". We reprint it here without further comment:

I'm a believer that God created people to succeed. Can't you see God in heaven creating man to go into America and fail? Wouldn't that be an insult to God? I believe poverty is an insult to God. I think God's people ought to have the best buildings, the best homes, the best clothes, the best bank accounts. I believe God created good things for God's people to have.

I'm into self-improvement and I'm the self I want to improve. Because if I don't improve me, I don't know how many other folks will. I want to make me a greater me because my friends become better, my family becomes better, everything becomes better when I make me better.

You know, if you hang around dull people, you get dull. If you hang around drop-outs, you become a drop-out. You hang around these drips, and they'll just squirt on you so often you get warped and you forget where you are going. That is the reason I like to watch who I'm around. And if I'm going to become what I'm around, I want to hang around what I want to become like.

I think if there is any insult to our Maker it's to start something good and quit. I've been around a bunch of these quitters. Things get a little rough and they quit. A little pain comes and they quit. They have to sweat a little and they quit. Or they go home and their wives don't like it, and they quit. Or they do something and somebody else doesn't like it, and they quit. Let me tell you, life is too short and too sweet to be a quitter. I don't want to be a quitter because God didn't create us to be quitters. He wants us to be never-quitters. When you put your hand to some project, don't ever stop to look back to see how well it's doing. Keep looking ahead to see where you are going with what you are doing. That's what makes life exciting. Never quit!

The best time to succeed is when everybody else is planning to fail. The best time to move out front is when everybody else is trying to slip out the back. The best time to conquer the land is when everybody is trying to figure out where the land is. When everybody is looking at a recession, you move on it there and occupy it. That's when you become positive.

You know why America is gong to have a recession? They are planning it. They are talking themselves into having it. And if they don't have it, they are going to tell somebody there's something wrong. You know why some folks have marital problems? They program themselves to have them. You become sooner or later what you think. And if you become sooner or later what you think, why don't you think now what you want to become sooner or later!

You should think about never quitting. I don't want to quit. When I first got converted, people said it wouldn't last 30 days. "Give him 60 days; give him 90 days. "You know who that was doubting me? The people who doubted themselves. You know, people who are usually down on things, are down on themselves. And if you're down on yourself, you are bound to be down on other things. That's the reason I just don't like to hang around negative people. I want to be around people with some good news. I want to be around exciting news. People say, "Well, what are you going to do about the bad news?" The best way to overcome bad news is to get excited over the good. Nobody ever gets excited over what they lost. They get excited over what they've got left.

I was brought up in Sweetwater, Alabama. I remember on Sunday afternoons Mamma and Daddy used to get us in the car and we'd ride out to the cemetery. Isn't that exciting: We'd go out there and change flowers. I used to look forward to those Sunday afternoons. We'd just hop in the car and go out to the cemetery. Everybody would cry a little and then we'd go on home.

Now, in New Orleans I get my wife on Sunday afternoon and we hop in the car and go downtown and ride around the bank — just circle the bank and pull up in front of it and blow the horn and see if they are giving curb service or something.

Get around people and things that excite you. I believe if you are going to identify with the company you keep let the company you keep identify where you want to go in life. So, never quit!

Pesticides And Herbicides

Following article by Stephen Elmore, chairman of the Council of California Growers, was published in the Los Angeles Times:

"Pesticide" and "herbicide" have become dirty words to Americans.

News accounts of dangerous adverse effects, which have been blown out of proportion, almost invariably neglect to point out that virtually everything we do — driving, swimming, even getting out of bed in the morning — holds risks. The benefits derived from the proper use of chemical compounds in agriculture are rarely, if ever, mentioned.

The fact is that chemicals have enabled farmers to increase the quantity and quality of their crops to astoundingly high levels. And, while some people balk at the agricultural use of chemicals, they think nothing of applying them routinely in urban areas to kill insects and garden pests, "purify" swimming pools, make grass green and help backyard trees bear fruit.

Pesticides have also controlled the spread of diseases such as malaria, carried by mosquitoes, and bubonic plague, transmitted by fleas on rats.

Herbicides are also beneficial: They cut the cost of agricultural products, renew grass on open land, eliminate weeds, restore the water to streams and speed the growth of new timber.

When chemical-related accidents happen, they are usually the result of human carelessness: Someone doesn't bother to wear protective clothing or ventures into a sprayed field before the specified re-entry deadline. It is not the chemicals that are at fault.

Both federal and state regulations govern the use of protective clothing worn by workers who apply chemicals or have contact with them. There are strict rules limiting applications near schools and residential areas. And county agricultural commissioners make frequent safety checks on farm employers. On unionized farms, labor representatives provide another watchdog level.

If regulations become too restrictive, farmers will become unwilling to plant certain crops, which could lead to increased reliance on production from other nations, such as Mexico.

The irony of such increased "protection" for the consumer is that Mexico's farmers use chemicals that are banned in the United States and sell their crops to our supermarkets. Thus we could be exposed to even more chemicals under the "stricter" rules.

It's time to put the debate over chemicals into perspective. In the first place, laboratory tests on animals that show "the possibility" of cancer, do not automatically translate into danger for humans. Moreover, the National Cancer Institute reports that U.S. citizens are 21st on the list of cancer victims among 46 industrialized nations.

Even though chemical use has increased over the past 50 years, life expectancy for American women has gone from 62 to 75 years, for men from 60 to 68 years.

Contrary to popular belief, farmers are not dedicated to the use of more and more pesticides. Far from it. We would prefer to use as few chemicals as possible. They are expensive and don't always work. But, as a farmer, I realize that, if I am going to raise crops in abundance and ship them in good condition, I must use chemicals.

Like other farmers, I know that chemicals are not the only answer to crop protection. Many of us practice integrated pest management, which combines biological, chemical and ecosystem controls.

But integrated pest-management guidelines have been developed for only a small number of crops. Progress has been slow because of a reduction in research funding. We farmers would rather see the government invest in research than in additional regulation.

As a responsible citizen, I feel strongly that farmers, like everyone else, must take every reasonable precaution to ensure the safety of workers and consumers and protect the environment.

But we also have to keep in mind our task of feeding an ever-increasing world population. Americans have come to fear, unreasonably, the scientific technology that has made ours the most affluent and best-fed nation in the world.

And we seem to have forgotten that it is pests, not chemicals or farmers, that are our real enemies.

WINTER TRAVEL TIPS

Buses Offer Safety on Glacial Roads

Winter offers a wonderland of vacation possibilities, but most travelers unfamiliar with maneuvering through ice and snow miss the opportunities of this beautiful season. This year that doesn't have to be the case.

Vacationers and families longing for a little snow to play in or an icy lake to skate on, can take the bus to their favorite winter spot without ever having to worry about the trip. Experienced bus drivers know the ways of the weather and have carried literally millions of people on snow plowed highways to resorts and other winter attractions.

According to Robert Buschner, Vice President of Passenger Sales for Trailways, buses offer not only regular route service to the nation's winter playgrounds but special winter tours and charter services for skiers and others, in addition to economy.

Purchasing snow tires or chains is not only a costly investment, but a time consuming one as well. If traveling by car, you have to purchase special tires or chains, you must mount them on the car, gas up and then check the car out for road handling. If you travel by bus, you need only pack your bag and go down to your local terminal. Seating is guaranteed on all regular Trailways bus routes and charter reservations are simple to arrange.

Traveling by bus also increases your destination options. If you fly, there are less than 500 cities to which you can directly travel; on a bus you can reach more than 15,000 cities, towns, communities and vacation destinations, nationwide. All of this without having to worry about reservations while sightseeing along the way.

So, this winter get out of the house and enjoy the season by traveling by bus. It's a fun, safe, economical way to enjoy all the winter season has to offer.

For more information about winter traveling by bus, contact your local bus terminal or travel agent.

A Work Reporton the 1981 Farm Bill

Because of the Thanksgiving holiday and the logjam over the 1982 Federal budget, the House-Senate conference committee working on the four-year Farm Bill has put off its next meeting until December 2.

Although impasses have been reached on several provisions of the Farm Bill, several temporary decisions have been made about commodity programs which will directly affect our local economy.

These decisions must still be approved by both houses of Congress and by President Reagan. Some changes may still be made. However, I thought you might be interested in what provisions these tentative decisions have included.

Sugar: The conferees have agreed to a loan program which would set the 1982 support level at 17.5-cents-per-pound, with half-cent increases in 1983, 1984 and 1985.

As a member of the House Agriculture Committee, I was the author of the original sugar proposal, which would have set a 1982 loan level of 19.6-cents-per-pound, with annual increases based on the cost of production. To gain more Congressional support, this proposal was lowered to 18 cents but was narrowly defeated by an urban coalition in the House.

With a 17.5-cents compromise, I firmly believe we are going to be able to get a sugar program approved by the House and President Reagan when the Farm Bill is completed.

Sunflower: Unfortunately, my amendment to establish an $8 sunflower loan program was dropped by the conference committee, even though it would not have cost any additional tax dollars.

I was able to persuade the conference committee to include language in the Farm Bill which strongly urges the Department of Agriculture to establish a sunflower loan program if there are any future disuptions in the market for oil sunflower seeds. This would protect sunflower growers from future transportation breakdowns or labor strikes at the port of Duluth.

Dairy: The conferees have made a tentative agreement on dairy support levels. At this point, the current support level of $13.10 - per - hundredweight would be maintained through 1982. The Secretary of Agriculture would not be allowed to let the 1983-85 support levels to drop below 70 per cent of parity.

The Secretary will also be required to set support levels at 75 per cent of parity if projected Federal purchases of dairy products is less than 4 billion pounds of milk equivalent in 1983, 3.5 billion pounds in 1984, 2.69 billion pounds in 1985.

Wheat and feed grains: Temporary decisions have set target prices of $4.05 per bushel for wheat and $2.70 for corn in 1982, with annual adjustments in 1983-85 of 6 per cent each year. Price support loan rates for the 1982-85 crops would not be less than $3.55 for wheat and $2.60 for corn.

Price support loans for barley, oats, and grain sorghum would be set at "fair and reasonable" levels tied to the levels for corn.

Reserves and embargoes: The conference also voted to require Secretary Block to continue the farmer-held reserve program for wheat and feed grains.

In addition, it voted to require Secretary Block to compensate farmers whose products may be affected by any future "selective" embargo on exports of agricultural commodities.

Compensation to farmers would be provided in either or both of the following ways: (1) direct payments covering the gap between pre-embargo market prives and 100 per cent of parity; or (2) an increase in the price support loan rate for the affected commodities to 100 per cent of parity.

In this column, I have only outlined the tentative measures approved by the Farm Bill's conference committee. This does not mean that these provisions are set in concrete for the next four years, or that the Congress or the President will not make any futher changes in these basic commodity programs.

This column does not indicate that I am satisfied with the scope of the dairy, wheat, feed grain, and sunflower programs. These compromises were necessitated because Congress' coalition of urban congressmen is unwilling to approve any farm program that provides more than a bare minimum.

Since it may be several weeks until the Farm Bill is completed, I thought you might be interested in what work has been done to date on this crucial piece of legislation. There is still much more work to be done by Congress before we get a fair Farm Bill for the next four years.

HOW IT WORKS

Milk Prices

By John F. Brookman

Milk prices in two states determine the pricing structure for the entire U.S.

Two letters, mysterious even to many in the industry, are important factors in how many pennies you have to pay for a quart of milk. The letters are M and W. They stand for the Minnesota-Wisconsin price series.

First adopted in the Chicago Federal Milk Order in September, 1961, M-W reflects the prices paid to Minnesota and Wisconsin farmers for manufacturing grade milk. These two states were selected because they are the major producers of manufacturing grade milk. They represent 9.9 billion of the 19.1 billion pounds of manufacturing grade milk marketed in 1980.

Two grades of milk are produced on U.S. dairy farms. Grade A is produced under higher farm sanitation standards than Grade B. Only Grade A milk may be sold as a fluid beverage, but either Grade A or B may be used to manufacture cheese, butter or non-fat dry milk.

Class I milk (milk used as fluid) prices, under the federal milk marketing order program, are fixed in each market above the prices paid for Grade B milk in the Minnesota-Wisconsin area.

The basic formula for a given market is the M-W manufacturing milk price that reflects supply and demand in the entire milk industry. Grade A milk producers are paid a higher price because it costs more to produce. The formula provides for a two-month lag. Thus, the May M-W price, plus the Class I price differential, determines the Class I price for milk in July.

M-W is important because it's used to set milk prices throughout most of the U.S. and mirrors manufacturing grade prices outside Minnesota and Wisconsin. The price differential promotes market security and stability.

The M-W series has worked efficiently in the past and will continue to do so until the percentage of Grade B milk in Minnesota and Wisconsin is too low to be a viable economic factor. Then a new system will be needed. Meanwhile M-W helps you get milk when you need it at a price that tries to be fair to all.

Mr. Brookman is Vice President, Communications, of the United Dairy Industry Association.

Donate Monies For Finish Of Kidney House

Robert Barth, chairman of the board of the Kidney Foundation of the Upper Midwest, announced today that the anticipated facility, "Kidney House", has received a major contribution pledge toward its completion. At the Fall State conference of the Department of Minnesota, American Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary, their executive boards voted to adopt "Kidney House" as a special project and pledged $150,000 toward its completion. State commander Milo Cecka, Minneapolis, and the Auxiliary president, Gayle Van Landingham, Mankato, explained that these monies will be raised through the efforts of the American Legion membership and specific fund raising events throughout Minnesota and will be presented to the Kidney Foundation in total by January 1, 1983.

The idea of "Kidney House" was conceived after a year-long study by the Kidney Foundation addressing the needs of direct patient aid with emphasis on patient housing. "Kidney House" will provide housing and will be a haven for patients and their families while receiving treatment for kidney problems in these Twin Cities medical centers: Veterans Administration Center, University of Minnesota Hospitals and Hennepin County Medical Center. Minnesota is one of the foremost treatment centers for kidney disease in the world. Seventy-five per cent of all dialysis and transplant patients come from outside the Twin City area.

Location chosen will be one convenient to all of the above treatment centers. Total expense for the completion of "Kidney House" is estimated at one million dollars. In addition to the pledge from the American Legion, the "Kidney House" received its first funding in the amount of $50,000 from the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Department of Minnesota and Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary. Foundation plans to enlist the support of the general public in achieving this much needed facility, the first for kidney patients in the county.

National Kidney Foundation of the Upper Midwest, Inc., is the only National Health Agency dedicated to finding the total answer to diseases of the kidney . . . prevention, treatment and cure.

Programs supported by the Kidney Foundation include research, patient and community services, public and professional education and the "Gift of Life" organ donor program.

American Legion special project committees will be under the leadership of past department commander Frank Fay, Hutchinson and past department president Joyce (Mrs. Conrad) Erickson, Albert Lea.

Organ Transplants — A Happy Story For Most

by Maureen Smith
'U' M news service

Usually, it's a happy story. The patient, with a healthy new kidney, has been freed from dialysis and, maybe rescued from death. The kidney donor, a close family member, rejoices to see the loved one restored to health and is proud to have made it possible. Everyone feels good, and the recipient and donor are drawn even closer together than before.

But when life is on the line, emotions run high. Even the successful transplant can result in family stress. Once in a while a recipient feels too obligated, or a donor is too protective or demanding. Sometimes a husband or wife, who has held on through a long illness, decides that a transplant offers a chance to leave. Kidney patients who are unable to find donors in their families may feel rejected and resentful.

"When somthing like that happens, it's dramatic and people remember it," said Roberta Simmons, a professor of sociology at the University of Minnesota, who has studied the social and psychological impact of transplants. The happy stories, which are more common, may not attract as much attention.

Donna Jarva's story is one of the happy ones. When the teenager from the northern Minnesota town of Bovey learned last April that she had kidney disease and needed a transplant, everyone in her family wanted to help. Her dad wanted to give her a kidney. Her sister Brenda was tested, but her blood was the wrong type. Linda and Roger, the youngest members of the family, worried about their big sister.

In the end, Donna's donor was her mother. "I just had the feeling I was going to be the one," Patricia Jarva said. And Donna said she "kind of hoped" that the kidney would come from her mother.

"I think it's brought my mom and me closer together," Donna said a few months after the successful transplant at University hospitals. "We're always joking. We just went for a bike ride, and we said we were two kidneys going on a bike ride."

The Jarva family, which moved to Bovey from Chicago a year before Donna became ill, has also felt the support of its community. The Jarva's church raised money for a Donna Jarva fund. Except for church friends, the Jarvas didn't know people in town well, but they found that people cared. "We're surprised how people in the Iron Range get together when there's a family in need," Patricia Jarva said. "It makes us feel good."

The experience of the Jarvas fits the pattern described by Simmons in the book "Gift of Life." (Her husband Richard Simmons, a transplant surgeon, is a co-author of the book.)

"The donor and recipient share intimately the experience of a major life crisis, and they most often emerge with intensely forged ties of closeness and with a long-term exhilaration and life-appreciation greater than that seen in the ordinary population," Simmons said in the book.

One year after their successful transplants, both recipients and donors in the Simmons study scored higher than average on a scale measuring happiness, and the self-esteem of donors was enhanced. "To save a person's life makes you feel like a better person," one donor said. "I guess I consider it one of the more worthwhile experiences of my life," said another.

Often, Simmons said, a donor does not even go through a decision-making process before volunteering to give a kidney. The decision is instantaneous as soon as the need is known: saving the life of the family member is of such importance that no other decision is even considered.

Occasionally the donor will be a black sheep who has done something in the past that the family disapproved of and wants to get back in the good graces of the family. But Simmons said that "relatively few of the donors are black sheep, and there are as many black sheep among the people who don't volunteer." More typically, she said, the donor is a family member who has been expecially close to the recipient.

Sometimes the attempt to find a donor within a family is a painful one, with each family member wanting someone else to volunteer. A typical conflict situation occurs when the needs of two families are seen as competing, Simmons said. A man's brother and his parents may want him to give a kidney to save the brother's life, for example, while his wife wants him to consider his own health first for her sake and their children's.

When no family donor can be found, either because nobody is willing or because nobody is medically suitable, the patient must wait for a cadaver kidney, knowing that the chance of a successful transplant is somewhat reduced. The uncertainty of the wait makes this situation stressful for potential recipients.

A patient who needs a heart transplant, of course, can only receive a heart from a cadaver. Barbara Elick, coordinator of heart, pancreas and liver transplants, said families may even be reluctant to give the heart when a young person has been killed in an accident, because people associate the heart with the emotions and the soul. "People will give the kidneys pretty readily," she said, "but then they will say 'Oh, the heart.' "

Elick remembers talking with Cindy Spicer, the nine-year-old who lived five months with a transplanted heart. "What do you know about transplants?" Elick asked her. "I know somebody has to die, and I don't like that," Cindy said.

Adults have the same concern, Elick said. "The patients who are in the hospital hear the ambulance and they say, 'I feel so guilty. Every time I hear one, I think it may be my chance.' The best thing is to let them express that and let them know everybody feels the same way and everybody feels a little guilty about it," she said.

After a transplant, all recipients live with the fear that the new organ will be rejected. Lois Bartell, who gives classes for kidney recipients and teaches them to manage their own care, said they frequently ask what they might do to cause rejection. Will overwork do it? How careful do they have to be? Bartell assures them that there is "nothing they can do, except stopping the medication, that would cause rejection."

Besides the fear of rejection, the major problem for transplant recipients is the side effects of their medication. The steroids that are used to prevent rejection may affect moods and appearance. The interviewers in the Simmons study classified people by the way they looked: 18 per cent were judged to look grossly abnormal and moon-faced, 50 per cent were said to be a little full-faced but within normal limits, and 32 per cent were seen as perfectly normal in appearance. Not surprisingly, psychological adjustment was closely tied to the way people felt about how they looked.

Teenage girls are especially vulnerable to changes in their appearance. A girl who is shorter than average because of renal failure may become rotund and moon-faced as a result of her medication. "A 15-year-old girl who looks 10 now has acne and a moon face," Cynthia Forsman, kidney transplant coordinator, said. "The teenage girls will even stop their medication at times. They may die, but it's more important to be accepted, to get a date for the prom."

Concern about physical attractiveness can also take its toll on marriages. By the time patients are ready for transplants, their marriages have already been under strain. "More than half of the men in renal failure and on dialysis are impotent during that time," Forsman said. "After a transplant that often does improve, but then there are the side effects of the medication — the acne and weight gain and moon-face appearance." People who feel unattractive are likely to feel wounded in their sexuality.

Financial pressures, job loss and dislocation of roles all contribute to marital problems. "We see family stresses, we see marriages dissolve," Forsman said.

An organ transplant represents a major life crisis. "It's not an easy thing to go through, any of it," Simmons said. Some people go under, others come through with new strength and maturity and elation. Elick thinks of heart recipient Jim Feehan, who loves life and knows how much he loves it."

"Stress isn't necessarily all negative in terms of the outcome," Simmons said. "For some individuals the stress is too much. For others it's a growth experience, at least for a while.

SERVE AT HOME—OR GIVE AWAY

How can you get a head start on holiday entertaining? By planning in advance, of course, and this all begins with a collection of delicious make-ahead recipes. Whether you anticipate open house, the usual sit-down family dinner or a series of small company gatherings, Chewy Party Squares will add a sweet finale. Moist flaked coconut combines with chopped nuts, brown sugar and few other ingredients in a rich mixture which bakes in about 20 minutes. A Tangy Lemon Glaze is spread over the warm cake before all is cooled and cut into squares. When baking a batch for company, bake an extra batch of these chewy treats and earmark for someone "special." Bake and take with your very best holiday greetings.

Chewy Party Squares

2 eggs, beaten
1 cup firmly packed brown sugar
2/3 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 cup chopped nuts
1/2 cup Baker's Angel Flake coconut
3/4 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon double-acting baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
Tangy Lemon Glaze

Combine eggs and sugar in top of double boiler. Cook and stir over hot water until mixture is smooth, about 3 minutes. Remove from heat; blend in flour, nuts, coconut, vanilla, baking powder and salt. Pour into a greased 8-inch square pan. Bake at 350° about 20 minutes, or until cake tester inserted into center comes out clean. Spread Tangy Lemon Glaze over warm cake; cool throughly. Cut into squares.

Tangy Lemon Glaze. Place 1 cup sifted confectioners sugar in small bowl. Gradually add 4 teaspoons (about) hot milk, 2 teaspoons lemon juice and 1/8 teaspoon grated lemon rind. Blend well.

Listening to Minnesota...

by Mark Dayton

"Does Washington want to drive family farmers off the land?"
—Don Wawrzyniak
Foley, MN

I've heard questions like that time and time again from farmers and rural business people all over this state.

For thirty years they have felt the anguish of friends and neighbors being forced off their land, losing their jobs and their way of life.

For thirty years, federal farm policy has grown steadily worse, allowing the purchasing power of farmers to be cut again and again.

When I was Minnesota's Commissioner of Economic Development, it was clear to me that when farmers did well, our state did well. When Minnesota's farmers are hurting, the state is hurting. That is the case today. The state of Minnesota is in a financial crisis, and the economic problems of our farmers are a major reason for that crisis.

Tumbling farm prices, high interest rates and soaring energy costs have devastated the farm economy. Farmers have weathered low commodity prices before, but not coupled with record high interest rates and energy costs. Together they mean disaster.

And, it's not just farmers who are being hurt.

The businesses along main street—farm implement dealers, storeowners, grain elevator operators and other business people who depend on a healthy farm economy—talk about the difficulty of meeting a payroll and just making ends meet these days.

These are tough times for our farmers and these times are reflected in the entire Minnesota economy today. If farm income continues to be low, our state's economy will continue to decline and other Minnesotans face the prospect of higher taxes.

The farmers I've talked to know they cannot borrow their way to prosperity. Low commodity prices only lead to more debt, higher interest rates, deeper economic recession and for some, bankruptcy.

To me, the solution suggests itself. We need higher price supports and we must bring interest rates down.

Washington, however, still hasn't gotten the message.

Our senators passed a farm bill which farm leaders called "a blueprint for farm depression." And a farm depression will drag rural communities and Minnesota's economy down as well.

It's time we put the interests of our farmers and rural communities first. We must restore a strong farm program that has been lost during the past three decades.

Our basic goal should be to establish higher price supports—at levels which will enable farmers to meet their production costs—and to maintain market prices which will provide farmers the opportunity to earn a fair profit.

Interest rates also must be brought down. While credit is not an acceptable substitute for income—either for farmers or rural business people—borrowing remains a necessity for many of them and interest rates must be reduced.

We must begin our campaign for a new farm policy in behalf of today's farmers and business people on main street—and for the young people who are the new lifeblood of our farms and rural communities.

We will call upon the federal government, particularly the Senate, to respond and to act in the Minnesota interest. We will call upon them, as we have in the past, to follow our lead...as we set a Minnesota standard for other states to match.

In subsequent columns and in speaking throughout our state, I will respond to questions from readers on this and other important issues of concern to Minnesotans. I hope you will continue sending questions and comments to me at P.O. Box 1982, St. Paul, MN 55111.

Mark Dayton is the former Minnesota Commissioner of Economic Development and a DFL candidate for United States Senate.

GOOD PSYCHOLOGY

The holidays are the downfall of many a dieter. At parties, one way to avoid piling up the calories is to substitute a tall glass of iced tea for rich eggnogs, sweet cocktails or highballs. Iced tea has the big advantage of being practically calorie-free . . . so you can save over 100 calories per drink-while still enjoying the party.

Institute Program Designed To Train Developed Leaders

by Judith Raunig-Graham
'U' M News Service

Ask anyone what's been wrong with government in the last 10 or 15 years and the answer is likely to be "lack of capable leadership."

Aware of the dearth of well-rounded leaders in all segments of society, the Hubert H. Humphrey institute of public affairs at the University of Minnesota has launched a program for professionall in mid-career, called "Education for Reflective Leadership." It's thought to be the first of its kind in the country and is likely to put the institute on the map in the field of higher education.

New this fall, the program is the first step in developing a permanent leadership program at the institute. For this year's test run, 24 participants will meet each Monday evening for three quarters to determine what attributes are common among leaders and to think about how they can develop their own leadership skills.

The genesis of the program reflects the thinking of its coordinator and the institute's director, Harlan Cleveland, who served in both the Kennedy and Johnson administrations.

Most mid-career professionals, Cleveland believes, have reached positions of responsibility by climbing a ladder based on specialization. But at some point in each professional's career, he or she needs more education to learn how to make decisions from a broader perspective.

Many professionals in mid-career realize they need more training, but most attack the problem by attempting to hone their management skills. Cleveland, however, thinks skills training is not enough. What's necessary is the development of "integrative thinking," the ability to take the skills learned in a specialty and apply them in a broader way to general problems of leadership.

"Higher education has not been focusing on integrative modes of thought which are required for making sense out of all the expertise produced by the scientific and industrial revolutions" Cleveland said. "It's the development of integrative thinking particularly in mid-career, that ought to be 'highest' about higher education. I think this is the great unserved market for higher education, the new frontier."

Next year when the leadership program will be offered as a full-time academic program, participants will be sought from throughout the country. But this year participants were selected from the Twin Cities area. Professionals with at least 10 years of experience encompassing increasing levels of responsibility were sought. Both the private and public sectors are representated by this year's participants, whose experience covers a wide range of fields and interests.

Among those chosen were David Bergerson, assistant general counsel for Honeywell Inc.; Marilyn Bryant, 1980 chair of the Minnesota women's political caucus; John Derus, chair of the Hennepin county board of commissioners; and Arvonne Fraser who worked for the U.S. agency for international development during the Carter administration.

Participants are impressed with the make-up of the group and believe interaction with other mid-career professionals is a prime component of the program.

"No one is shy about speaking up or being assertive," said Donna Knight, executive director of Minnesota Wellspring, a consortium of business, labor, education and government aimed at developing technology in the state. "There is real willingness to tackle issues and to think publicly."

Throughout the academic year the seminar will focus on different study "blocks," including leadership, more governance with less government, uses and abuses of law, information, complex decision-making and world security. A thick book of writings by such thinkers as Common Cause founder John Gardner and philosopher Martin Buber accompanies each of the 10 blocks.

Moderators for the discussions are drawn from the Humphrey institute faculty, from other universities, and from leaders in government or the private sector. Some of those scheduled to attend this year's sessions include Magda McHale, director of the center for integrative studies at the state university of New York at Buffalo; Ithiel de Sola Poole, professor of communications at the Massachusetts institute of technology; Walter Heller, regents professor of economics at the University of Minnesota; and Saburo Ikita, chairman of the institute for domestic and international policy studies in Tokyo.

Part of the program's appeal is the opportunity it affords members to meet recognized leaders and exchange ideas in an informal setting. This year the group meets in the downtown Minneapolis alumni club. Next year it will meet at the Humphrey institute, where each participant will have an office and the opportunity to mingle with the others in a central meeting room.

Several participants cited the potential expansion of their personal networks as a particularly appealing part of the program. Paul Sherburne, executive director of the World Press institute in St. Paul, said he thinks interaction with leaders and potential leaders will give him an incentive to continue in a leadership role. He also believes it's important for mid-career professionals to step back and relfect on the philosophies of others.

"I don't think I carried any baggage with me on what it means to be a leader," Sherburne, a long-time political activitist, said. "I don't have a pat definition. My hope is that my horizons will expand and I'm looking for what it is that makes a leader."

Early discussions have focused on such philosophical issues as whether leaders are born or developed. Knight said her ideas on leadership have already begun to change since the seminar began in early October. Before joining the group, she believed people became leaders totally because of environmental influences. Now she's not so sure.

Bergerson, who said he enrolled to develop " a more useful world view," now thinks "leadership is a little bit like medicine."

"I think there's a predisposition for leadership which can be activated or not," he said, "depending on what external pressures and influences are applied."

Marilyn Bryant believes leaders have innate attributes, but she also thinks leadership can be taught "within limitations." She is convinced that strong women leaders are essential if women are going to progress in society. By participating in the program she hopes to learn ways to move more women into leadership roles, she said.

Susan Stuart-Otto, vice president of public information for Twin Cities public television station KTCA, said she has already seen her focus on leadership shift from parochial to global. "Looking at things universally is so different than looking at things just from the perspective of a job," she said. "Your view is so often dictated by your job. When you have a chance to fit that into a broader perspective it's exciting."

Flashing Blue Lights Signal Maintenance

Flashing blue lights signal maintenance operations and serve to alert motorists to the movement of equipment in clearing snow from trunk highways and sanding of curves and bridge decks, according to Curtis Christie, state maintenance engineer, Minnesota Department of Transportation (Mn-DOT).

With blue lights distinctive to road maintenance activity, the motoring public is alerted to a specific type of hazard involving generally slower moving or stationary equipment on or near travel lanes. Blue is in contrast to the amber lights used by a wide range of other motor vehicles.

Minnesota state law prohibits the use of blue lights on all vehicles except road maintenance equipment operated by or under contract to the state or political subdivision.

Reflectors Cut Number Of Car Deer Accidents

Installation of hundreds of roadside reflectors which turn headlight beams into pulsating "light fences" has greatly reduced the number of vehicle-deer collisions along Interstate 94 near Sauk Centre, the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) announced.

Reflectors bounce headlight beams at sharp angles to the roadsides, where an image similar to a string of red flash-bulbs firing is seen by the deer. Motorists see only a line of steel posts.

Mn-DOT installed reflectors in the fall of 1980 on a one-mile section of I-94 in a heavily wooded area three miles west of Sauk Centre. Since their installation, the number of confirmed deer kills dropped from 32 during the September 1979 to September 1980 period, to six during the same period in 1980-81, according to Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

DNR also reports the deer herd has not changed its main crossing point, which means its feeding, mating and other habits have not been disturbed.

Use of the reflectors originated in Europe. Posts which are about two feet high, are placed at intervals of 66 feet a few feet from the freeway shoulder.

An installation similar to the one at Sauk Centre was placed along a 1.2 mile section of US 169 north of St. Peter this spring. It uses clear rather than red reflectors and posts are spaced at longer intervals.

Both installations are intended to reduce human injury, property damage and number of deer killed each year on Minnesota's highways. Each year, between 7,000 and 8,000 deer are killed by colliding with vehicles.

Other methods are used to reduce the number of deer killed on state highways including erection of high fences and fences with one-way "deer gates."

"The deer fence and 'deer gates' are too expensive for widespread application, whereas the cost of installing the reflectors is about one-tenth that of fences," said Darryl Durgin, Mn-DOT Brainerd district engineer.

Durgin said cost of the Sauk Centre installation is about $10,000.

"Based on an average cost of $500 per accident for injuries and property damage," Durgin said, "the project has more than paid for itself in the first year."

300 Attend Hearing On Hazardous Waste Disposal

THIEF RIVER FALLS TIMES
Volume 70 Thief River Falls, Pennington County, Minnesota Monday, December 7, 1981 Number 95

Approximately 300 people were on hand Thursday evening when the Minnesota waste management board held a hearing on hazardous waste disposal site selection in the Thief River Falls city auditorium. Board chairman Robert Dunn presided at the session.

The waste management board is charged by the state legislature with the responsibility to select a hazardous waste disposal site in the state by Jan. 1, 1984. Of the 20 sites still under consideration by the board, three are in east Marshall county, one in Kittson county and one in western Beltrami county. Testimony received was primarily from residents or officials involved with activities in those three counties.

First to testify at the hearing was Tom Dargon, director of the Northwest regional development commission headquartered at Crookston. Dargon noted that the commission was on record in opposition to siting hazardous waste disposal in this area for several reasons which were listed. He noted that sites in this area were further from the major source of hazardous waste generation than Wisconsin sites presently being used by Twin Cities industry.

Rod Heschke of the soil conservation service presented the board with a copy of research findings on the site, noting high water table, soils indicating good farmland capabilities and other soil and water data.

Enge Serves As Head Of MWOA

by Dave Berg
Times Reporter

Leland "Bud" Enge, 55, wastewater department supervisor for the city of Thief River Falls for 18 years, has been elected president of Minnesota Wastewater Operators Association.

As president he will oversee management of the 719 member organization through August, 1982. Growing organization has increased by 69 members since August, 1980. Association's stated purpose is "advancement of knowledge of operators and managers of wastewater treatment facilities, and to all others who are interested in collection and treatment of sewage and industrial wastes."

Duties will include chairing four meetings per year of the 11-man board of directors, which consists of immediate past president, president, president-elect, vice president, secretary-treasurer, and six section directors. He will also preside over annual state meeting in August, and attend at least one meeting of each of six sections. Enge also attends approximately four meetings per year as member of northwest section.

Enge was nominated for presidential position by three most recent past-presidents and elected by general membership, serving past year as president-elect. Prior to that, he served four years as director of northwest section of state.

Noting that section was not too active until about 10 years ago, he compared membership to belonging to a Boy Scout troop, stating, "It's pretty interesting once you get active." Enge said that Thief River Falls' stabilization pond system was only one of many different types of sewage handling systems used in Minnesota, adding that field was getting more technical all the time. "I got to meet with some of the best people in the state through the association," he said, "I've learned a lot."

Association publishes a quarterly magazine "The Waste Watcher", for which Enge says he has written or submitted a few articles. While most of them deal with technical matters, one written by Shelly Steva, Thief River Falls, and submitted by Enge was about wildlife utilization of ponds. A survey done by Steva over seven month period, counted 89 species of birds utilizing Thief River Falls' ponds with 14 exhibiting nesting behavior.

Employed by the city for 29 years, Enge worked 11 years with water department before taking charge of wastewater department after retirement of former supervisor Ole Ness.

As supervisor, Enge says he has two and a half employees under him. He explains that two are full time, and one is shared with water department on part-time basis. They are

Parent-Teacher Conferences At Franklin

Franklin middle school schedule for parent-teacher conferences for the 1981-82 school year has been announced. This year, four time segments from 6 to 10 p.m., December 7, 8, 14 and 15, will be used for conferences.

In an attempt to make conferences successful and to allow each parent adequate time with the teacher, parents whose last name begins with the letter A through M are asked to attend conferences December 7 and 8 and those parents whose last name begins with the letter N through Z should attend December 14 and 15.

This is not intended as a rule but merely as a guide to avoid having all parents attend on a single evening.

Conferences this year again will be open; parents may come and leave at any time, and may confer with as many teachers as they want.

Christmas Eve Dinner Slated At NCC

Sixth annual Christmas Eve dinner for people wishing to spend the evening with others will be served at the Northland community college cafeteria in Thief River Falls again this year. Community project is supported by community donations.

Cash donations may be sent to Susan Kruse, 810 Alice Drive, Thief River Falls. Call Susan at 681-6002 to donate sweets or salads.

Waste Management Board Holds Tour, Hearings Here

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Minnesota waste management board received perfect marks for attendance and high marks for diplomacy at a hearing held in Thief River Falls city auditorium Thursday evening. And only chairman Robert Dunn was absent at the official meeting of the board Friday morning in the basement meeting room of the auditorium.

Purpose of the board sessions in Thief River Falls was to receive testimony from the public regarding candidate sites for a state hazardous waste disposal site in the area. Board members arrived Wednesday evening, began a tour of the five sites early Thursday morning, held a public hearing Thursday evening, the regular board meeting Friday morning and permitted more public testimony and questions early Friday afternoon before returning by commercial airline to the Twin Cities.

By and large, the testimony presented was an expression of concern over what might happen if waste stored in a disposal site is not contained within that site. Opponents to establishment of a site on proposed areas in Kittson, Marshall or Beltrami counties cited flooding conditions, water tables, drainage areas, existing road conditions, soil types, existing land use, distance from the source of major generators of hazardous waste and other factors in their comments to the board.

Throughout the Thursday evening and Friday sessions, the board members assured the public that only the most suitable site would be selected, and that if proposed sites in this area were found to pose a danger to the health and safety of the people, they would be eliminated from consideration. It was also emphasized by the board chairman that selection would not be made on political basis as some opponents had speculated in their testimony.

Laurence Hunter, vice chairman of the board and one of the eight board members appointed by the governor to serve as part-time directors (chairman Dunn is a full-time salaried chairman), also attempted to instill board credibility in the minds of the public as he presided at the Friday meeting in the absence of chairman Dunn.

At issue was the fact that the U.S. fish and wildlife service had not permitted the board to drill test holes on Agassiz national wildlife refuge in the absence of a permit. Hunter insisted that the board could not maintain its integrity by treating any of the 20 candidate sites different from any other, adding that he hoped the refuge manager and regional director would reconsider their postion and permit drilling to take place.

Such permission could be forth coming under established procedure which the waste management board staff apparently elected to bypass due to time constraints at

Tiny Pumpkin In PA Not Really Smallest

There's a pumpkin in Emil Dandar's freezer that may not be as valuable as he thinks.

Dandar, a resident of Langhorne Gables, PA, is storing the pumpkin "for future reference," hoping that it will be recognized as the world's smallest pumpkin, according to a recent story in the Minneapolis Tribune.

The pumpkin is three inches high, four inches in diameter and weighs 11 ounces. Dandar and his wife, Helen, raise the sugar variety of pumpkin and have collaborated in a book with 312 pumpkin recipes, the story stated. Pumpkin has been identified as the Cucurbita Pepo variety.

Frances Wold of Sanders township, however, now claims he has grown the smallest pumpkin. His pumpkin is three and five-sixteenths inches wide, two and 11-sixteenths inches high and weighs only eight ounces.

Full-grown pumpkin was raised with several other large pumpkins by Wold.

'Diary Of Anne Frank' NCC Feature

Opening production of the Northland theater season will be the play, "The Diary of Anne Frank," a dramatization by Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett of "Anne Frank: The Diary of a Young Girl," the journal kept by Anne Frank while she and her family were hiding from the Nazis in Amsterdam during World War II, which was first published in 1947.

In the nearly 35 years since the Franks and four other Jews were discovered in their "Secret Annexe" and sent to concentration camps from which only Anne's father returned, her story has powerfully stirred generations of readers around the world and millions more who have seen stage and movie treatments of the diary. Anne, who was 15 when she died, would have celebrated her 50th birthday June 12 of this year.

The play, first presented in New York City in 1955, was winner of the Pulitzer Prize and Critics' Circle award and is a moving document of the real-life legacy left us by a spirited 13 year-old Jewish girl, who with her family and four others, spent two years in hiding in a cramped little attic to try to escape being sent to the Nazi concentration camps.

The play beautifully visualizes for the audience the motions of courage, terror, anger, love, generosity and greed of the seven people forced together through difficult months of confinement. We see Anne grow and mature through her early teen years and learn of her hopes and fears through the pages of her dairy.

Play will open December 9 and will run through December 13, with all performances at 8 p.m., except the Sunday performance which will be a 2 p.m. matinee.

Reserved seat tickets will be sold for this production and will be available by calling 681-2181, ext. 61, or by writing: Tickets — Anne Frank, Northland Community College, Thief River Falls, MN 56701. Adult admission charge is $2; student admission charge is $1; and NCC students and faculty are admitted free of charge with their activity card.

Senior citizens, age 62 years and older, will be admitted free of charge with their activity pass. Those who do not have a pass may stop at the college office or call 681-2181, ext. 44. Tickets will also be available at the door for the same prices as mentioned above.

Enge Serves As President Of State Group

responsible for maintenance and repair of 39.5 miles of sewer, 10 lift stations with 23 pumps, and three" holding ponds located about a mile west of the city. They also maintain separate pond and pumping station at the airport. "It's a big responsibility," he says, "The taxpayers have a lot of money tied up in this equipment, and it's all expensive."

Enge describes stabilization pond setup used by Thief River Falls as "basically a natural process." Approximately 1.4 million gallons of sewage per day is pumped into two primary holding ponds. There, solids settle to the bottom where, (under ideally balanced conditions) they are reduced by action of bacteria and algae into water, carbon dioxide, oxygen and harmless solids. He explains that bacteria utilize oxygen produced by algae, and algae utilize carbon dioxide produced by bacteria. Enge noted that liquids from primary ponds are transferred to secondary pond for further treatment by the same process.

Enge said that controlling depth of water in ponds was critical to maintaining proper balance between algae and bacteria. If water is too shallow, algae and plants multiply too fast resulting in an odor problem. If water is too deep, bacteria of the wrong type multiply and produce an odor problem. He noted that growth of plants could also encourage rodents such as muskrats to move in, with their burrowing activities creating a potential for leaks.

During summer months Enge tests effluent (liquid) at secondary treatment pond twice a week, performing chemical and physical tests to determine biochemical oxygen demand, total suspended solids, fecal coliform bacteria counts, turbidity, pH and dissolved oxygen. He also makes general observations of ponds' condition on daily basis, noting weed growth of animal activity.

Test results are reported to Minnesota Pollution Control Agency, which then either grants or refuses permission to discharge effluent into ditch 70, which eventually empties into the Thief River. "It's really pretty efficient," says Enge. Permit program is authorized by National Pollution Discharge Elimination System.

Since treatment system will not work during winter months because cold and ice formation slow action of bacteria and algae and prevent discharge, it must be shut down. This means wastewater must be stored until spring. Ponds are drained down in fall, so that by end of November they have a capacity of about 244 million gallons for storage until they can begin discharge again in May or June. Enge said that fluctations in population could have adverse effects on system's efficiency if they varied too much.

Until pond system became operational in 1974, city used a trickling filter system. Structure that housed that system has since been remodeled into a museum at Historical Village. A trip to inspect main lift station located just outside Historical Village caused Enge to comment, "I used to spend a lot of time out here. You'd never know what it used to be to look at it now."

Pumping station, a small brick building, houses three huge electric motors rated between 75 and 100 horsepower, and switching equipment which operates pumps located deep beneath building. Starting one of the pumps, Enge comments that it moves 4,000 gallons of wastewater per minute. "Nobody pays much attention to this stuff until something breaks down and it starts backing up," he said, "then we get called out at all hours of the night in all kinds of weather."

In spite of some of the more unpleasant aspects of the work, Enge says he enjoys his job. "I'm not tied down in one place," he comments, "I get to get out and meet with people." He also commented that city council had been pretty good about granting requests for needed equipment.

He walks to work every day from his home on Merriam Avenue. "I was doing that even before gas got so high," he says. Noting that he won't be eligible to retire for about ten years, he commented, "with the time I've got in, I'm not likely to change jobs." Adding, "I won't get rich on my salary, but the benefits are pretty good."

300 Attend Hearing On Disposal Site

Lloyd Wiseth of Goodridge, speaking for the Red Lake watershed district, pointed out that all of the sites under consideration in this area are in critical waterflow areas and within a five-year flood plain. He asked the waste management board to give strong consideration to the hydrological characteristics of the area, and urged that the state group consult with the watershed management board in any further actions.

International flavor was provided for the meeting when Rich Howard, representing Canadian Environmental Protection Heritage, Inc., told of the international aspects of water flowing from this area via the Red river into Manitoba. He stated that Canadians are concerned about the potential pollution and said the capability to handle purification of potable waters does not now exist.

Howard Lunsetter of Grygla pointed out flooding, road, surface water, underground aquifer and distance problems in his testimony from township board point of view. He said consideration seemed to be given by the board only on its population base criteria, and added that distance to the sites outweighs the advantages of locating a site on public lands. He added concern that there are no northwestern Minnesota members on the board and said it appears the area here will be used only as the metro area chooses.

Chairman Dunn, who answered to points brought up by people giving testimony at the hearing, assured the group in attendance that site selection would be made free of political consideration. When this initial comment brought derisive laughter and similar vocal response from the audience, he re-emphasized the point and added his personal promise that political consideration would not be a factor in site selection.

Roy Engh, mayor of Warren, pointed out that the state pollution control agency had rejected the location of sanitary landfills for area communities in the area, primarily because of water table and other charateristics which the PCA considered to be unsuitable. He suggested that the waste management board consider a site closer to the area of hazardous waste generation.

Chairman Dunn noted that the 20 sites now under consideration would be reduced to six sites in May of 1982. There would be no more than one site per county at that point. Each county in which one of the six sites is located will be authorized to select a member to serve on the waste management board and assist in making the final selection.

Marcella Gonsorowski, Marshall county commissioner, urged above ground storage which she said could be more closely monitored. She added that the possibility existed for low level nuclear waste to be included in the hazardous waste site.

Sunn assured her and the audience that state law does not permit the storage of any nuclear waste in the hazardous waste landfill operation being considered.

Leonard Stoltman, also a Marshall county commissioner, pointed out main drainage ditches on both sides of the Espelie township site in Marshall county and drainage in the area of other sites under consideration. He also noted the PCA refusal of sanitary landfill siting in the county.

Chairman Dunn said that the pollution control agency would do an environmental impact study in its review of sites given final consideration by the board.

Marshall county highway engineer reviewed cost estimates to upgrade roads into the area where proposed sites exist. He estimated costs of $280,000 per mile to upgrade dirt roads to nine-ton capacity, $120,000 per mile to improve five-ton roads to nine-ton capacity; and $80,000 per mile to improve seven-ton roads to nine-ton capacity.

Dunn said the waste management board could be expected to recommend that the state pay expense for road improvement and other possible costs which a community may incur as a result of the siting.

Mayor Lawrence Sunsdahl of Stephen urged the board to consider its terminology of "feasible and prudent" in site selection, bearing in mind the factors of distance, flooding, wildlife and others. He said he had visited with the management board members, found them to be committed to feasible and prudent action, and would not be afraid of their decision.

Joe Kotok, manager of Agassiz national wildlife refuge, emphasized that Agassiz refuge is one of 400 in the federal system of 76 million acres and is dedicated to propagation of migratory birds, preservation of natural ecosystems and wetlands. He said he believes the refuge has no excess lands available, that a hazardous waste site would not be compatible with refuge purposes and that the process of transferring public lands is established.

Dunn responded that the legislature felt all lands in the state should be considered. He noted that the federal environmental protection agency directed Minnesota to solve its hazardous waste problem without providing any funds and without setting any standards to follow. Then another federal agency appears to use the bureaucracy to block consideration of its lands in an attempt to solve the problem, he complained.

Kittson and Beltrami county representatives added their testimony to the hearing. Kenneth P. Olson, geohydrologist with Bruce A. Liesch Associates, Inc., reviewed his studies of the Kittson county site.

Rodney Benson, Beltrami county commissioner, chastised the waste management board for failure to pay attention to its own criteria, and for doing "a lot of unnecessary testing and getting the folks all riled up." He said the board was doing the same thing it had done in the Blackduck area where it was discovered that a river ran through the middle of the proposed site. "If you had called, just about anybody could have told you that," he said.

SOMETHING for everyone was included in the Christmas indoor flea market conducted in the city auditorium in Thief River Falls Saturday afternoon. More than 40 dealers registered to participate in the second annual event this year.

Education Hearing Set Tues. At BSU

Members of the education division of the Minnesota house appropriations committee will conduct an open hearing in Bemidji Tuesday (December 8) to receive campus level reactions to the Governor's recommendations for alleviating the state's $768 million revenue shortfall.

Hearing is set from 6:30 to 9 a.m. in Hagg-Sauer auditorium on the Bemidji State University campus.

Fact finding effort will address individual campus concerns of five post-secondary institutions in the region: Bemidji State university, Northland community college (Thief River Falls), Moorhead state university, Brainerd community college and the University of Minnesota Technical college at Crookston.

Each school will be afforded an opportunity to present testimony to the committee. Questions will be allowed from the floor as time permits.

Hearing is one of five being conducted by the committee throughout the state for regional input relating to education and the state's financial problems.

"We invite the public from the Bemidji university service area to attend this meeting, and extend an invitation to the communities of the other schools which are scheduled to make presentations."

In a related development, groups who had intended to send representatives to the all area university committee meeting scheduled for 7 p.m. at BSU Tuesday are urged to attend the 6:30 hearing.

Legislative appearance in Bemidji will not alter plans by Bemidji area individuals who are organizing a lobbying effort to the State Capitol December 10.

According to Dr. Tom Boates, the trip to St. Paul will proceed as scheduled with participation expected from Bemidji University, the BSU alumni association, the Bemidji chamber of commerce and a host of other organizations.

Several senators and representatives have indicated they will meet with the Bemidji delegation while arrangements have also been made to visit key committee chair persons.

Individuals interested in traveling to St. Paul Thursday should call the chamber of commerce, 751-3540, to reserve space on the bus.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in the Lord Jesus,

The feast of Christmas is fast approaching, the family feast, above all. If there is one time of the year that members of a family long to be together again in the love and warmth and acceptance of "belonging", it seems to be this celebration of the Birth of Christ.

And that is why I am writing this letter . . . to invite home any members of St. Bernard's Parish Family who might be away from home. It doesn't really matter what the reason for leaving may have been . . . we'd like to talk about it, ask forgiveness, if necessary, work through it with you, help you make the journey back home again.

You see, we miss you. And especially at Christmas-time which is about reconciliation with God in Jesus, we'd really like to bring about reconciliation with all the members of our Parish Family . . . not just for a while, but for good.

So please come home that we might celebrate Christmas together, as a family.

Love,

Legislators Urge Disaster Designation

Representative LeRoy Stumpf (District 1B) and Senator Marv Hanson (District 1) have requested Governor Al Quie and Congressman Arlan Stangeland to place an urgency in having Pennington and Red Lake counties declared disaster areas.

The two area legislators also wrote to Secretary of Agriculture John Block asking that he forward the request to President Reagan to declare the two counties disaster areas. Farmers incurring farm losses may apply for low interest disaster aid loans once the designation is made.

"Farmers in the area are facing significant crop losses due to excessive rain and unseasonably cold weather this year," said Hanson. "The weather has also made it impossible for many to complete plowing for next year which will cause problems for the 1982 crop," Hanson continued.

"We would hope that the disaster designation comes soon. There has been too much delay so far as it is," concluded Stumpf. "Area businesses and individuals should write the secretary of agriculture as well. We would hope that as many as possible would share their concern so this disaster declaration can be received."

the present time. Decision was made to drill on private land adjacent to the proposed candidate site on Agassiz refuge and consider the data obtained sufficiently accurate for evaluation proposes at this stage of the selection process.

The procedure to be followed to allow drilling to be done involves the filing of an application for a permit, an environmental assessment by the refuge manager, review of the assessment and recommendation of the refuge manager by the regional director, and a decision by the regional director as to whether or not the drilling would be compatible with the established purposes of the refuge. No application for a permit was filed to begin the process.

Because the board's visit to Thief River Falls involved several different activities, they are covered in separate articles in this issue of the Times.

Area Residents Testify At Board Meeting

perimeter of Agassiz national wildlife refuge, suggested to the board that many local fears could be softened if the board could produce people from areas in which hazardous waste sites are now being operated successfully.

Hagen said that people are opposed because they are concerned about potential health hazards and devaluation of property. "If we could talk to somebody who lives next to a site and get some first-hand information, it would probably help a lot," Hagen said.

Vice chairman Hunter and the remainder of the board agreed that Hagen's suggestion was excellent and said the board would certainly consider that idea for future meetings in this area and elsewhere.

Bill Dormady commented about the Beltrami county site, suggesting that the board maintain close contact with the Red Lake band of Chippewa Indians since the tribe owns scattered lands in the area affected. He also noted that drilling crews were working in the area during the firearms deer season without wearing orange clothing.

Shelly Steva, secretary-treasurer of the Agassiz Audubon society, read a resolution from the society in opposition to establishment of the sites.

LeRoy Stumpf, state representative, commented on the board's responsibilities and urged closer contact with people in the area affected.

Lyle Turtle of Plummer expressed concerned that Agassiz national wildlife refuge was receiving special treatment in that no drilling was being done there. He was informed by Hunter that the matter had been discussed previously by the board during its deliberations in the morning.

Mrs. Keith Hagen asked the board members if they would live in the area if the hazardous waste disposal facilities was sited here. "I would be proud to live here," vice chairman Hunter responded. Asked if he would be afraid of the potential danger from the facility, he quickly answered "No".

Vance Wiseth of Goodridge asked about the site selection process and expressed suspicion that criteria could be changed to suit the site instead of the site selected to meet the criteria.

"Our over-riding consideration," vice chairman Hunter said in closing the meeting, "will be the health and safety of the people of the state of Minnesota."

MAYOR BOB CARLSON welcomes the Minnesota waste management board to the public meeting Thursday evening in the Thief River Falls city auditorium. About 300 people were in attendance at the meeting which attracted coverage from area newspapers and television stations.

UNUSUAL and practical items were displayed at the second annual Christmas indoor flea market conducted Saturday in the Thief River Falls city auditorium. Over 40 dealers participated in the event.

Dear Readers,
During a lifetime, we develop close affection for members of our family, relatives and friends. We should desire to shield them from the problems that would arise from our unexpected death. Wise and thoughtful planning takes only a brief time, but it can ease much emotional and financial pain for those we love.
Respectfully,

Shopping Alternatives Can Save Cash

Retailers and manufacturers plan year round for the holiday season and so should consumers. Unless consumers budget for holiday spending, the season of good cheer could put a less-than-cheerful strain on cash flow. Certified public accountants (CPAs) point out that holiday spending for food, gifts, and entertainment is often grossly underbudgeted. To ease that burden, CPAs suggest consumers apply buying techniques businesses use to save money and time.

Look into savings at catalogue showrooms or mail order houses, the two fastest growing retailers in the industry. Mail order sales are up 14 per cent and catalogue showroom sales are growing even faster.

CPAs recommend using catalogues to compare prices. To make that process simpler, become familiar with which outlets sell what items. Catalogue showrooms hold down their overhead by avoiding seasonal and fashion items that require large inventories. They handle jewelry and watches, which are not seasonal.

To offer big discounts on certain items, showroom discounts on other items might not be as large. Using the manufacturer's suggested prices in the catalogues consumers can compute the savings on different items. The effective dates for most catalogues are clearly displayed; but if manufacturer's prices shift dramtitcally, the catalogue's prices may be raised to retain the store's profit margin or lowered to remain in competition with other stores.

When comparing prices, add the cost for gas or transportation to the store price as well as fees for a babysitter and non-compensated time lost from work. To mail order prices, add expenses for postage and handling, and costs for phone calls if toll free service is not available. Whether it is a catalogue showroom, department store, or mail order house, ask if the purchase may be gift wrapped or mailed from the store, if it must be sent.

Biggest savings may be in time and energy. If the price differences among all these options are not significant, incidental expenses might make mail order more convenient and cost effective. However, for impulse buyers, shopping by catalogues with their 24-hour service using major credit cards, could be devastating to the budget. To shop efficiently call ahead about prices, sizes and available stock.

If consumers have money to spend, but not the cash, credit cards may be the answer. Be careful about overextending credit and dragging payments through the new year; such practices only add the finance charge to the principal cost.

Time, rather than money, may be the shopping problem. If so, the consumer should consider hiring someone to shop for him or her. While professional services are available from businesses, some department stores offer personal shoppers. Consumers can even call and have items ready for approval on appointment. Another alternative is hiring a responsible young adult in the neighborhood. With all this help, however, consumers still need to provide ideas for the shopper.

The consumer who never seems to know what to buy, may consider gift certificates, which eliminate conflicts in taste and practically assure the gift will be well received. Also, the recipient can profit by using the certificate at a January sale.

For the unusual gift, try a museum shop. For members of the museum, a discount could provide considerable savings. For example, if a 15 per cent discount is available on an $85 statute, $12.75 is saved.

Merry Christmas

SBA Stresses 'Quality' In Businesses

"Quality" will be the new watchword in directing guarantees to small business, the U.S. small business administration (BSA) announced.

Small business administration administrator Michael Cardenas explained: "Our numerical goals have been abolished and the operating plan for our SBA offices will be to incorporate a new policy of quality over quantity."

"What I want to emphasize is that SBA is for everyone, everyone who wants to start a small business or expand an existing one," Cardenas stated. "We have changed the philosophy governing the administration of all our loan programs to emphasize the quality of loans versus the quantity of loans. I believe we can emphasize quality and still fulfill our role as the lender of last resort."

"By statute, we must require reasonable assurance of repayment of all loans, and that will be the ultimate requirement in the future," he added.

"It is obvious to many at the small business administration that we are often providing a more valuable service to the potential business person when we reject a loan guaranty request, when that person is not ready to assume the responsibilities and obligations of a business venture."

MORE THAN 40 dealers registered to participate in the second annual Christmas indoor flea market conducted in the Thief River Falls city auditorium this past Saturday. John Zukatis, who arranged the December event as well as the summer series of flea markets at Floyd B. Olson park, will be moving out of state January 1 and will be replaced by Merle Kruschke.

ENERGY INDEPENDENCE DAY IN DECEMBER?

Well, not quite, but we're trying. Actually, the Minnesota Energy Agency would like our state to celebrate a little less energy dependence each day. WE NEED YOUR HELP!

Minnesota is totally dependent on others for oil, natural gas, and coal to meet our energy demands. But we do have peat and special crops, like cattails, which we think will some day meet fifteen to forty per cent of our energy needs.

The State Legislature asked us to develop a proposal for special energy crop research for our state. We want to talk to you about it and hear your ideas.

Please join us for a meeting in Thief River Falls.

Bus Deregulation

Some of the nation's major bus lines have been pushing hard for federal legislation which would deregulate the industry and permit them to operate without much of the cumbersome bureaucratic red tape which accompanies regulation. It would seem the thought of deregulation is an idea whose time has come.

To be sure, deregulation may well cause some problems for communities — especially smaller communities with low traffic volume — by resulting in the discontinuance of service. It is no secret that the bus companies are as interested in the ability to get out of providing service on unprofitable runs as they are in the potential for providing service where there is a dollar to be earned.

But we have never felt that the government should be a taskmaster to the extent that it could dictate to free enterprise how its operations should be run. Certainly it is improper for a government bureau to compel a private industry to operate part of its business inefficiently and often unprofitably, always at the expense of people in other parts of the operation who must subsidize the nonproductive runs through larger than necessary fares.

We think it is necessary to honestly recognize, however, that to some communities the losses of bus service will be very real. The argument that deregulation may well provide more efficient bus service a short distance away is little consolation to the potential passenger who has no way to travel that short distance. And the intercity bus passenger is generally one without the availability of an automobile or the means for air travel.

Bus companies point to Florida as a model for deregulation. Intrastate bus and trucking industries were deregulated there in June of 1980. Some routes were dropped, some new were added. Fare adjustments were made, both up and down. New communities were served with the net result that more people now have bus service in that state than before deregulation went into effect. And a poll of its members by the Florida chamber of commerce revealed that 92 per cent of those responding claimed that deregulation had either a positive effect or virtually no change at all.

Northern Minnesota is not Florida, of course, and the comparison may not be valid here. Our population is sparse, towns are widely scattered and distance is much more of a factor. But that doesn't change the condition of what's right in a free enterprise system. Airlines, auto travel and railroads are now free of much regulation and buses should be allowed to compete on an equitable basis.

The country's intercity buses in 1980 established a mark of 144 passenger miles per gallon of fuel used, compared to 45 passenger miles per gallon for Amtrak, 42 for private automobiles and only 23 for the airlines. Buses serve 14,600 American communities.

Bus deregulation bill has passed the U.S. House of Representatives with Congressman Arlan Stangland of this congressional district voting in favor of the bill. Senate consideration will be next before the full congress will decide whether to untie the government reins on the interstate bus industry.

The Burden Of Proof

Following comments are by Robert F. Dee, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of SmithKline corporation:

Many bitter tears of doubt are being shed these days over the administration's new economic program. Even "The Wall Street Journal," for example, has published a number of guest editorials lamenting its demise.

The writers cite persuasive evidence — stock and bond markets are down, interest rates are high, the federal deficit is increasing, social security is in trouble, capital investment is slack and tax revenues are expected to be lower.

Yet I'm writing this message only 15 days after the first steps (and certainly not the last) have been taken to carry out President Reagan's plan for the country's economic recovery.

It's a maxim of American law that the burden of proof is on the plaintiff, but there hasn't been time to collect solid evidence on the success of failure of the administration's program. It only went into effect on October 1.

Those who are already reporting the death of the President's program are greatly exaggerating.

The fact is that beneficial changes in the economy are already visible. Virtually every major measure of economic activity shows that the economy has actually improved since President Reagan took office in January.

+The inflation rate, at 12.6 per cent when Mr. Reagan assumed office, has now come down to around 10 per cent.

+The "misery index" — the unemployment rate merged with the inflation rate — has dropped three percentage points.

+The "Reagan dollar" is 13 per cent stronger.

+The projected 1982 budget deficit — unpleasant but temporarily necessary — is no worse than the deficits for the two years before the administration's new economic program. And those earlier deficits were incurred during years of rising, not declining, tax rates.

There seems to be a selective silence about all these good signs. Perhaps it's only natural that those clinging to the liberal views of the past aren't liberal enough now to admit that Mr. Reagan's program is already benefitting Americans.

Moreover, most of the time-tested econometric studies from reliable and politically detached organizations predict that the new program will bring solid gains to our economy in the long run.

And the long run isn't all that long. Some studies show improvement by as early as 1983 — inflation slackening off, capital investment increasing, unemployment dropping, interest rates at reasonable levels and substantial upward movement in the stock and bond markets.

Best of all, the President is keeping his promises. When he said, "If not us, who? If not now, when?" he obviously wasn't indulging in political rhetoric.

On the score of taxation alone, American citizens know for certain that the stream is flowing their way. When President Reagan took office, federal taxes consumed 22 per cent of the gross national product. By the time his first term is over, they'll be down to 19.5 per cent.

The administration's budget cuts have already brought a two per cent decline in spending, measured in noninflated dollars. What's more, we Americans are getting our first glimpse of regulatory relief in decades.

Why, then, are we hearing so many lamentations about the administration's new economic recovery program — even from respected observers?

There are three reasons:

First, the program thoroughly contradicts the long unchallenged idea that better government requires bigger government.

Second, the U.S. government has operated on completely different economic premises for the past 40 years or more.

Third, when you come right down to it, every American is from Missouri.

In the case of the new economic program, the bitter tears are too many and too soon.

Frequently Used Words

Which of these four words crops up most frequently in conversation in America: "a," "I," "the," or "you"?

According to language expert, Stuart Flexner, the word is "I." The second most common word is "you," followed by "the" and "a."

The other 16 words that make the "top twenty" linguistic chart (in alphabetical order) are: and, be, for, get, have, he, in, is, it, of, on, she, that, to, was and will.

All of those most frequently used words are monosyllables, and none has more than four letters.

Flexner, author of I Hear America Talking, adds that 50 simple words account for aboug 60 per cent of all speech. Between 1500 and 2000 words make up about 99 per cent of everything we say.

You may try to build your vocabulary, but you'll still lean on those hard-working words for the bulk of your speech — if you expect to communicate with the rest of us.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Psychology Professor: "Research has shown that a hysterical girl may often be quieted with a warm and passionate kiss."

Student: "Is there any research on how to get them hysterical?"

"My hands are dirtier than yours," bragged one boy to another.

"Why not?" the other retorted defensively. "You're a year older than me!"

Pessimistic thought for the week: "The light you see at the end of the tunnel may be a gorilla with a flashlight."

DAILY INSPECTION of main pumping station is part of job for Thief River Falls Wastewater Department Supervisor Leland "Bud" Enge. When level in holding tank (indicated by guage) reaches certain depth, pumps are automatically turned on. Device directly above records volume pumped, which averages about 1.4 million gallons per day. "Most people just take it for granted. . . until it backs up," said Enge.

Car Owner Is Easy To Shop For Says AIC

Whether you have a lot or a little to spend, there is a gift to suit your budget for Christmas giving to any car owner, says Automotive Information Council (AIC).

For those with liberal budgets, there are many possibilities. Car buff might enjoy receiving a set of custom wheels for his car. Tape decks and stereo systems also are popular gifts and are often on sale before the holidays.

Cruise control, luggage rack or anti-theft device also make nice gifts, and framed prints of famous cars and "coffee table" photo books of classic cars are popular items with car fans.

For those with more conservative budgets, there are still many gift possibilities, such as battery jumper cables, fire extinguisher or first aid kit.

Trouble light with long cord, mini-vacuum cleaner and tire pressure gauge make nice gifts because they can make maintaining a car easier.

Road atlas, compass or litter bucket are especially good for people who take driving vacations.

Subscription to one of many automotive magazines also could be considered. Check newsstands for one which might be appropriate. Some specialize in new-car tests, others in racing and performance.

If you still can't make up your mind, check into gift certificates which could be used toward services such as oil change, tune-up, or even car wash. Many motorists neglect proper maintenance, so gift certificate could provide them with incentive to keep their vehicle safe and more efficient, says AIC.

Regardless of cost, all of these items are practical and make motoring more pleasurable, convenient or safer.

Christmas — A Time For Recalling Fond Memories

by Ink Mendelsohn
Smithsonian news service

All that glitters may not be gold. But in this case it was. James Clements, a railroad brakeman who sturck it rich in the Klondike in 1897, decorated his Christmas tree that year with 70,000 dollars worth of gold nuggets.

On the other hand, the next year, a Pennsylvania farmer trimmed his tree with stuffed squirrels and chipmunks, simply proving that all manner of favorite things, be they serendipitous gold nuggets or stuffed trophies of the hunt, are likely to turn up as ornaments on American Christmas trees.

Many people cherish as Christmas ornaments family keepsakes, gifts from friends and especially creations of the children. "I treasure all the Christmas decorations the children made at school down through the years," says Nancy Reagan.

As an advocate for America's artists, Joan Mondale always made certain that, during the holiday season, the former vice president's house was filled with their handmade ornaments. As for her personal favorites," "The ornaments our children have made over the years are treasures, and I think if I must select one, it is the shiny metal rim of a mason jar framing a photograph of our three children."

Christmas tree becomes a kind of evergreen family album to be admired anew each holiday season. This year, what do you suppose Stanley Marcus, spirit behind Neiman-Marcus Christmas catalog, will be admiring most on his own tree? A miniature diamond-studded cowboy hat? A tiny pair of platinum boots? Actually, his favorite ornament is a simple natural wood angel.

Angels are also favorite ornaments of several other well-known Americans. "I sprinkle them on my tree," famed mezzo-soprano Shirley Verrett says of her special collection of paper and ceramic angles. As for tennis champion Tracy Austin, "Every year the Austin family gathers around our tree and puts the angel on top, and that angel's my favorite."

An ornament with wings is also the favorite of actor Paul Winfield — a white origami bird "that looks so perfect on its natural green tree with small twinkling white lights."

"I love anything that twinkles," reveals general director of New York City Opera — an appropriate statement coming from a star like Beverly Sills.

Frank Mankiewicz, president of National Public Radio, is fondest of his family's homespun treasures, which he hopes will become family heirlooms. "Each year my wife makes patchwork ornaments for the tree. Her first one, made years ago, is my favorite."

Family tradition and candlelight have always been important ingredients in achieving a warm holiday mood. Another diva, Roberta Peters, counts among her most precious possessions the Hanukkah minorah given her when she was in Israel during the Six-Day War.

Young Superman may have had memories of a shimmering, green crystal, but Christopher Reeves, according to his mother, Mrs. Tristam Johnson, of Princeton, N.J., loved "the real candles on his childhood Christmas tree."

Mothers and fathers and all the rest of us have fond holiday memories.

Goldie Hawn's mother, Laura Hawn, recalls the Christmas Goldie decided she was unhappy with how dining room wallpaper looked for holidays. Her parents came home one night to find that Goldie had made a gigantic gift out of the entire dining room — papering walls with Christmas wrap.

That greatest of Christmas keepers, Charles Dickens in "Tale of Two Cities" remembered, "It was the best of times, it was the worst of times." And so it was for actor Robert Redford. "I remember the Christmas I got the most presents, and I remember the Christmas when our family was far from home and I got no presents at all."

Some Christmas memories are bittersweet. Former Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus remembers his favorite Christmas tree — one his wife Carol saved for him until February the year he came back from Korea.

And some Christmas memories are just plain sweet. Former astronaut, Sen. John Glenn (D-Ohio) recalls his favorite Christmas Eve, one his family shared with a rural Maryland family, perhaps poor in dollars but rich in musical talent. Glenn family provided the Christmas feast, and their hosts provided an evening of Christmas song.

This Christmas, no doubt, will be one to remember for star Yankee pitcher Tommy John and his family. Late this summer, Tommy's son, two-year-old Travis, fell from a window and was critically injured. He lay in a coma for two weeks. Today, the tot is fully recovered and will celebrate his third birthday in December. Hanging on their Christmas tree will be Travis' favorite ornament — a sterling silver snowflake on which his name and birthdate are engraved, a gift from Tommy John's former boss, Dodger President Peter O'Malley.

This was also the first investigation into a labor problem, and partly due to this inquiry, a child labor law was passed in 1836 according to "Labor Firsts in America," a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Answers from the Bible by Pastor Don Poros

Q. Pastor Don, "What causes a perfectly normal, likeable, congenial human being to suddenly react with heat and anger over some of the simplest things?"

A. The full realization and acceptance of the answer to that question provides the Christian with his first giant step toward its cure.

Basically all anger comes from one source, an ugly word called selfishness. Although we love to excuse our weaknesses and justify them to ourselves as we nurse our grudges and indulge in angry, revengeful, bitter feelings, they are all motivated by selfishness. When I am angry, it is because someone has violated my rights and I am interested only in myself.

Anger and bitterness can make a person emotionally upset until he is not himself. In this state he often makes decisions that are harmful, wasteful or embarrassing. We are intensely emotional creatures, designed so by God, but if we permit anger to dominate us, it will squelch the richer emotion of love.

The highest price of all paid for an angry, bitter disposition is in the spiritual realm. Jesus Christ came to give us not only eternal life, but abundant life here and now. This abundant life is the spirit-filled life that enables me to have self-control which is a fruit of the Spirit, Galatians 5:22-23. Continual grieving of the Spirit of God through anger keeps the child of God from enjoying all that Jesus Christ has for him today.

James 1:20 teaches "The wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God."

Proverbs 6:34 says "Jealously is the rage of a man; therefore he will not spare in the day of vengence."

Psalms 37:8 L.B. teaches "Stop your anger! Turn off your wrath. Don't fret and worry — it only leads to harm."

Galatians 6:7 says "Whatsoever a persons sows, that shall he also reap."

NWAC Will Disband

Began as a football conference in the fall of 1955, the Northwest Athletic Conference (NWAC) will disband following the 1981-82 school year, it was announced last week as conference athletic directors met at Winger.

Thief River Falls, East Grand Forks, Crookston, Fergus Falls and Bemidji are current NWAC members. The conference offers competition in seven sports: boys and girls basketball; boys and girls tennis; boys and girls golf; boys and girls indoor and outdoor track; boys and girls cross country; volleyball for girls; and baseball for boys.

Demise of the conference began when Crookston and East Grand Forks refused to play Bemidji and Fergus Falls in football, citing declining enrollment figures as the reasons for not wanting to play the Class AA-size Lumberjacks and Otters in the Class A conference.

All five NWAC members played as independents in football this past fall, with Thief River Falls, Crookston and East Grand Forks competing as Class A teams, while Bemidji and Fergus Falls played as Class AA clubs.

Since football was a primary reason for joining the NWAC, Fergus Falls announced earlier its plans to leave the conference. Bemidji followed suit Wednesday night.

Ironically, except in football, most NWAC members will continue to play each other in the other sports. In some sports the NWAC competition was one of the highlights of the season — cross country, tennis, golf and track. Those titles were decided under a tournament-type situation. Pennant races in basketball, volleyball and baseball created addition interest during regular season play.

Another loss will be all-conference honors now awarded in basketball. All-conference selections were major interest items in football and basketball, and as it happened in football this fall, a major void will be felt without the post-season individual awards.

Track joined footabll as an NWAC sport in 1957; followed by golf in 1961; cross country in 1962; baseball in 1963; tennis in 1966; hockey in 1968; and basketball, wrestling and indoor tack all in 1973. Girls sports were added to the conference in 1980. Prior to dropping football, the NWAC did away with hockey standings in 1972 and quit sponsoring a wrestling meet in 1976.

Roseau and Breckenridge were also NWAC members at one time.

Miscellaneous

+Bill Colpitts, who enters his second season as Fergus Falls hockey coach, announced that the Otters have set their goal as reaching the Section 8 tournament finals this season. Colpitts told Roger Johnson of the Fergus Falls Journal that the Otters accomplished their goal of gaining the sectional semifinals last season (losing to Thief River Falls 3-2), going that far on "determination and hard work." Thief River Falls visits Fergus Falls Saturday. In a preseason poll of Section 8 coaches, the Prowlers were picked to finish fourth — behind Roseau, East Grand Forks and Bemidji — while the Otters were picked to finish fifth.

+ Section 8 preseason hockey jamboree played in the Thief River Falls sports arena Nov. 28, sidelined two of the area's most promising players. Thief River Falls defenseman Steve Olson suffered a shoulder injury that is expected to keep him out of the Prowlers' line-up two or three weeks, while Warroad forward John Bjorkman suffered a wrist injury that may put him out of action for six weeks.

+ Ralph Anderson of Detroit Lakes, reviewing the Lakers' 1981 high school football season, figires the Mid-State Conference champions (who beat Thief River Falls 13-8 early in the year) stacked up well against the MSHSL Class A state playoff field. "Was the 1981 Detroit Lakes high school football team good enough to win the Minnesota State High School League's Class A championship? Nobody will ever know, of course, but an inspection of the scores through the playoff rounds would indicate that coach Dick Riedberger's Lakers certainly would have been able to make a strong showing against some of the state's Class A teams," wrote Anderson. Detroit Lakes lost to Breckenridge 20-7 in a post-season qualifying game matching conference champions, with the Cowboys then falling to Hermantown 31-30 in the state quarterfinals. The Hawks, in turn, reached the Class A finals where they lost to St. Peter 18-14. "The Laker-Breck game was one which featured missed Detroit Lakes scoring opportunities," noted Anderson, "for the Lakers twice were turned back without a point after penetrating within the Breckenridge five-yard line."

+ Troy Hendricks was named the most valuable player on the 1981 Bemidji high school football team. He also earned the top defensive back award while Jeff Johnson was named the top defensive lineman and Eric Bakke was tabbed the top offensive lineman. Mike Helm, Jeff Kelm and Jason Gangeness were selected to serve as captains of the 1982 Bemidji team.

SPRAWLING SAVE by Crookston goalie Jon Brekken stopped Thief River Falls wing Jim Dillon on this second period play in Saturday's Section 8 high school hockey game played in the sports arena. Brekken came up with 32 saves as the Pirates defeated the Prowlers 4-3 in the 1981-82 season opener for both teams.

Crookston Holds On For 4-3 Win Over Thief River Falls

Fans attending Saturday's 1981-82 Section 8 high school hockey season opener between Thief River Falls and Crookston in the sports arena actually watched three different games: In the first game they saw Thief River Falls skate to a 2-0 first period lead; In the second game they watched Crookston roll up a 4-2 edge through the next period-and-a-half; And finally in the third game they witnessed a stirring rally by the Prowlers that fell just short in a 4-3 loss to the rival Pirates.

"There were two different games, maybe three," pointed out Thief River Falls coach Wendell Grand. "We're disappointed with the loss; we're disappointed with out play in the second period — total contrast to the way we played in the first period — but we have to be pleased with the way the kids battled back."

Both coaches commented on their respective inexperienced line-ups. Crookston coach Mike Lundby pointed out the Pirates had only three regulars back from a year ago. "We're more than green," he noted. "But we were down 2-0 and didn't panic. We're a young, experienced team, but with the goaltending we have, if we can get some shots and score some goals we'll be right in there."

The Pirates' goaltending was handled by Jon Brekken Saturday. The former Mount St. Benedict netminder, who joined several other MSB students on the cooperative sponsorship Crookston hockey team this winter, handled 32 shots. His strong play left Gary Vaudrin, last year's starter for the Pirates on the bench. Splitting duty, Thief River Falls goalies Doug Odegaard, a sophomore who started, and Paul Wennberg, a senior who came on in relief midway through the second period, combined for 18 saves. They gave up two goals apiece.

And while the Prowlers started a sophomore in the nets, they also had sophomores manning three of the four defensive spots. Grand said he was concerned about the Prowlers' young defensemen going into the game, but as it turned out that area was a pleasant surprise.

"We're pleased with the way they (defensemen) played. That was one of the good things that came out of the game," he mentioned.

Thief River Falls scored a couple of pretty first period goals to control things early. Sophomore Tim Bottem tipped in a loose puck at the goal mouth at 9:46 on a play set up by linemate Tom Ose, who made a great-one-on-one move to get by a defenseman. Brekken stopped Ose, but couldn't cover the puck as Bottem scored.

Just four seconds after a Crookston penalty expired late in the period, Thief River Falls worked a perfect 3-on-2 rush for a 2-0 lead. A nifty pass from Bottem set up Kenville, who lifted the shot into the corner at 13:15.

It was all Crookston in the second period, though, as Rich Clauson convereted a 3-on-2 opportunity at 4:25; big Paul Miller sailed the puck through a maze of players at 5:21; and sophomore Rick Dahle scored the first of two goals during a 4-on-4 situation at the nine-minute mark.

Dahle' slap shot at the 10:25 mark of the third period went though Wennberg's pads for a 4-2 game, sending some of the crowd to the exits.

But that's when it got interesting. Thief River Falls, after missing several good scoring opportunities earlier in the period, sliced the gap to 4-3 at 13:42 — with just one second left on a power play. Mark Harder's slap shot from the blue line was tipped by Tim Bergland.

Bottem narrowly missed the tying goal with 1:03 left as his deflection went just wide, with Bergland and Kenville also getting good scoring chances in the final 30 seconds as the Prowlers pulled their goalie in favor of an extra attacker.

"We obviously had enough opportunities to win the game at the end," confirmed Grand.

"The first two periods were even," said Lundby, meaning the Prowlers won the first period and the Pirates took the second. "Our inexperience showed again in the third period. We stopped skating. We wanted to protect that lead."

Thief River Falls will be on the road this week, visiting Fergus Falls Saturday.

Lincoln Defense Nets 39-30 Win At Roseau

A struggling offense was saved by some strong defensive play Friday as the Lincoln high school basketball team opened its 1981-82 season with a 39-30 win at Roseau.

The low-scoring affair found Roseau ahead 6-4 at the end of the first quarter, with Thief River Falls taking a 16-10 lead into halftime and nursing a 26-19 edge into the fourth quarter.

"I'm satisfied with the defense," reported first-year Thief River Falls head coach Tom Hunt. "We had good half-court pressure, and that's what won the game for us — we forced them to take low-percentage shots."

Neither team could brag offensively. The Rams' Roger Lund was the game's only double figure scorer, finishing with 12 points.

Thief River Falls shot just 30 per cent from the field, hitting 16 of 53 shots, while Roseau fared little better at 33 per cent, making 11 of 33 tries.

"Offensively I was disappointed," admitted Hunt. "I was disappointed because we stood around. We had no movement the whole night. Until the kids prove we can run the offense consistently, I'm concerned."

The Prowlers were 7-for-17 at the free throw line (64 per cent), with the Rams going 8-for-19 (42 per cent). Thief River Falls had a 37-21 rebound edge, with Mark Gere grabbing 10 rebounds for the winners. The Rams topped the turnover charts 23-19.

Thief River Falls was a 65-24 winner in the junior varsity game, overcoming a 13-12 first quarter deficit by out-scoring Roseau 19-0 in the second quarter. Curt Jensen led the winners with 12 points.

The Prowlers visit Grafton Tuesday for a 7:30 p.m. game.

Prowlers Edge Rabbits 48-46

LeAnn Paetznick and Tara Nicholson combined for 35 points and 39 rebounds Saturday as the Lincoln high school girls basketball team edged Tri-County 48-46 at Karlstad.

"They played super," said Thief River Falls coach Tom Schafer in describing the performances by his two seniors. Paetznick scored 19 points and had 21 rebounds, while Nicholson hit 16 points and grabbed 18 rebounds.

Tri-County, trailing 48-46, had the ball with a chance to win the game in the final seconds, but watched as an errant pass rolled out of bounds at the buzzer.

It was close all the way. Thief River Falls owned narrow quarter leads of 12-10, 21-19 and 33-32.

"We played four good quarters of basketball," reported Shafer, who was disappointed in the Prowlers' season-opening performance earlier in the week, a 43-34 home court loss to Fisher.

Vickie Helling matched the play of Paetznick and Nicholson with a 20-point, 19-rebound game for the Rabbits.

Thief River Falls was 19-for-52 from the field (37 per cent) and 10-for-23 at the free throw line (43 per cent). Tri-County was 15-for-49 from the field (31 per cent) and 16-for-32 at the line (50 per cent).

Northmen Beat Alumni 109-82

Mark Simon, a freshman from Post Falls, Idaho, scored 28 points and pulled down 12 rebounds Saturday, playing a "fantastic game," according to coach Chet Engelman, in leading the Northland community college basketball team to a 109-82 season-opening victory over the Northland Alumni.

Five Northmen hit double-figures in the high-scoring affair. Co-captains Kyle Hams had 19 points and nine assists, while Matt Fontes scored 18 points and 10 rebounds. Derek Stokes added 15 points and six assists, while Duncan Gregory had 13 points and 17 rebounds.

Northland built a 53-40 halftime lead.

"It was a good ball game," reported Engelman. "Our kids played fairly decent. We've got a few things to work on, but all-in-all I was happy with the way we played."

Keith Charbonneau led the Alumni with 22 points, while Joe Kraska hit 16, Doug Engelman 12 and Willie Bayne 10.

Northland was 54-for-93 from the field (58 per cent) and 5-for-8 at the free throw line (63 per cent). The Alumni were 37-for-96 from the floor (39 per cent) and 8-for-9 at the line (89 per cent).

High School Wrestling . . .

Early Oklee Lead Beats Cards 43-24

It was kind of like a preview of an inter-squad match next year when Oklee defeated Erskine-Plummer 43-24 in a high school wrestling match at Erskine Thursday.

The Bobcats' lower weight strength rolled up a 40-0 lead through the first seven matches before the Cardinals' upper weights took four of the final five matches, including one forfeit.

"They're super tough in those lower weights," acknowledged Erskine-Plummer coach Gary Brantl.

In 1982-83 they'll be together. Plans are already underway that will have Plummer and Oklee utilizing a cooperative wrestling program next winter. Currently, the Cardinals sponsor a cooperative program with Erskine and the Bobcats have the same arrangement with McIntosh-Winger, although the Scots do not have a wrestler on the team this year.

"We've got some good lightweights, but nothing in the upper weights," confirmed Oklee coach Charles Bishop, "and that's where they (Cardinals) are strong. With most of the kids underclassmen on both teams, we're really excited about next year."

It was the 1981-82 season opener for the Bobcats. They host East Grand Forks Tuesday in their home opener and visit Waubun Friday. The Cardinals are 0-2 in dual meet competition. They host Crookston Tuesday and entertain Roseau Friday, with both matches scheduled to be held at Plummer.

Burnsville Is State Champ In Swimming

Lincoln high school senior Lisa Desrocher, competing in the diving portion of the 1981 Minnesota state high school girls swimming meet at the University of Minnesota, failed to survive the initial cut after three preliminary round dives Friday.

Desrocher, the state meet qualifier for the fourth time, reportedly dove well, "but the judging just didn't show it," said Thief River Falls coach John Hustad.

Kelly Johnson of Irondale won the state meet diving title for the third straight year with 444.80 points.

Desrocher was the only Thief River Falls entry in the two-day state meet which was completed Saturday in the Cooke Hall pool on the Minnesota campus in Minneapolis.

Burnsville won the team title with 150 points.

Hockey JV Is 8-0 Winner

Lincoln high school junior varsity high school hockey team opened its 1981-82 season with an 8-0 victory over Crookston Saturday.

Hibbing opened up a 14-4 lead five minutes into the game and rolled to an easy tournament-opening 70-52 win over host Northland.

Northland turnovers helped stake Hibbing to its early edge, but the Cardinals also dominated the boards and utilized a fast break offense in building a 26-12 cushion at the 10-minute mark of the first half.

Point-spread continued to increase, 37-17 with five minutes remaining and 44-28 at intermission, with Northland's best offense coming at the free throw line where the Northwomen were 12-for-15 in the first half — producing their final nine points at the charity stripe.

Hibbing enjoyed a 62-35 cushion at the mid-way mark of the second half.

The Cardinals shot an impressive 51 per cent from the field for the game, hitting 34 of 67 shots. The Northwomen shot 35 per cent, making 15 of 61 attempts. Northland was a strong 22-for-29 at the free throw line for the game (76 per cent), with Hibbing 2-for-2 at the line. Northland topped the turnover charts 28-23.

Irene Kepler of Hibbing was 14-for-17 from the field for the game for her 28 points to lead all scorers. Shelly Taggart led Northland with 20 points, equally divided between the free throw line and the field.

Huskies Edge Bobcats 46-45 In First Game

Sophomore Jeff Langan made both ends of a bonus free throw situation in the final minutes of play, providing the winning points as Goodridge edged Oklee 46-45 in area high school basketball action Friday.

Langan's free throws gave the host Huskies a 46-43 lead, and they surrendered an uncontested lay-up at the end to the Bocats' Leif Fore.

It was the 1981-82 season opener for Goodridge. Oklee fell to 1-1, having beaten Plummer 78-35 in its opener Tuesday.

"We were very happy with our first game," explained Goodridge coach Rick Nelson, whose team is staffed mostly by inexperienced players. "We've got some little things to work on, but I was really happy with our defense, and with the way our kids kept their composure down the stretch."

Goodridge led 19-18 at halftime, but trailed by as many as six points early in the fourth quarter before coming back.

Mike Drangstveit, one of the few lettermen Nelson has on hand, led Goodridge with 15 points, while Langan added 13. Jon Lindquist scored 17 for Oklee, 15 in the second half. Kevin Enerson added 13 for Bobcats.

Goodridge was 18-for-49 from the field (38 per cent) and 10-for-18 from the free throw line (56 per cent). Oklee was 16-for-53 from the floor (30 per cent) and 13-for-25 at the line (52 per cent). Oklee held a 37-23 rebound advantage.

The Huskies will be idle until Tuesday, December 15, when they host Oslo.

Grygla-Gatzke ran up a 17-10 first quarter lead and maintained that edge the rest of the night as the Eagles opened the 1981-82 basketball season with a 50-40 win over visiting Strandquist Friday.

"We started out quick," pointed out Grygla-Gatzke coach Vern Johnson, "but we got into foul trouble and had to wade through—the second half."

The Eagles maintained a 40-34 spread at halftime.

Mike Brateng led the winners with 16 points before he fouled out. Tracy Tunheim led Strandquist with 11 points.

Johnson said he was very happy with the way his inexperienced players performed in the opener. "Our newcomers came through real well for us," he reported.

Both teams had trouble topping the 30 per cent shooting figure from the field. The Eagles were 4-for-8 at the free throw line where the Warriors were 8-for-17.

Kathy Walker Is All-Region In Volleyball

Captain of the 1981 Northland community college volleyball team, Kathy Walker, a sophomore from Thief River Falls, has been named to the 1981 Region 13 all-region volleyball team, it was announced by school officials.

"This is a very nice honor for Kathy," noted Northland coach Deb Jacobson. "She has been a very solid volleyball player the past two years. She is an all-around volleyball player with excellent skills in setting, hitting, as well as serving. Northland's success was largely due to Kathy's contributions."

Northland won the Northwest Division this fall, earning a spot in the Minnesota state volleyball tournament.

Region 13 is a five-state area covering Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Wisconsin and Upper Michigan.

THIEF RIVER FALLS goalie Paul Wennberg looked like he made the save, but Crookston's Rick Dahle drove a third period slap shot through the goaltender's pads Saturday for what proved to be the winning goal in the third period of the Pirates' 4-3 Section 8 high school hockey win over the Prowlers in the sports arena.

Skippers Upset Warriors In Area Girls Basketball

A major early season upset in the North Border Conference highlighted Thursday's area girls high school basketball results as a young Middle River team — staffed mostly by sophomores — stunned highly regarded Warroad 32-26.

"That has to be a big one for us," said Middle River coach Tom Neibauer, whose team played poorly in a season-opening 27-24 loss to Strandquist earlier in the week. "They really did a good job on the boards; they played a good floor game; and our defense was good, we didn't let them get inside at all."

Middle River trailed 18-16 at halftime, but went ahead 26-22 at the end of the third quarter.

Paula Rananten led the Skippers with 13 points, with Janet Marvin getting 14 for the host Warriors.

Missed free throws made a difference in the game, with Middle River making just four of 13 gift tosses that could have opened up the contest, while Warroad sank just two of 10 free throws that could have closed the gap.

Sue Olson scored 15 points and pulled down 11 rebounds while Jill Johnson had 14 points and nine rebounds to lead Marshall County Central to a 46-29 home-court victory over Strandquist.

Although the Nordics led 27-16 at halftime, they didn't play as well as they did in an 85-26 season-opening win over Roseau Tuesday, said Coach Tom Mjelde, who was very disappointed in a 2-for-17 performance at the free throw line (11 per cent).

Marshall County Central was 22-for-65 from the field (33 per cent), while Strandquist was 10-for-43 (23 per cent). The Warriors were 9-for-20 at the free throw line (45 per cent). The Nordics owned a 43-29 rebound edge.

Girls Basketball . . .

Eagles Beat Cards 69-52

Plummer scored enough points, said coach Rick Koivisto, but the Cardinals' defense couldn't stop Argyle Thursday as the Eagles ran up a 69-52 girls basketball win in the Pershing high school gym.

It was the 1981-82 season opener for the Cardinals, who are thin on numbers.

"It wasn't bad," Koivisto said of the Plummer performance, "we just ran out of gas playing five girls."

Argyle built a 42-26 halftime lead, but Plummer stayed close until the Eagles out-scored the Cardinals 16-9 over the final eight minutes.

Four Argyle scorers hit double figures, but the game's top scorers were Jody Pahlen and Bonnie Fisher of Plummer with 24 and 18 points, respectively. Sheila Sorenson helped out with 17 rebounds.

Argyle held the edge in shooting, going 28-for-60 from the field (47 per cent) and 13-for-19 at the free throw line (68 per cent), while Plummer was 20-for-64 from the floor (31 per cent) and 12-for-22 at the line (55 per cent).

Fisher	29
Goodridge	27

Goodridge carried a one-point lead into the final minute of play but lost a 29-27 season-opening decision to Fisher Thursday.

It was an encouraging performance by the inexperienced Huskies, said coach Georgine Troska. "I was impressed," she said. "We just had a couple of turnovers that hurt."

Fisher owned a 20-12 halftime lead.

Troska praised the performances of Mary Jo Kiesow, who scored 14 points and grabbed 11 rebounds, and Susie Johnson, who overcame back problems to collect eight points and eight rebounds.

Goodridge shot 33 per cent from the field by making nine of 27 attempts and shot 50 per cent at the free throw line by hitting nine of 18 shots. Fisher shot 35 per cent from the field by sinking 13 of 37 tries and shot 43 per cent from the free throw line by cashing in on three of seven chances.

Official Proceedings
Board of County Commissioners
Pennington County, Minnesota
November 13, 1981

Pursuant to adjournment, the Pennington County Board met in the Commissioner's Room in the Courthouse in Thief River Falls at 10:00 a.m., November 13, 1981.

Members present: Hoffman, Koop, Grabanski, Stenberg and Tasa. All present.

Minutes from the meetings held on October 5, October 13 and October 27 were read and approved.

Chris Twomey was in to talk with the Board about Agassiz Health Board appointment. Upon motion by Commissioner Hoffman, seconded by Commissioner Koop, the Board appointed Chris Twomey to Agassiz Health Board. Motion carried.

Morris Oen and Liz Bergman were in to talk about the Tri-Valley Bus. The County's share of the new mini-busses would be $695.60. The City of Thief River Falls will pick up the other 60 per cent. Commissioner Stenberg introduced the following resolution:

BE IT RESOLVED, That the Pennington County Board of Commissioners assist the Tri-Valley Opportunity Council, Inc. in the purchase of two mini-busses to the extent of 40 per cent of the total cost contingent upon the City of Thief River Falls assuming the remaining 60 per cent.

The foregoing resolution was seconded by Commissioner Hoffman and upon call of vote, was declared unanimously approved.

Morris Oen gave a brief summary of the bus usage for the County.

Discussion was held on John Hustad's concerns of Ray Mosbeck's insurance coverage. The Commissioners instructed the Auditor to send a letter of clarification to Mr. Hustad.

The section of ditch lying along State Aid Road No. 2 has been cleaned by Turtle without previous permission of the Board or approval of the neighbors. Turtle was of the belief that as long as the work was done off his own land it was permissible if only his land was adjacent to the ditch. He was informed by the Board that this was not the case and that no further work was to be done until redetermination of benefits was made. Upon motion by Commissioner Tasa and seconded by Hoffman, the Board ordered the suspended petition for redetermination of benefits to be reactivated. Motion carried.

Records See New Year's 'As Old As The Hills'

by Kathryn Lindeman
Smithsonian News Service

As you're quaffing your last toast to the New Year, beating on a noisemaker or pondering that final, most important resolution, you might well ask yourself, "What's all the fuss about?"

Well, be reassured; generations before you have made the same to-do. . . and then some.

As a Druid in old England, you would have gathered mistletoe from sacred trees to give as New Year's gifts.

Or you might have gone "first footing" in Scotland. After a midnight church service, Scottish homes were open to visitors, and it was said that a family's luck for the year would depend on who first crossed the threshold.

You would have been heartily welcomed as a first visitor that night if you were a dark-haired man. On the other hand, if you were a woman, a redhead, a beggar or a person with a squint, your foot first in the door would portend bad luck. Homeowners even got in the habit of paying dark-haired men to be there early.

A Russian custom would have required that you beat the corners of your house with sticks to drive out Satan around the new year. You could try that today if you can ignore the gape-mouthed stares of your neighbors.

How about "wassailing" your apple tree, as British farmers were wont to do, by sprinkling it with cider and singing a song for a good crop in the coming year? Just tell the quickly gathering crowd that it's an old family custom.

If you were a king in ancient Babylon, you would have been stripped of your royal robe, made to kneel and then solomnly boxed on the ears and tweaked on the nose by the high priest as part of the official New Year's festival.

At a New Year's Eve party in Derbyshire, England, you might have fished for a ring in a "posset" pot. To foretell who would marry during the following year, the hostess dropped her wedding ring into the pot of hot spiced milk and wine, and the singles tried to pick up the ring with each ladleful of the beverage. If a guest succeeded, it was a sure omen that he would wed that year.

Gift giving, visiting friends, driving out evil and foretelling events of the coming year are but a few New Year's customs that have been carried on through the ages. New Year's is one holiday that just about everyone around the world, Westerners and Easterners, celebrate in some fashion on some set date, says Shirley Cherkasky, who has researched holiday celebrations for the Smithsonian's division of performing arts.

New Year's is "as old as the hills," too. Recorded history shows that for more than 5,000 years people have had some way of recognizing the beginning of a new year. In support of the time-honored concept of annual rebirth or renewal, rituals and celebrations have been the order of the day.

The day, however, has not always been observed on the first of January by many of the world's nations.' In fact, the new year has been launched on Christmas, Easter, the autumnal equinox, the winter solstice and March 25 (around the time of the vernal equinox). March 25 seems to have been one of the most often celebrated dates because it was the time for sowing crops, the first step in the annual agricultural cycle.

Romans apparently were the first, in 153 B.C., to mark January 1 as the beginning of the year. That was just one part of their numerous calendar reforms aimed at making man's schedule agree with nature's cycles. But it wasn't until the Gregorian calendar, the same one we use today, was instituted by Peope Gregory in 1582 that January 1 began to gain wide acceptance. The day's promimity to the winter solstice, when the days begin to lengthen, made it a logical beginning.

All the haggling over the time of celebration, however, didn't make the need or reason for New Year's events any less significant.

Rites for New Year's have longhelped people make it through the coming year in the best possible way — whether it was winning out over evil, producing a good crop or avoiding a death in the family.

Scholars have tried to pinpoint the common elements of early New Year's celebrations around the world and they've determined that the things we do today to celebrate actually seem to have started in the past.

It has been suggested that the excessive drinking associated with some New Year's Eve parties is a relic of the deliberate disruption and chaos practiced by primitive peoples at the end of each year. If things weren't topsy-turvy, how could they make a fresh start with the beginning of the new year?

Today's New Year's Day football contests on the playing field could very well be a modern-day remnant of another ancient practice — that of cleansing or purifying through sacrifice, confession or ritual combat between good and evil.

Cleansing gave one a chance for a brand new start. Spring housecleaning appears to be a relic of purification, which used to take place before the beginning of the year.

The din and racket we now think we're making just for fun and celebration — the blowing of party horns, the tooting of car horns, the ringing of bells, the banging of pots and pans and, in some places, the firing of guns — was originally meant to scare away low and evil spirits.

Making a good start in the new year by resolving to change something or "turning over a new leaf" has been part of New Year's plans for ages. Watching today's New Year's resolutions fall by the wayside as the year progresses doesn't mean it was all for naught.

And to the Babylonians, the public humiliation and subsequent reinstatement of the king meant a new beginning for him, even if it did reduce him to having his nose tweaked and his ears boxed.

The culmination of the festivities, it is thought, was the celebration of new birth with feasts and the restoration of order. Even the ancient Greeks carried a baby around in a basket as a symbol of the new year long before we ever thought of parading a young one with the year printed on his diaper.

So, this New Year's Eve, as the gray, decrepit man representing the old year staggers out your door and the bright-eyed baby, the new year, bounces in, take a moment to reflect. As you stare into the punch bowl and review the past 365 days, look to the future, too. In a thousand years, others might be staring into a punch bowl, wondering how people celebrated a new year in the 1980s.
